PALMYRA NEWS

—Mrs. M. L. S. Butterworth, secretary of the National New Thought Alliance for New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, will deliver a New Thought lecture entitled "The Science of Being" at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Becker, 731 Morgan avenue, Palmyra, on Thursday evening, March 14, at 8 o'clock. All are cordially invited to be present.

—Prof. A. S. Griffith reports that the work of the Junior Red Cross is progressing rapidly and that many articles have so far been distributed through various channels to our "Sammees."

—Prof. S. G. Neill, before an audience that filled every available seat in Central Baptist Church on Monday evening, delivered his famous lecture on "An Evening in Scotland." During the course of his lecture and the various Scotch songs that he sang, he would illustrate them with stereopticon views which seemed to bring Scotland right home. This lecture was given under the auspices of the Kappa Sigma Pi of the church.

—The War Saving Stamps have been sold quite lively during the past week, $871.25 being the total. This makes a grand total of sales to date of $2,349.75.

—Thirty-seven members of the Philathea Class attended their regular business meeting and thimble party which was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edward King, of Highland avenue. This is a remarkable showing for a class of this size and designated the pres ce of the right enthusiasm among its members.

—Several new members were taken in at the drill on Tuesday evening by the Home Guards. Owing to the absence of Captain Frishmuth, Lieutenant McMahon and Sergeants Wanger and Donnelly were in charge. Now that the weather is breaking, it is hoped that the members will turn out in full force as new tactics will be presented and your absence may mean will retard the training of ...

... will spend Sunday at C... where she will visit her s... Howard.

—The Thilow Baraca Class held their regular monthly business meeting in the church on Tuesday evening. It was an exceptionally interesting one, following which a social ensued and a light lunch was served. Having provided for a larger attendance than the number present, the class invited as their guests to share in their refreshments the Kappa Sigma Pi, who were also holding a meeting at that time. The class will make a drive for a larger attendance and new members and have planned a campaign to be participated in by every member. An equal division has been made in the membership which will comprise two teams. They will compete to obtain new members and as well to see that the old members attend. The team having the greatest number of points to their credit will be the guests of the losing team at a dinner.

—Mr. and Mrs. Durell T. Mason attended the golden wedding anniversary of his uncle, which was also the occasion of the silver wedding anniversary of his cousin in Trenton on Saturday.

—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leonard Lewis have announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Mervine, to Mr. W. Paul Van Sant, son of Rev. and Mrs. S. Monroe Van Sant. Mr. Van Sant has been with the Naval Coast Reserves since April last.

—Mrs. Jessie Tryon returned to the home of her sister, Mrs. Walton Taylor, to-day, after having spent a week with her parents in Columbus, N. J.

—Miss Evelyn Harbourne was the week-end guest of her aunt, Mrs. Annie Farr, of West Philadelphia.

—Rev. and Mrs. S. M. Van Sant was tendered a farewell dinner in the Epworth M. E. Temple on Thursday evening by the Calder Bible Class, of which Mrs. Van Sant is the teacher. Mrs. Van Sant was the recipient of many handsome pieces of table linen as a token of appreciation from the members of the class.

—Miss Elizabeth Lewis passed Sunday and Monday as the house guest of Miss Virginia Simons, of West Philadelphia.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Greenwalt motored to Christiana, Del., on Wednesday, where they spent the day with his sister.

—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rush, of Horace avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Grace Hannah Rush, to Mr. Clinton Gibbon, formerly of Riverton, who now resides in Philadelphia.

300 Boosts Already Subscribed for Red Cross

Campaign Begins To-day for the "Boost" Drive

Several of the members of the Red Cross, taking time by the forelock, started out last week on a canvass for Red Cross "boosts," and up to the opening of the drive, which began to-day, have obtained 300 subscriptions.

This is a very good beginning and it is hoped that it will continue.

Palmyra evidently realized the vital importance of not only the continuance of the Red Cross work, but also that it is essential that the work be increased from week to week.

This can only be accomplished by one method and that of co-operation and financial aid.

Therefore when you are approached during the next week by the members of the Palmyra Branch of the Red Cross, subscribe to the limit and do it without a murmer.

It is not with a selfish motive that these workers are collecting these "boosts," but to aid you and your fellowman to enjoy continued democracy.

The Red Cross have divided the town in several sections and appointed a committee for each. They will at once start canvassing.

CORRECTION

Dear Mr. Seel:

In your issue of February 15 it was stated that the minstrel show given by the ladies of the Masonic Auxiliary was under my direction. Mrs. William Rudy, Mrs. Alex. Barrie and Miss Elizabeth Barrie were the directors of show, and to them should be given credit for its success. I merely served as interlocutor.

Absence from home last week prevented by rectifying error. Thanking you,

Sincerely,
MARGARET M. WILLIAMS.

"SAMMEE" APPRECIATES COMFORT KIT

The following letter only serves to demonstrate how much our "Sammees" appreciate your gifts. This was received by Mrs. John Hoff this week. It has not only made the receiver happy, but the giver feels most gratified.

Somewhere in France,
December 27, 1917.

Mrs. John Hoff, Palmyra.

Dear Friend—I know that you think that your nice comfort kit was not appreciated, but quite to the contrary, as I thought you would like a letter from "Over There."

I do not think the contents of your kit could be improved upon, the articles being most useful and sensible. I am finding use for all of them. Thanking you again, I remain,

PRIVATE JOS. L. WHITEHEAD.

W. C. T. U.

Next Tuesday will be the regular business meeting; every lady welcome.

There was quite a good attendance at Mrs. Peterson's evangelistic service.

Bishop Berry thinks the time of Local Option is past; that was good enough for yesterday, but not for to-day. Of course he was speaking for the Prohibition amendment in Pennsylvania. It is a State-wide movement of sober citizens to free the Commonwealth from a reproach which has been carried for years, namely, that of being ruled by politicians who are ruled by rum. Tens of thousands of voters who never go near a church are ready to join the colors. The battle lines are forming throughout the State. The avalanche cannot be held back. He who stands in its way will go down.

Are You A Booster?

Red Cross looks after the comforts of the soldiers and sailors on the battlefield, in the hospitals and camps. Palmyra Branch realizes its task is not easy; never have the people been more ready and felt that sense of united responsibility and duty to the masses, a feeling inspired by an American heart and soul. It is an important business Red Cross is engaged in. Their success must come from the people. Red Cross is important to the government, which is of the people, for the people, by the people. Every man and woman, every boy and girl can help the United States of America through Palmyra Branch, which needs your help.

Join the Boosters.

This is Booster Week

We cannot all be in the trenches, but we can volunteer and enlist in Red Cross Booster Corps and help the men in the trenches. Palymra Boosters should muster 2000 at roll call.

