

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Glass eyes for horses are now made with such perfection that the animals themselves cannot see through the deception.

The most astonishing instance of a man's regard for his word was recently given by a man who had killed his wife, whom he did not like. When asked why he did not leave her instead of killing her, he replied, that on their wedding day he had promised not to leave her till death should part them, and that he was not the man to break his word.

"Mr Smith, you said that you once officiated in the pulpit,—did you mean by that, that you preached?" "No, sir; I held the light for the man who did preach." "Ah, the court understood you differently. They supposed that discourse came directly from you." "No, sir; I only threw a little light on it."

"Do you believe in forerunners?" asked a nervous old lady of Deacon I—. "Yes, ma'am," replied the deacon; "I've seen them. 'Bless me!' exclaimed the lady, 'do tell!' 'Yes,' continued the deacon, fixing his eyes on a dark corner of the room, 'I see one now!' 'mercy! mercy on me!' shrieked the lady, 'where?' 'There!' said the deacon, pointing to where his eyes were directed. 'That cat, ma'am, may be called a forerunner, for she runs on all fours.'"

Making bad worse. A rustic youngster being asked out to tea by a friend, was admonished to praise the eatables. Presently the butter was passed to him, when he remarked, "Very good butter; what there is of it," and observing a smile, he added, "and plenty of it,—such as it is."

Young Mr. Preston Powers, the son of Hiram Powers, was a sculptor from baby-hood. He used to play about his father's studio and dabble in the clay. He modeled small figures, and one day made a Madonna. For this a man paid his father a dollar, and the small artist had it for pocket money. Young Mr. Powers is now engaged on a figure of "Maud Muller."

FREDERICK BROWN'S GINGER

WORDS OF WELCOME AND OTHER WORDS.

"Order! Order! Order! Order! Chair! Chair! Chair!" is the noisy chorus of an old song. Whoever may have heard the song is forcibly reminded of it, when a topic for discussion is started in almost any company of more than three persons. Two can get along with only moderate contradiction, but three, according to old-fashioned Dogberry-law, "make a row"—with the o short. Often it is the case that the matter in dispute is not clearly understood, as for instance when one man made an assertion that a certain quotation was from the Odyssey, and a bystander somewhat superciliously, corrected him, affirming that the lines in question were from the works of Homer. It must be a trying position to act as Chairman of a deliberative assembly, but the presiding officer has this advantage that there are "rules of order." On the other hand, however, it is found that the very rules are the source of the most heated discussion. When an honorable gentleman "rises to a point of order," disorder is imminent.

The reader may naturally infer that these remarks were suggested by the protracted and excited sessions of the Senate of the United States, and the Legislature of the peaceful State of William Penn. But he must not imagine that the editors of the JOURNAL have read the "proceedings." Their short experience has taught them, that, to be successful, it is necessary to go with the majority. A great many enumerators were required to take the recent census, but a very few could count the readers of the Washington and Harrisburg speeches. And "We" are not among them. It seems a great waste of time on the part of the politicians, but they may as well waste their time in one way as another. The world moves, and the seasons change all the same. Nature looses no time that she does not make up. Riverton residents are delighted at the sudden outburst of foliage after Winter's long delay. It is one of the sweetest spots in the world, this Riverton, and our summer guests who are as yet only dreaming of its comforts and beauties, will do well to verify their dreams as soon as possible. Every day's delay is a pleasure deferred.

But we are wandering away from the subject, and it is a characteristic of Riverton that it makes one forget unpleasant things. The question before the House is, whether loudness of voices, and positiveness of tone, and confidence of assertion add weight to an argument—if there be any argument.—The JOURNAL, in the Chair, or rather on the Tripod, decides the questions above rehearsed, in the negative. In the pleasant summer evenings which are before us, and in the many pleasant and friendly contests which are the life and recreation of the season, Riverton will maintain no doubt its character as a place where conversation is fluent, but disturbances are unknown, even if the young folks and some of the older too, are ready to "speak out in meetings." The old proverb is, "many men, many minds," and the indications are that there will be a larger summer population here than during any previous year. Of course that pleases everybody, the editors of the JOURNAL included. If the new comers wish to know where the office of the paper is, we can answer that the four branch offices are where the Western Post Master kept his, according to Judge Hall, in their hats.

BOOKS.

The discovery of the art of printing, and from that the general circulation of printed matter, has probably done more toward the civilization of the world than any other agent.

It is generally conceded that printing (at least from movable type) was discovered by John Gutenberg, about the middle of the fifteenth century, although the Chinese, according to their chronology, place it about the year 1120 before Christ.

Wood engraving, the sister art of printing, and one which contributes so largely in producing the modern book, was of somewhat earlier origin, dating about the year 1384-5; at least, the earliest specimen of this art is supposed to have been executed in the course of these two years.

Before the application of printing to their production, all books were in manuscript, and long and tedious was the operation of duplicating copies. Still, notwithstanding all these obstacles, libraries, both public and private, were formed and maintained from the earliest days, and no inconsiderable number of men found profitable employment in reproducing manuscript copies of the more valuable works.

In 1392, the book selling corporation of Paris consisted of twenty-four copyists, seventeen bookbinders, nineteen parchment makers, thirteen illuminators, and eight simple dealers in manuscripts; but, at the time when printing was introduced, upwards of six thousand people are said to have subsisted by the same means—a fact that, even if exaggerated, says something for the gradual advancement of learning.

There seems to have always been a feeling against the popularization of knowledge and the spread of education—a feeling not quite dead yet—and though the battle was from the first a hard one, it has been, from first to last, a winning strife.

The most ancient library on record was formed by Osymandias, King of Egypt, at Memphis. He was a contemporary of David, King of Israel. At a very early date the Jews attached a collection of books to most of their synagogues, and we are told that Nehemiah founded a public library at Jerusalem. The first National library founded in Egypt seemed to have been placed under the protection of the Divinities, for their statues magnificently adorn the temple dedicated at once to religion and literature.

Pisistratus, of Athens, was the first who instituted a public library in Greece, and is supposed to have been the collector of the scattered works which passed under the name of Homer. Aristotle was the first person recorded as possessing a private library.

Before the Christian Era, Athens

held the enviable position as the centre of learning, but shortly after the death of Alexander (B. C. 323) the love of science and literature passed from Athens and Greece generally to Alexandria, where, patronized by the Ptolemies, they flourished vigorously, and for a considerable period seemed to have concentrated themselves.

From the invention of printing the progress of book-making has been so rapid that it would be impossible to concisely trace it through its various stages to the present time; they have been and are written on all conceivable subjects and with as many degrees of merit. Watts says: "Books are a sort of dumb teacher; they cannot answer sudden questions or explain present doubts; this is properly the work of a living instructor." The advice of Lord Bacon, even though given in the middle of the sixteenth century, is as wise now as then: "Some books are to be tasted, others to be chewed, and some few swallowed and digested."

PALMYRA.

The Cemetery here has been beautified by the planting of a number of ornamental trees. A few weeks ago the trustees of the M. E. Church decided to invite donations of memorial trees, and the present result is fourteen beautiful evergreens and four deciduous trees, all of which have been set out in the Cemetery. The tree that attracts the most attention is a beautiful English Yew, which bears the name of Rev. W. H. Jefferys, and was planted as a memorial of his services to the Church during his pastorate. This tree was provided for by contributions from his friends here. Rev. P. Y. Calder, a much esteemed supernumerary minister, who resides here, was not forgotten, and a tree was planted as a memorial of his devotion to the Church. All the other trees were given by persons whose name they bear. Judge Parry is entitled to thanks for his liberality in reducing the price of these trees, and also for replacing, without charge, the dead trees in the hedge and along the sidewalk.

The new Board of Trustees of the Church organized by electing William S. Zelle, President, E. H. Pancoast, Secretary, and Charles Wallace, Treasurer. John Springer, for many years President of the Board, retired from the position because of failing hearing. The Board has decided upon a much needed improvement, the frescoing of the Church. For some reason paper will not stick to the walls for any great length of time, and now the difficulty will be obviated by removing the paper and substituting paint. The work has already commenced, and will be finished in a short time.