The American Red Cross has been granted a license by the "War Trade Board" to "trade with the enemy." The privilege of sending letters, food and money to American prisoners of war in Germany has been granted exclusively to the Red Cross of the German government. Germany demands a return for this privilege and will act as the medium through which German fathers and mothers can send a word from home or remembrance to sons confined in American prison camps, and to a minor extent to her prisoners in French and British camps. In war times Red Cross is the only organization that can conduct what is really the single international postoffice and cable office ... of w... and the American dead, wo... and missing.

Everybody should be a Booster.

A sailor lad from the League Island Navy Yard entertained at the home of Mrs. William F. Letford, now in France, writes: "My trip to France was very adventurous. France is a beautiful country; buildings very antique, the people are very affectionate and naive loving; this is their most characteristic trait. Study the life and work of France, look at the construction of her most noted buildings, the suffering of her widows and orphans, and you have arrived at the greatest lesson of your life. They are growing more American and English in their ideas. When you live through the present state of things, then you will want to live to see the realization of her ideals and the restoration of her former beauty. I could tell you lots more, but duty calls me."

This lad will be glad to learn that we are going to be Boosters in Palmyra.

There will be a meeting of the Red Cross Booster Committee in the Field Club rooms this Friday evening, March 1. Every member, please be present.

Mr. Jacob P. Warner is boosting the Boosters. Have you been boosted? Don't fail to try it. Get earnest about it. Beside helping you it can't fail to help others. To be a Booster is to be happy.

Sixty dollars was realized from the rummage sale last Saturday. Thanks.

Mrs. Charles Davison will give a 500 and pinochle party this Saturday evening in the Field Club rooms in aid of the Infants' Layettes. Subscription, twenty-five cents.

BOYS ENJOYING A "PUNCTURED ROMANCE" AT CAMP "DIX"

Nursing of "Beauty Marks" Keeps Them Busy

Yes, and well they will remember the kindness shown them by the river front towns.

Now they are experiencing what one would call "Sammee's Punctured Romance." Upon arriving at Camp Dix, which is under quarantine, the boys have been kept busy fixing their quarters and nursing pet arms which have received the vaccinating needle.

They will stay in camp two weeks before they will be allowed to leave, so it will undoubtedly be next week before they can return home.

Palmyra Boys Entertain

In the Field Club rooms on Friday evening last the Palmyra boys were entertained most hospitably.

Township Committeeman John Davies made an opening address in behalf of Palmyra, after which a musical and literary program furnished by Miss Carol J. Becker and Miss Jennie Weart was enjoyed.

Lieut. McMahon, of the local Home Guards, made a presentation in behalf of this organization and gave each man a half dozen silk khaki handkerchiefs.

The committee on arrangements, Maurice Schwartz, E. A. King, C. Morris Beck and T. W. Land, then presented the gifts to the men from the township, which included a fountain pen and boxes of stationery.

Mrs. J. C. Hoepfner, representing the Palmyra Branch, presented the boys with ear protectors.

Refreshments and smokes were then served.

Riverton Boys Get Gifts

Riverton previous to ... first batch of ... which are most essential in camp life. The presentations were made by the committee, Robert Knight, William N. Mattis and Harry C. Davis.

Automobiles Take Boys to Beverly

On Saturday, headed by Irons' Band from Burlington, the Riverton and Palmyra boys were escorted by automobile to Beverly, where formal exercises were held.

Here the forty-nine boys who were to leave received sweaters from Red Cross presented through the Beverly branch; ear protectors from Palmyra Branch Red Cross; tobacco and cigarettes from Rev. Showell, Charles Wright, Walter Wright and Whitney Frishmuth, of Riverton; pipes from Palmyra, and boxes of "Camp Dix" stationery from the "Record."

Last, but not least, the Beverly Red Cross then dined them in the high school building. The meal without an exception was the best to be obtained and Hoover did not have a "look-in."

During the courses the Beverly Accordeon Band furnished music, and John Spooner, Beverly's young operatic star, afforded the boys much merriment. At 12.12 the boys departed for camp.

The Palmyra committee on entertaining the boys to leave for camp at various times reports that $68 was received as donations. Of this $60 was spent last Saturday, leaving net $8. To several of the local boys who left this week gifts were given and now the committee is without funds. They therefore ask the quick response to their call, as this work requires but a small amount of money value but is one that is most highly appreciated. Boys will be sent to camp at various times soon and they don't want them to leave without the usual gift from their home town.

At a special meeting of the Township Committee held on Tuesday evening, the 26th ult., the accounts of Collector Rudduck and Treasurer Beckenbach were audited for the year 1917, found correct and accordingly certified to.

The annual report of the township was ordered printed in pamphlet form and will be distributed in due course. The report will show unusual activities by the committee during the year 1917, as well as a substantial balance on hand January 1, 1918.

The ordinance regulating vendors and prohibiting unnecessary noises and littering streets with rubbish passed third and final reading. It now becomes a law and will be enforced by the police.

At the request of the committee, the solicitor rendered several written opinions. One concerned certain property to be taken over by the town for delinquent taxes. This will have attention in the fall of 1918. Another concerned the expediency in rendering legal opinions by the solicitor in writing only as a matter of proper record and interpretation. Still another concerning the remittance of charges made against certain property holders, including that of Mr. Wallace Balcom on the Wallace street cement pavement improvements, as it related to removal of trees. The solicitor advised that such remittance would be legal on the part of the Township Committee and that the process should be by resolution. The opinion again opened up the whole subject and Mr. Hill made a motion that such a resolution should be drafted by the solicitor with the view of ... taking action ... such ... Chairman Davies objected on the ground that it would be establishing a precedent and the town would be obliged to assume the cost. Mr. Hill contended that neither the precedent nor cost entered into this particular matter, as it was only this question of equity when the cost would fall where it rightly belonged. He further contended that the adopted specifications and original town ordinance upon which the secondary ordinance was built, made no reference to the removal of trees or any other contingencies, but on the other hand, was confined specifically to the laying of pavements and the assessing of the cost of same to the various property owners affected. After considerable debate, the moton to draft the resoluton was lost. Mr. Hill voting for and Messrs. Davies and Cook against it.

Authorization was granted for the installation of a more substantial electric cable for the traffic lights on Broad street. The former cable broke down through water entering the conduit by the way of the surface boxes

HIS MOTHER'S IMAGE

"Dear Sir,—Please eskcoose little Tommy for his absens yestiday as he was kwite il, and the doctor tolled me to kepe him in bed. So I let him stay home — Yours resptively, Misses Smith."

The master was a trifle suspicious

"Tommy," said he, sternly, "who wrote that note?"

"My—er—mother did, if you please, sir."

"Well, I must say that some of that spelling is remarkably like the spelling you generally give me."

"Yes, sir," said he, cheerily. "Everyone says that, as far as spelling is concerned, I'm the image of my mothers."

"Now," said the colonel, looking along the line of recruits, "I want a good, smart bugler."

At that, says London Opinion, out stepped a dilapidated fellow who had a thick stubble of black beard.

"What!" said the colonel, eying him up and down. "Are you a bugler?"

"Oh, bugler!" said he. "I thought you said burglar."

ARMY MEN TO GO TO CAMP WEDNESDAY

Men Will Th... C...

The last six per cent. of the army quota will go to a Southern camp on Wednesday next instead of Monday as was expected and which was published last week.

While seven from the Second district will be called to appear at 9 o'clock at Beverly on Wednesday, only five will be sent to camp. This was necessary owing to several appeals having been made to the District Board and which have not been acted upon nor the local board notified as to the disposition made of them.

The seven men include four from Riverside, one from Moorestown and two from Palmyra. The local boys are William J. Ellis and Joseph Cugliotta.

There have been fourteen men who have accepted the privilege of giving themselves up at this time in order that they may be sent to "Dix," from this district.

J. Gordon Hemple left on Monday for Camp Dix, he having been included in the second draft.

Inasmuch as the last of the first drafted army will not leave until Wednesday, the privilege of going to Camp Dix will be good until that time.

Examinations have been made daily by the Local Board of Class 1-A men. The last man to be examined represented order No. 1447.

Immediately following Wednesday, calls will be made weekly for the second National Army.

WE CANNOT ALL KILL AN ENEMY BUT CAN FEED THOSE WHO FIGHT FOR US

Every day in the week is "less" something. The schedule announced by the Federal Food Administration that is being followed in the home of every patriot is:

Monday—Wheatless all day. One meal meatless.

Tuesday—Meatless all day. One meal wheatless.

Wednesday—Wheatless all day. One meal meatless.

Thursday—One meal meatless. One meal wheatless.

Saturday—Porkless all day. One meal wheatless.

Sunday—One meal meatless. One meal wheatless.

It is easy to laugh when the joke goes round
At the cost of some other fellow—
When we are the ones who are hit the sound

By an order from the Ship Control Committee no vessel of less than 2,500 tons dead weight will be permitted to clear for a transatlantic voyage. The steamships that will be excluded by this order will be diverted to the coastwise or West Indies trades or "other suitable service."

Double profits on foodstuffs with a resultant price advance to the consumer, caused by the practice of wholesalers in selling to each other to make up depreciated stocks, were condemned in a statement issued by the food administration.

GENERAL

Immediate abandonment of the teaching of German in South Dakota was ordered by the State Council of Defense.

The Hog Island shipyard, Philadelphia, long closely guarded from the public and recently subjected to criticism for extravagance and mismanagement, was thrown open for inspection by those attending a flag raising ceremony. It was revealed as a great industrial city, with 50 shipways, 12 completed, miles of railroad tracks, shops, storehouses, power plants, cranes, hospitals, barracks, restaurants, schools, a police force and a fire department.

The senate passed the administration railroad bill, the only important change being to place under federal control all independent short lines, valued at $1,000,000,000. Leaders hope to place the bill in the President's hands within ten days.

Secretary Daniels, in a meeting of trade unions men in New York that the ...ssen's greatest disappointment was the failure of his propaganda to cause a social revolution here, and he declared labor's loyalty to the cause of democracy was responsible.

An order to investigate the fish prices in Boston was issued.

W. L. Hutchison, president of the International Carpenters and Joiners, says the ship carpenters do not demand the closed shop where the government is the employer, but they reserve the right where a profiteer intervenes between the government and the carpenters.

Secretary Baker announced that he would deal promptly with those who abuse the new law allowing soldiers to drink in the homes of bona fide guests.

Director General McAdoo declares for the "open shop" in railroad operation and issues a patriotic appeal to all employees for the best service possible.

Six men are seized on suspicion at a mysterious fire which seriously damages the new cargo steamship K. I. Luckenbach while moored to a pier in Hoboken, N. J.

Determined to relieve immediately the anxiety of England, France and Italy over America's failure to deliver the food expected to date, Director General McAdoo assembled 431 cars of provisions at Chicago, which were made up into trains and started eastward as rapidly as locomotives could be obtained.

The need for engines is imperative. That is the principal reason for the expected curtailment of passenger traffic by increasing some passenger fares.

German-American War

Clothing supplies sufficient to care for an army of 7,000,000 men have been purchased by the government, although the war department has figured only on 5,395,000 men.

The great American war equipment machine is swinging toward high tide of production, as is revealed by the output of 250,000 modified Enfield rifles a month, a number sufficient to arm 14 divisions, and the manufacture of ammunition is keeping pace, so the big question now is to obtain storage facilities.

Secretary of War Baker denies that German aeroplanes are passing over American lines unchallenged and that American air defenses, therefore, are deficient.

Eleven men were indicted in New York on charges of embezzlement, receiving stolen property, perjury and conspiracy in connection with the investigation which has revealed that the government has been defrauded of $5,000,000 in a widespread uniform profiteering plot.

The Fire Committee of the Roselle Park borough council will consult the apartments in East Orange. He was born in Wilmington, Del., 69 years ago and formerly was connected with the Philadelphia offices of the Fairbanks Company.

By a vote of 4 to 3 Daniel H. Rumford was elected overseer of the poor by the Woodbury city council, his opponent being Mrs. Albegi H. Dell. The latter had the support of the Visiting Nurse Association and Mothers' Club, whose members believed the poor fund could be better dispensed by a woman.

After a tie-up since December 29 owing to the abnormal weather, which covered the Maurice river with 15 inches of ice, the fleet of 300 oyster boats which have been frozen in at Bivalve and Maurice river reached the beds in the cove and have been steadily dredging to gather a big harvest to relieve the oyster famine. It is estimated that the catch during the first two days after the resumption of the industry was sufficient to fill 25 freight cars.

Farm labor, which promises to be at a premium throughout New Jersey a few weeks hence, is now plentiful, and its immediate employment is strongly urged by the department of conservation and development as a means of meeting a situation which in all probability will soon become acute.

Governor Edge was initiated into the mysteries of Shrinedom at a ceremonial session of Crescent Temple held at Trenton. Shriners from all sections of the state were present. Initiation of the governor was witnessed by a large number of state officials, who are members of the order.

Despite the fact that the Neptune township authorities have refused to ... the advice of their counsel to assume police jurisdiction in Ocean Grove, the Camp Meeting Association will not alter its determination to drop the members of the police force after March 1, according to Frank B. The recently organized Pompton Lakes Home Rule League at a meeting in Durling's hall started out several members with petitions requesting a special election in May for a vote on local option. An effort will be made to interest surrounding communities in holding an election at the same time. No date for the election is set in the petition. There are six licensed bars and one wholesale store in the borough.