A Watch needing no winding up is the latest production of European art. It runs itself by electricity. An electric magnet fixed inside the watch keeps the spring perpetually in a state of tension. The owner has but to preserve the battery in proper working order, for which purpose one or two inspections in a year are enough. It is the work of a Copenhagen watchmaker.

Notwithstanding some discouragements that we received when first our little sheet appeared in November last, and also the belief by many of our friends that the Journal could not live for half the year, we have succeeded in conducting it for six months and a half, to the general satisfaction of our subscribers, and at the end of this time, despite the heat, we still continue to publish it. As the season advances Riverton will become more active, and consequently news will be plentiful.

Our local column has never been neglected. We have endeavored to keep all objectionable matter from it, as well as from all other parts of the paper, and to fill it almost entirely with Riverton news. The other columns, as is seen, are devoted to original pieces, selections, contributions and advertisements. We were once asked what our paper contained, and of what use it was to advertisers, which questions were promptly and truthfully answered not many issues ago.

Some of our subscribers began to get very much worried when they saw new advertisements appearing in each number; they were afraid that we were going to make the Journal wholly an advertising medium, and not give them enough reading matter. At the beginning of our career we were resolved not to devote more than one-half to advertising purposes, and since we have not encroached in any way upon our original intention. From the start the number of advertisements began to increase, and last issue we were obliged to put a damper on receiving any additional ones. We then contemplated issuing a double sheet, but on consideration, decided that such a step would, for several reasons, be inexpedient.

The general favor with which the Journal has met gratifies us exceedingly. Our circulation is upwards of three hundred, the majority of which are distributed in Riverton and Philadelphia. Our printing is done by contract, and its nicety of execution has been the cause of much comment. There is one thing that pleases us particularly, and that is that we owe no man anything. On the whole we feel quite encouraged, and have to thank those whose interest in our success has enabled us to bring the Journal to its present solid financial standing.

Subscribers and advertisers who have not settled their accounts with us, will be kind enough to do so as soon as possible. Those who have not received bills will please notify us to that effect.

Back numbers of the Journal can be furnished to those wishing to subscribe. When subscriptions are taken, they are considered as having begun with the November issue, 1880, and will expire October 15th, 1881.

Persons wishing to see Riverton in its fresh and springlike attire, should visit it now; there is no season in the year when it shows to better advantage.

A trip to this beautiful spot would repay any one, and the most pleasant way to come is by water, as by so doing one gets the benefit of the delightful river air. The steamer Columbia, as will be seen per schedule, leaves Philadelphia, daily, at 2 P. M., and on the return trip, reaches there about 6.

OUR FIRST INTERVIEW.

Yes, he was aesthetic; there was no arguing that fact—you needed no lengthy conversation, no protracted interview, no careful study of the subject, to realize that, and yet he seemed disposed to grant us all three of these inestimable privileges.

There was an air of condescension about him as he entered our "Sanctum Sanctorum" (where the whole editorial staff was busy preparing matter for the current issue), and we all felt that for some unaccountable reason we owed him an apology.

We waited expectantly for him to announce his business, while, much to our consternation, our artist was busily sketching him.

We may here say (parenthetically) that as this was the first time we had been interviewed, we were rather at a loss how to conduct it. Our courtly editor stretched out his hand toward the electric bell to summon the colored waiter with refreshments, while our fighting editor arose, and calling on his patron the governor of Hades, demanded of the stranger his business.

We never realized the "poetry of motion" till we saw with what matchless grace he advanced and presented our indolent editor with card, the sole inscription being "The O'Grady." This certainly was intense; painfully, awfully, terribly, frightfully, aye, in fact, intensely intense (which we believe to be the aesthetic mode of expression).

Our humorous editor seemed to think him intensely amusing, but his sordid mind had no appreciation of the truly beautiful, and when the poor jester caught sight of name on the card, his amusement was, if possible, intensified.

Our fighting editor appeared intensely disgusted, and muttered to himself The O'Grady—the D—, the Deuce, would convey a more definite meaning, and would have the double advantage of name and credentials. Our courtly editor here quietly suggested that the gentleman might be a representative of the firm of which the last named individual was the head, and if so, it would be policy to treat him courteously, for the sake of his principal.