Officers elected by the New Jersey Library Association at its convention in Atlantic City were announced as follows: President, Miss Edna B. Pratt of Passaic; vice presidents, Miss Julia Schneider of South Orange and Mrs. Charles M. Lum of Chatham; secretary, Miss Irene Hackett of Englewood, and treasurer, Miss Mary G. Parsons of Morristown.

From present indications the Twin County Baseball League will be in operation again this year in spite of the fact that the national army has taken a number of the players of the teams in the league. Meetings of the Pompton Lakes and Haskell teams have been held and an inventory of the available material taken.

Fuel requirements for Newark are greatly lessened, due to increased size of shipments and the reduction of freight congestion on coal roads supplying this market. Wholesale dealers reported that retail dealers were having little difficulty in getting supplies each day at the various pockets.

With shortages and higher prices existing in almost every other class of foods, potatoes continue plentiful, and the state department of agriculture's Bureau of Markets notes a decline in price. The bureau urges potato planting as one of the most satisfactory substitutes for wheat.

RED CROSS LINER FLORIZEL LOST

BLIZZARD PREVENTS RESCUE.

Rescuers, Unable to Offer Aid, Watch Sturdy Craft Pounded to Pieces on Rocks—Use of Lifeboats Impossible.

Halifax, N. S.—The hardy steamship Florizel of the Red Cross line pounded herself to pieces on rocks of the Newfoundland coast and with 140 persons aboard sank while watchers on shore and a fleet of rescue vessels only a short distance away stood ready to lend every assistance.

The Red Cross liner crashed on the rocks, only three or four ship lengths from shore. She was bound from St. John's, N. F., to New York via Halifax.

A short time later a number of steamers and warships were dispatched to her assistance, and a relief train was made up and sent on its way. Early in the evening a light in the forward part of the half submerged vessel afforded the hope that some lives could be saved, and everying was made in readiness for the shooting of rockets carrying life lines.

All during this time maddened seas, driven in the teeth of a raging blizzard, were breaking over the decks of the stranded vessel. Little by little her resistance—she was built especially for battling with the lashing weather of the Newfoundland coast—gave way, and, with rescuers on every side, but powerless with her entire complement, with the exception of five bodies, which previously had been washed away.

The use of lifeboats was impossible after the first hour of the disaster. Life savers stood idly but tensely by as they watched the destructive force of the sea. Once during the day five or six men appeared on deck and then disappeared as quickly as they came from below.

The stories of some of the eye-witnesses of the disaster tell of men and women clinging to the rigging gradually but inevitably being weakened to the point of surrendering their last grip for life.

The bodies washed up at intervals along the beaten coast were badly mangled by the pounding of the rocks.

In a terrific sea the Florizel had rounded Cape Race and was defiantly plowing her way northward on her route to Halifax, bucking a northwesterly gale, when the blinding snowstorm struck her. The ship hit the rocks with terrific force. Only one wireless call was sent out, and then the distress call of the sea ceased.

New York.—Capt. David A. Henkes of the Sixteenth United States Infantry has been sentenced by court martial to be dismissed from the service of the United States and to be confined at hard labor for 25 years for refusing to fight against the central powers.

Captain Henkes was with the American expeditionary force in France and had asked to be relieved from duty or assigned to other work because his forbears were Germans. He had many relatives and friends in Germany. His wife is an Austrian, and he felt he could not fight against either Germans or Austrians.

German Aviator a Deserter.

Geneva.—Official announcement was made that a German aviator who landed near Basel is a deserter. The government decided to intern the aviator and return the airplane to Germany.

One of Germany's demands to be presented to the Bolshevik government will be the surrender of the ex-Czarina and some other members of the former Russian ruler's family, who are relatives of the Kaiser.

BRITISH ENTER JERICHO

American Casualties Light Since Pershing's Men Have Been Fighting in Chemin-Des-Dames Sector.

London.—General Allenby has captured Jericho, in Palestine, the war office reports.

Australian mounted troops entered Jericho, establishing themselves on a line between Jericho and the Wadi Auja, a dispatch from Allenby declared. The Wadi Auja is a small tributary of the Jordan.

North and northwest of Jerusalem the British advanced positions were extended slightly and rendered secure. During the fighting Tuesday the casualties of the British troops engaged were slight.

In a patrol fight Americans from units under instruction in the famous Chemin-des-Dames sector killed one German and captured another. One American was slightly wounded.

This is the first time it has been permitted to report the fact that new American units have entered the line. The troops have been there for some time, getting their first experience, but their presence was kept secret until it was certain the enemy knew they were there.

The American casualties since the occupation of a segment of this continuous front under observatories have been light and even.

The American forces entered the line on one of the darkest nights through a shell pitted region dotted with shell wrecked towns. The French general commanding the sector, a hero of the Marne, greeted them as comrades in arms and kissed the American flag.

"Early in the night a large party of the enemy raided two of our posts in the neighborhood of the Vyres-Soissons railway, and a few of our men are missing," says the war office report. "On the remainder of the British front there is nothing special to report."

General Haig's forces have thus extended their holdings through taking over a considerable sector held by the French south of St. Quentin. Except for the French sector near the coast and the Belgian sector, the British now occupy the entire front from the coast to the Oise.

EDGE APPOINTS BAIRD SENATOR

Trenton, N. J.—Governor Edge announced that he has appointed David Baird to be United States senator from New Jersey to fill the vacancy created by the death of William Hughes of Paterson. Mr. Baird, who is seventy-eight, will serve until such time as the successor, who will be chosen at the next regular election in November for the unexpired term of Senator Hughes, assumes office.

SWOBODA ARRESTED AS SPY.

Identified in Switzerland as a German Officer.

Geneva.—Raymond Swoboda, who claimed American citizenship when arrested recently for espionage, being released subsequently on bail, was rearrested at Berne and brought to prison here. He is said to have been identified as a German officer. The number of Austrians and Germans arrested in Switzerland for espionage since the war began is now more than a hundred.

The KITCHEN CABINET

One of our students of diet tells us that one-third of the food taken into the body is used, the other two-thirds we eat at our peril.

MEATS TO EAT.

We have meats to eat and meats to ship these days. The ...ats to eat must be confined to those which will not ...nd which we need fear no hardship, for they offer a good variety. Sweetbreads, for instance, are as palatable as well as liver, kidneys, fish and fowl.

Fried Sweetbreads.—Parboil and remove all the unedible portions, and when cold, split in halves and cut in pieces the size of a large quarter, wipe dry and dip in beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs and fry in hot fat. Season well and serve with parsley as a garnish.

Larded Sweetbreads.—Trim two sweetbreads, parboil in water with a tablespoonful of vinegar added, then chill in cold water. Dry them and lard with fine strips of bacon. Put a slice of bacon in a saucepan, a chopped onion, a chopped carrot, spice and herbs, with salt, and a small quantity of stock. Cook down until the stock has all evaporated, then brown the sweetbreads and serve.

Baked Sweetbreads With Peas.—Trim two pairs of sweetbreads and parboil 15 minutes, lard them, dredge with seasoned flour, add stock or water to cover the bottom of the baking pan, and bake 30 minutes, basting often. When nearly done add a tablespoonful of flour to a tablespoonful of bubbling hot butter and stir well; add a cupful of highly seasoned stock or milk with seasonings, then a cupful of green peas drained from their liquor.

Sweetbread Salad.—Cooked sweetbreads finely minced and combined with peas, celery, a few chopped pickles and olives with a handful of nuts and a good salad dressing makes a most tasty and popular salad.

Sweetbreads cooked and served in a rich seasoned white sauce, served in timbale or patty shells make a luncheon dish suitable when entertaining. In many hotels sweetbreads are reasonable in price, but when too costly the delicate meat will have to be denied to those with flat pocketbooks.

Sweetbreads are rather tasteless, so need a highly seasoned sauce and a touch of garlic or onion.

SOME GOOD DISHES.

...just fit to, they are held together by one or two link buttons. In other models fronts are cut away like a man's dress coat leaving an expanse of handsome waist coat to entice the eye.

White cloth collars and cuffs, with collars lengthened into revers are another feature that add to the attractiveness of spring suits and they belong to an attractive class which includes suits with collars, revers and cuffs of figured or plain silk.

...there are many good patterns for making them, if one has the time. But they are to be had ready made at such moderate prices that it is a question whether there is any economy in doing the work at home or not. It depends upon the time one has to spare and what can best be done with it.

Julia Bottomley

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

CONSIDER THE TAILORED SUIT FOR SPRING.

The time has come—it is here this minute—to consider the tailored suit for spring. It is an agreeable duty because the human mind is at some happy surprises for us in novel trimming ideas and in ingenious combinations of cloth and silk. Designers have been asked to conserve wool and have responded in a way to reflect honor on themselves by furnishing models that use little cloth but are so cleverly designed, with such attention to good lines and so much originality in finish, that we may give thanks for the necessity which mothered such fine inventions. Make up your mind to have a sprightly suit for spring; because this year's suit has characteristics all its own.

Among them are to be mentioned the introduction of vests which are made of silk, brocade, crepe, pique and of plain fabrics handsomely embroidered in plaits or folds or tucks or anything that will take up material not absolutely needed and they are from one and a half to two yards wide.

Aprons have always been interesting; they are of so many kinds and produce so plainly that they are intended for real use in substantial activities or are merely decorative and trivial. But times have changed with aprons, and now the most wear-resisting and useful of them are required to look well, to possess style as well as strength. Necessity and patriotism have given the apron a boost, and now we have "service aprons" and "bungalow aprons," shapely and neat, worn by women who are doing things for themselves and others which others used to do for them.

Some of the bungalow aprons made of plain percale or chambray in all the ...ight colors, pink, lavender, ...

...ngest to be recolistened, they are so ...gay and pretty. They deserve to be called bungalow frocks at least—and perhaps that is exactly what they are.

A service apron for every-day house wear is shown in the picture, made of plaid percale with plain white cuffs and collars. It has long sleeves. Many of the good-looking aprons for housework are made of plain percale or chambray, with plaid collars, pockets, cuffs and belts. Usually the sleeves are three-quarter length. They are designed to be easily laundered, and ...

...and ingenious cutting redeems the plainness that from being uninteresting. A suit of this character is shown in the picture, of serge bound with silk braid. Its lines are trim and graceful, the coat original in cut and of medium length; many are shorter and few longer. The fronts just meet at the waistline fastening with a link button there.

Skirts might be disposed of very briefly by describing them merely as plain. They do not indulge themselves ...

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR MARCH 3

JESUS BRINGING PEACE.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:35—5:20.
GOLDEN TEXT—Jehovah hath done great things for us whereof we are glad. —Ps. 126:3.
DEVOTIONAL READING—Ps. 107:1-8, 14-23.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR TEACHERS—Matt. 8:23-34; Luke 8:22-39; Matt. 14:22-33; Luke 9:37-43.
PRIMARY LESSON MATERIAL—Mark 4:35-41.
MEMORY VERSE—Even the wind and the sea obey him.—Mark 4:41.
MEMORY VERSE—Mark 5:19.

This lesson is a most dramatic one. Surprise and revelation, rebuke and encouragement are rapidly interchanged. Leaving the multitude to whom he had been preaching, Jesus asks the disciples to pass over with him to the other side of the lake (v. 35). "Let us pass over?" Jesus never asks his disciples to go where he will not go. How vivid is the touch in v. 36: "They took him as he was." He was tired and weary, he whose invitation is to "all who are weary and heavy laden." He who "had not where to lay his head," is carried by loving hands into the boat, and is soon lost in restful slumber. Both Master and friends are soon to meet a great sinner but first they must encountered a great storm.

I. The Great Storm. The Master of forces sleeps calmly on. Why not? Who else could afford to be so apparently indifferent! Not so these disciples. They have yet to know him perfectly, and hence it is natural that in their alarm they should awaken him as they view the rapidly filling boat, and exclaim, "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Weary and unconcerned as he appears to have been, he arouse and rebuked the wind and the waves. Wind and waves are material things and therefore not susceptible to rebuke. Jesus rebuked the intangible cause; he rebuked the devil who was responsible for this turbulence; and the calm was commensurate with the storm. The Psalmist says, "Great peace have they that love thy law." Individuals and nations are now in the midst of a "great storm," a day of crime, stress, distress and tragedy; struggle, temptation, grief and loss, and the cry "Lord save us!" is growing louder and more insistent. Some of us look for the early return of the king, but all should listen for his words "Peace be still" for it is he ... which he alone can give ...

...Great Sinner. Reaching the other side, they entered the land of Gadara and there met a demoniac who is, we believe, a type of the great sinner; for he was, (a) without restraint; "no man could bind him" (v. 3); (b) he was injuring himself, "cutting," etc. (v. 5); (c) he was separated from his friends, "dwelt among the tombs" (v. 3); (d) he was "unclean" (v. 2). There was also evidence of the futility of human resolutions and the vainness of attempts at outward reformation (v. 4). "No man had the strength to tame him." Note the torment of his life (v. 7). As he looked at this man, the people saw their illegal gain interfered with, and hence the selfish request that Jesus would "depart out of their coasts" (v. 17), and this even in the face of what had been done for the stricken one. Seldom do we know no law. The Jews could not eat pork but they were raising it to sell to the Gentiles of the land, which amounted to an insult to their God, and an evasion of their law. Jesus "permitted" the demons to enter the swine thereby rebuking the avarice of the people and conclusively showing that they had left the demoniac. Luke tells us (8:37) that the Gadarenes were "taken with a great fear." Fear of what? Surely no fear of the Galilean techer, but rather of the effect of the restored man's testimony on their material prosperity. Big business will have many sins to account for in the face of greed for gain while ignoring the cry of the afflicted and unsuitable and unsanitary living conditions. Church members have no right to condemn the liquor traffic while they rent stores to carry on this destructive business.