Our humorous editor assented at once to this, soberly remarking that he would be the last to wish to offend such an influential concern, and as he was not exactly prepared to balance his account to date, he should not like, by any indiscretion on his part, to subject himself to a "sight draft" for amount due.

Meanwhile our indolent editor had engaged "Mr. The" in conversation, and gradually ascertained the following facts: "The O" was consummately aesthetic and intensely realistic, desired the honor of contributing to a leading newspaper, and accidentally coming across a copy of the "Journal," chanced to see that our columns had been made the medium of conveying to the members of the Legislature intelligence on an important matter, and justly supposed our sheet to be the most influential one in the State, and as one in which his intellect would be appreciated.

Our indolent editor reports that he assured him of the entire correctness of his suppositions but that we could not entertain any proposition, as there was no part of our paper requiring brains to run except the Financial and the Wise and Otherwise.

LOCALS.

—Mr. John Earnshaw has sailed for England on business.

—Mr. Samuel C. Cook is making a great improvement in his property on Howard street. The old plank walk is being replaced by a fine gravel path, which will extend from Second to Fifth streets.

—Mr. Henry Bower is remodeling his stable. The cupola has been improved and the whole building newly weather-boarded and painted.

—Bicycle riding has begun again. The roads and pathways in Riverton are unsurpassed for this purpose.

—Arbutus was very plentiful this spring, and large numbers of persons have been going in search of it during the past three weeks. It is about done flowering now, and the next wild flower we may look for will be the magnolia, which grows in abundance in the swamps east of here.

—Messrs. L. H. Davis, J. R. Miller, Thomas Wiggins, C. L. Flanagan, Henry Bower and Samuel Clarkson have returned to Riverton.

—The streets of Riverton have been scraped and put into good condition generally.

—The alterations at the Brick House are progressing rapidly, though the house will not be ready for occupation for some time yet.

—The young people of Riverton have organized a system of sociables, to meet every two weeks during the summer. This a good commencement, and augurs well for a gay season.

—"The Strawberry Workers" gave their first reception on Tuesday evening, "Male" 17th. As the season advances we presume the name of this Association will be changed to Raspberries, Blackberries, Huckleberries, and lastly, Gooseberries, which it will remain until further notice.

—The second annual meeting of The Ladies Out Door Club of Riverton was held at the residence of Mr. Thos. Wiggins, on Saturday evening, 14th inst.

Owing to the absence of both the President and Secretary, officers to fill their places were elected pro tem.

The usual business of the meeting followed. It was reported that at present the number of members was fifty-one, twenty-six being active and twenty-five associate. The old officers were all re-elected with but one exception, and that was on account of a resignation tendered by one of the Executive Committee, which made it necessary to elect a new officer to fill the vacancy. Two new members were elected, namely, Dr. Robert White and Mr. W. J. Roberts. Tuesday next was decided upon for having the first field day.

Other matters of minor importance were disposed of, and after discussions on several important points, the meeting adjourned at 10 P. M.

THE RIVERTON BALL CLUB.

The New Club House and Grounds of the Riverton Ball Club have at last been completed and the Club is now ready and anxious to receive challenges from other Base Ball Clubs, the sod being scarcely firm enough yet for Cricket. The grounds will be formally opened on the 21st, with a match between the first nine and a nine picked from the other members of the Club.

Three new sets of Tennis have been provided for those who are fond of this excellent game. The following is a list of the games arranged for the next few weeks.

On Saturday, May 21st, Opening Day at Riverton. May 28th, Riverton B. B. C. vs. "Graefly" B. B. C., at Riverton. June 4th, Riverton vs. "Footie" B. B. C., at Riverton. June 11th, Riverton vs. "Atlantic" B. B. C., also at Riverton.

On Saturday May 14th, the Home Nine began the seasons work by an exciting game with the Penna. Military Academy Club, at Chester. The Rivertons were defeated by a score of 10 to 8 after playing 10 innings.

The nine is composed of the same members as last year, so previous experience leads us to expect to see some very fine playing done this season.

FINANCIAL.