I. A Great Storm—Ch. 4:35-41.
The command of Jesus—v. 35.
The weariness of Jesus—v. 36.
The alarm of the disciples—v. 38.
The indifference of Jesus—v. 38.
The great calm—v. 39.
II. A Glorious Cure—Ch. 5:1-20.
(Unclean, separated, no restraint, self injury).
The Gadarene cleansed—v. 6-15
(He recognized purity—desired communion—was assigned to service).
III. The Great Mission—vv. 16-20.
An improper request (v. 17).
A proper request (v. 18).
A hard request (v. 19).
A great result (see Luke 8:40).

The nations are in storm. The demons of passion, hate and lust of power are loosed in the world; let us "besech him" to return that he may speak "peace."

"UNITED IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY"

TURTLES OF INDIAN OCEAN

Concerning the great turtles of the southwest Indian Ocean a traveler says: "The chelonian, or green turtle (Chelone mydas), is an animal of considerable economic importance to the atoll, for it still occurs in the vast hordes which are so often described by early voyagers in the tropics. There appear to be two distinct groups—the resident and small in numbers, the other migratory and visiting the atoll to breed in numbers impossible to estimate.

"The latter arrives in December, and from then to April the sea seems alive with turtle. The females seek the small sand beaches and there ascend them with the rising tide, pushing themselves laboriously above high tide mark. Holes are then dug in the sand by means of the fore flippers until a satisfactory one is obtained, and the eggs, 200 in number, are buried, the turtle returning to sea immediately.

"After forty days the eggs hatch, almost simultaneously, and the young turtles dig their way up out of the sand and go down to the sea in a long procession, in the course of which they offer an easy prey to their enemies, the frigate birds and herons. Once in the sea sharks and other large fish eat them, and only 10 per cent. reach maturity.—Chicago News.

A PRINTER DEFINED

Dealing with the proposed publication of a new dictionary, a writer in the "Dublin Express" gives the following definition of a printer. He says it is one which is not to be found in any dictionary, but exists in the mind of buyers:

PRINTER, print'er, n. A waggish knave with no idea of business, one unacquainted with the ways of commerce, an ingenious wight, an irresponsible party, a no'er-do-well, one who never keeps a promise, a customed to being stamped upon.)

"Believe a printer of an epithph. Or anything that's false,"—Byron.

But times have changed and customs have changed. Modern industrialism has developed a new and different definition for the printer, in he is now looked upon as a large manufacturer of printed matter, a student of modern methods, and a highly responsible business man.

Willie—Ma, can anything be foreign and domestic, too?"

Mother—No, Willam.

Willie—Yes, it can.

Mother—You are wrong, my son.

Willie—I ain't. What's the matter with Bridget?

THE NOVICE SCORES

An old farmer was driving along a lane near a golf course, and stopped for a moment to watch the game.

"What's that?" he demanded curiously.

"Don't mind if I do," declared the farmer.

The nephew pointed to a flag on a hill two hundred and fifty yards away. "At the foot of that pole," he said, "is a little hole. The object is to put the ball in the hole with the smallest number of strokes."

The farmer took the club, sighted for some time, and then let go a whale of a stroke. The ball soared with a mighty swish into the air, and fled unerringly toward the flag. It fell short, bounced, rolled and wound up a hand's breadth from the objective—a phenomenal shot that made the experienced players gasp.

"Hang it all! I missed it!" the farmer exclaimed.

"Pa," said Johnny Knowitall, "the paper says natural gas is offensive to the olfactories. What does that mean?"

"Olfactories is a misprint. It should be oil factories. The oil factories don't like it because natural gas is ruining their business."

THE DEITY OF CHRIST

"The Divinity of Christ." His text was I John 5:1-21. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. John 20:28.

Who was Jesus? Do you know there is not another question in all the realm of human thought quite so important as this one, unless it is the question of what you are going to do with Jesus after you find out who He is.

There are problems, of course, connected with the person of Jesus which no human intellect has ever fathomed or ever will. The greatest minds of the world have grappled with His deity and His incarnation and the general thing more than a man? Did ever thing surrounds His supernatural deity, and their noble efforts have brought us much that satisfies and helps.

But when it comes to the one thing upon which the whole system of our Christian religion rests, the deity, the divinity of Jesus Christ, we must be of one mind. This fundamental truth must be accepted. Deny it and you have taken the keystone out of the arch and the whole thing comes down with a crash.

Jesus called Himself the "only begotten Son of God," and for this you know the Jews tried to stone Him to death one day and when Jesus said, "What's this for?" they said, "Because you, being a man, claim to be equal with God and so make yourself to be God and you're a blasphemer and you ought to die."

Why didn't Jesus Christ set them right if they were wrong in their estimate of what He claimed? He owed it to Himself and to the world and by every principle of plainthropy and every law of decency He owed it to them to save them from the horrible murder they were contemplating. But He acquiesced in the charge and allowed it to stand in all of its repulsiveness to the Jewish mind and sealed His claim by His own heart's blood on the cross where they condemned Him to die because He said, "I am the only begotten Son of God." Could you, a man, say that?

Of course He claimed to be just what the Jews said He did, and when He did it. He was either what those Jews said He was, a blasphemer, or He was just that very person He claimed to be.

He claimed His diety on the threefold ground of His divine knowledge, His divine power, and His divine authority.

1. As to His divine knowledge. He said, "No man knoweth the Son but the Father; and no man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him." What a daring, what a tremendous statement! How profane and how shocking if He were only a man! Would any mere man dare to say that he know God as well as God knew him? Would you?

II. As to His divine power. Among other things He said:

1. That He had ability to do whatever the Father did. "Whatsoever things the Father doeth these also doeth the Son likewise." What man ever used language so daring as that and claimed the full right and power to do all that the eternal Father had the right and power to do?

2. That He had the power to raise the dead. "As the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them even so the Son quickeneth whomsoever He will." He said He would raise up His voice and come forth out of their graves. How could He do this if He were not God in some sense that no other man has ever been?

III. As to His divine authority. He said in the plainest terms that He would be the Universal Judge of the human race. "The Father judgeth no man but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." He says that He "will sit on the throne of His glory" and all shall be gathered before Him.

What mortal could say things like these? Who is this that professes to be able to scrutinize the thought and secret motives of men, to sit in judgment upon their words and their deeds? Who claims the authority to grasp and wield the divine thunderbolts of retribution If He be not something more than a man? Did ever man make a claim like that? Would you, a man, dare to make it?

These are only a few of His claims. He said, "Before Abraham was, I am." Could you, a man, say that?

He said, "Glorify Thou me, Oh Father with the glory I had with Thee before the world was." Could you, a man, say that?

He says to the weary soul, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." Could you, a man, say that?

He says that faith in Him means eternal life. Could you, a man, say that?

He said that He was sinless. He said, "Which one of you convinceth me of sin?" Could you or any other man say that?

3. I believe it, in the third place, because of His masterly teaching.

"He spoke as never man spoke." That's what the officers said when they came to arrest Him, and they were right.

4. I believe it, in the next place, because of His marvelous influence. The biggest proof of the deity of Christ is just Christianity itself.

5. Marvelous influence of Jesus. I believe it, in the next place, because of His mighty work. Jesus said: "The works that I do bear witness of me that the Father hath sent me." Look at His miracles, and, like Nicodemus, you will have to say that God was incarnate in the man who did such wonderful things.

There is a verse of Scripture which says, "What shall the end be, to them that obey not the Gospel of the Lord Jesus?"

What are you going to do when your conscience walks out in front of you and points its accusing finger at you?

What are you going to do when misfortune and the waves of adversity overwhelm you?

What are you going to do when the undertaker comes and takes the measure for the little shroud?

What are you going to do in the night of despair when the stars are dead?

I have looked as if in a dream through the gates of heaven. I stood, as it were, by an angel's side who was there to guard the way. And as I stood there the spirit of a rich man came and tried to get admission. He told the angel of his wealth and the vast treasures he had gathered on earth. But the angel pointed to his gold and said, "We pave our streets with that stuff; you have not got enough to buy even a glimpse into the celestial city." And then a moral man came and told the angel who he was, told him of his morality and talked of the good works he had done. But angel said, "Not of works, lest any should boast; you can't come in." Then came the spirit of another and laid before the angel his reputation, his reputation and talked of his good name. But the angel shook his head and said, "There is none other name given under heaven whereby we must be saved but the name of Jesus."

The blood of Jesus Christ hath cleansed me from sin." And the gates of heaven rolled back on their jeweled hinges and the angel cried, "Unto you is administered an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." And as the gates rolled back I saw whole armies of redeemed drunkards and numberless legions of those redeemed from the vilest sinks of sin, and whole acres of redeemed men and women who once had trusted in their morality and their good name but gave it all up for a righteousness not their own. And they had crowns on their heads and palms of victory in their hands; and I saw one whose face and form I could not mistake. One like unto Jesus, and He ascended the throne and the vast throngs whom no man could number, took their crowns and cast them at His feet and they waved their palms, and I heard them cry and they said, "Wonderful; Counsellor; the Mighty God; the Everlasting Father; the Prince of Peace!"

"FAIR AND WARMER" AT THE WALNUT

Selwyn and Company will present their latest and greatest farce success "Fair and Warmer," at the Walnut Street Theatre, for a limited engagement commencing Monday, March 4, with the same company and production that appeared at the Garrick Theatre for thirteen weeks.

"Fair and Warmer" is the merriest of tales, divulged in three acts of mounting drama and high-pitched comedy. It begins with a revelation into two highly respectable and domestic persons—a husband above reproach and below interest, and a wife, a perfect paragon of innocent domesticity, that their respective spouses have been having a time more gay than creditable. The very good pair vow a revenge, and, having no experience to guide or to warn them, decide on counter-naughtiness as a suitable course.

They discover that getting into trouble is far easier than getting out of it, and that, lacking a practised hand, the consequences of trouble are more apt to behave like a boomerang than a projectile.

WHAT IS PRAYER?

John 14: 13-18; 15: 7, 16

Is it a wonderful thing, when you think of it, that we are not only permitted, but commanded, to pray, and assured that God will listen to our prayers. Infinite responsibilities of which we can have no comprehension rest upon God. He controls the physical universe and keeps every star and comet and planet and satellite moving in its appointed orbit (Heb. 1: 3). He cares for the wants of all His creatures in all worlds. "These wait all upon Thee, that Thou mayest give them their meat in due season." (See Psalm 104: 25-30 and Mat. 6: 26-30.)

Prayer is by far the greatest power that is within the reach of man. It is the wireless telegraph by which we can communicate with the Creator of Heaven and earth. It is the trolley arm by which we can lay hold of the Omnipotent power of God and bring it to bear upon our own lives and the lives of others.

A great deal of what passes for prayer at all; it is merely saying prayers, and such "prayers" might better be addressed to the bedpost; for it is an insult to God to approach Him irreverently and mechanically.

And very many prayers that are honest enough and earnest enough are useless because they do not come within the conditions which give us a right to expect answers; what are these conditions?

First, There must be an abiding in Christ, an obedience to His commands. That is, there must be a realization that we have no standing in God's sight except in Christ, and there must be a sincere desire to follow Christ and to do His will. (John 15: 7; 1 John 3: 21, 22.)

Second, Prayer must be unselfish and must be offered in faith. (Mat. 21: 21, 22; James 1: 6, 7 and James 4: 2, 3.)

Third, Prayer must be persistent. (Luke 18: 1.)

Fourth, We must have the aid and guidance of the Holy Spirit in prayer (Rom. 8: 6, 27; Eph. 6: 18.)

See also Mat. 6: 9-15; 7: 12, and 9: 37, 38.

EPWORTH LEAGUE TOPIC

For March 3, 1918

"HE BORE OUR SINS IN HIS OWN BODY ON THE TREE"

What was the meaning of the death of Christ? Worldly wisdom says it was simply an illustration of the enmity which rules for strength. He rebuked the sins of the rulers of the Jews, and His own life gave force to His teaching. And their evil passions were aroused to so great an extent that they hated Him bitterly. They feared Him, too, because He was getting the ear of the people, and they were in danger of losing the respect which gave authority to their teaching. They saw that they must either acknowledge His authority or get rid of Him, so they killed Him.

We know that the death of Christ had been predicted hundreds of years before He came into the world, and we know that an inspired prophet had said He would be bruised for our iniquities, and that God would lay upon Him "the iniquity of us all." (Isa. 53: 4-6.)

When Peter wanted to defend Jesus in the garden of Gethsemane, He said, "Thinkest thou that I cannot beseech My Father, and He shall even now send Me more than twelve legions of angels?"

"The cup which My Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it?" And when Pilate remarked that he had power to crucify or to release Him, Jesus said, "Thou wouldest have no power at all against Me except it were given thee from above." (See Mat. 26: 53; John 18: 11 and 19: 11.)

The death of Christ was provided for in the purpose of God before the world was created. (See 1 Peter 1: 20.) It was God's remedy for man's sin; for God knew before man was created that he would sin.