The present Secretary of the Treasury has adopted a new mode of refunding, namely to extend maturing bonds at a lower rate of interest, the principal payable at the pleasure of the government, instead of issuing new loans. This plan seems to meet general approval. The holders of the 6 per cent bonds due July 1st, have almost unanimously notified the Treasury Department of their acceptance of the terms of extension, and those who have not done so would do well to have it done or to sell their bonds prior to May 20th, when the option expires. The remaining 5 per cents. have also been called, all of the coupon and the first $250,000,000, registered bonds presented, will be extended at 3½ per cent. The time for extension is limited to July 1st. We understand that one per cent. premium is now bid for the extended bonds. Money remains in over abundance. Several of our Trust and Safe Deposit Co's., refuse to take money at even two per cent. interest, and on Third street, 3 per cent. is the ruling rate. Call loans on satisfactory stock collateral rule at about 4 per cent.

Railroad corporations are taking advantage of this state of things to float large loans. Their general policy is extension and inflation. Great preparations are being made to meet anticipated increase of business, and should anything occur to interfere with their calculations, such as a failure of crops, or railroad strikes, we should find ourselves in the same position as we were in September, 1873. History repeats itself—Effect follows cause.

Emigration to this country from abroad continues in a steady stream, and as it is estimated that every emigrant brings about $200 in cash with him, the general wealth of the country is increased.

The stock market is active, and prices remain firm.

Nth. Pac. Pfd. stock has made a large advance in price during the past week. It is said that a dividend will shortly be paid upon it. It is poor policy to pay dividends upon uncompleted roads, as their earnings should be applied to construction.

On the 1st inst., the Penna. R. R. declared a semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent. and a privilege of 12½ per cent. subscription at par for the new stock that is to be issued. Holders, who by this allotment possess the right to obtain fractions of shares can subscribe for full shares. These allotments are selling at about fifteen dollars premium; that is, holders can sell their privilege to subscribe for $15 for each share.

MENTAL ARITHMETIC.

Pity the sorrows of the unsuspecting man who visits a public school and is asked by the malicious teacher to cross-examine the class. The other day a merchant was showing a customer from the rural districts over a city school, and the miserable man accepted an invitation to put a question to the class in mental arithmetic. Said he: "Suppose John spends $2 in buying apples, two for a cent, and gives James twenty-seven, Peter fourteen, and his teacher eleven, and finds that four are bad, and loses six, and gives each of his brothers and sisters three, how many brothers and sisters had John?" And in six and a quarter seconds the whole class screamed, "112½ Sir."

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND keeps pigs, but the Queen of England's pigs are on an equality in the eye of the law with any other woman's pigs. This has been proven in the Justice's Court at Slough. Slough happens to be in Buckinghamshire, and that county was not long ago proclaimed an "infected district" under the provisions of the act aimed at the cattle plague. The royal bailiff, ignorant of the fact, drove six royal pigs and one royal calf to the market at Slough, where the vigilant and fearless authorities, finding that the bailiff had no license, sent the animals to the pound and hauled the royal servant, before the local magistrates, by whom he was fined—with costs.

A NOVEL COMBAT was witnessed by a large crowd in Kerry Patch, St. Louis. A bantam game cock made a fierce attack upon a small bull-terrier which had approached close to a number of chickens that were feeding. At first the dog snarled and showed his teeth, but did not attempt to injure his impudent antagonist. The bantam would not be subdued by such a moderate manifestation of spirit. He flew upon the terrier's back, and sticking his spurs in the hair to obtain a foothold, apparently, tried to put out the dog's eyes. Terrier then attempted to snap off bantam's head, but the latter was too quick. After inflicting some slight wounds bantam flew a short distance and crowded shrilly. Then he darted back again and met terrier half way. The terrier was agile and fighting hard, but was never able to get a bite of his opponent. He made a snap every five or six seconds, but the wily rooster always escaped injury. The fight lasted some five minutes, and only once did bantam's life appear to be in imminent danger. Bantam lost some of his feathers in the fight. Terrier lost one eye and considerable blood.

A Mr. RAPP, of Ontario street, Toronto, is the owner of a one-legged canary which sings both in the light and dark. It was not hatched a cripple, but after it had one of its legs broken the limb was amputated and it was laid out to die. But it wouldn't succumb, and is now as lively as ever.