"Him who knew no sin He made to be sin on our behalf, that we might become the righteousness of God in Him." (2 Cor. 5: 14-21.)

"For all have sinned and fall short of the glory of God, being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 3: 23-26.)

"God commendeth His own love to ward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." (Rom. 5: 8.)

"Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and He was buried, and hath been raised on the third day." (1 Cor. 15: 3.)

"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (1 John 4: 10.)

"There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." (Rom. 8: 1.)

NOT ATTRACTED

"Give up my nice and pleasant office and stay home?" rejoined Mr. Growcher. "I should say not."

AT THE TABLE

Don't bring worries to the table,
Don't bring anger, hate or scowls;
Banish everything unpleasant.
Talk and eat with smiling jowls.
It will aid your own digestion,
If you wear a smiling face;
It will jolly up the others
If you only set the pace;
Knowing something funny, tell it;
Something sad, forget to knell it;
Something hateful, quick dispel it.
At the table.

Cares domestic, business troubles,
Ills of body, soul or brain;
Unkind thoughts and nagging tempers,
Speech that causes others pain,
Crimes and wrongs and right's defeat—
Public woes and grim disasters,
None of them are to be mentioned
When you sit down to eat.
Knowing something funny, tell it;
Something sad, forget to knell it;
Something hateful, quick dispel it,
At the table.

JOHANNESBURG'S RISE AND PROGRESS

If anyone gifted with prescience a generation ago had written out the story of Johannesburg's rise and progress he would have been regarded as a burlesque Jules Verne. For a city to spring up in the center of South Africa in twenty years, to attract a quarter of a million settled population and crowd an enormous municipal development within a single decade sounds certainly more like imagination than fact. So does the arrangement by which she farms her black domestics out in a suburb ten miles away and runs special trains for them morning and night. But one secret of the town's success rests on her natural throne of forty-mile ridge 6000 feet above the sea and her nine hours of sunshine a day in perhaps the mildest and most equable climate in the world. —Pall Mall Gazette.

THE NAIL-HOLES

"My boyhood home was not far south of the Great Chain of North American lakes. Our fuel was poles cut from a neighboring tamarack swamp. It was my business after they had been brought to our yard, to saw them to proper length for the stoves. They were long and slick and hard to hold. One morning when I was in a hurry to be off fishing, they seemed to be especially aggravating. Getting the saw fast, I jerked it about until I finally plunged the teeth some inches into my foot, making as ugly gash. My father saw my exhibition of temper, but wisely said nothing until I had finished my work.

"John," said he, very kindly, "I wish you would get the hammer."

"Yes, sir."

"Here they are."

"Will you drive the nail into the board?" It was done. "Please pull it out again!"

"That's easy."

"Now, John," and my father's voice dropped to a lower, sadder key, "pull out the nail hole."

Of course I couldn't be done. There is no way to pull out nail holes. You may, rub things off a slate, but you can't pull out a nail hole.

You can never really make up a lesson. You can never take back an unkind word. You can never lift an unkind deed. There are some things, boys and girls, you can never undo, any more than you can pull out a nail hole. If you don't want to leave the ugly scar in the wood, don't drive the nail.

APPRECIATING THE DOG

I've never known a dog to wag
His tail in glee he did not feel,
At some more influential heel.
The yellowest cur I ever knew
Was, to the boy who loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to show
Halfway devotion to his friend.
To seek a kinder man to know.
Or richer; but unto the end
The humblest dog I ever knew
Was, to the man that loved him, true.

I've never known a dog to take
Affection for a present gain,
A false display of love to make
Some little favor to attain:
I've never known a Fortune or Spot
That seemed to be what he was not.

But I have known a dog to fight
With all his strength to shield his friend,
And whether wrong or whether right,
To stick with him unto the end.
And I have known a dog to lick
The hand of him that men would kick.

And I have known a dog to bear
Starvation's pang from day to day,
With him who had been glad to share
His bread and meat along the way.
No dog, however mean or rude,
Is guilty of ingratitude.

The dog is listed with the dumb,
No voice has he to speak his creed.
His messages to humans come
By faithful conduct and by deed.
He shows, as seldom mortals do,

Volcano Hottest on Surface.

It appears that a volcano is hottest on its surface. This is the conclusion drawn by a scientist who has made investigations in Hawaii and has obtained samples of gases and lava before they reached the air. Laboratory studies of these samples make it appear that much of the heat required to keep an open lava basin in fluid condition is supplied by the chemical action of the gases.

BIG INCREASE IN FOOD SUPPLY IS DEMANDED

Agricultural Department's Program for 1918 Points Out Needs of Nation and Allies.

GROW MORE SPRING WHEAT

Necessity of Producing Large Supply of Foods and Feedstuffs Is Emphasized—More Hogs Demanded —South Is Urged to Feed Itself.

Washington, D. C.—The planting of an increased acreage to spring wheat and the production of an increased supply of other food products and of live stock, especially hogs, is recommended in a supplementary food production program issued by the United States department of agriculture.

This program re-emphasizes and amplifies the food-production program for 1918 issued by the department in August, 1917, and other suggestions made in the fall and the first of this year regarding increased pork production and increased production of foodstuffs in the South. Taken in connection with the recommendations previously made, it suggests in full the proposals which the department thinks it desirable to offer with a view to secure enough meat and dairy products, cereals, sugar and other staple and perishable foods, wool and cotton for the nation, its armies, an' the allies. It gives suggestions for approaching spring operations, based upon the latest available information as to the condition of the fall-planted crops of winter wheat and rye and as to the number of meat and dairy animals reported for 1917. They represent the best thought of the specialists of the department who have had the benefit of advice from agricultural leaders throughout the country.

Our Best Efforts Required.

"Notwithstanding an increased production of staple crops in the United States in 1917, there is need for more food," the program states. "Taking into account our own needs, the needs of the nations associated with us in this war, and the needs of friendly neutral nations, our best efforts will be required to provide enough food in 1918. Whether the war continues or not, the demands on this country, because of the increasing population and the needs of Europe will be great. An especially strong demand will be made most favorable and where, in some sections, they have been decidedly unfavorable during the past two years. North Dakota's acreage in the last five years was that of 1917—7,000,000; Minnesota's, 8,200,000 in 1917; Montana's, 380,000 in 1913, and Idaho's, 200,000 in 1913. North Dakota's record acreage in the last five years was 8,350,000 in 1915; Minnesota's 4,150,000 in 1913; Montana's 1,122,000 in 1917, and Idaho's 375,000 in 1917. North Dakota's five-year average (1912-1916) was 7,657,000; Minnesota's 3,965,000; Montana's 500,000, and Idaho's 291,000. Montana's annual planting has shown increases during the last four years as follows: 1914-15, 321,000; 1915-16, 185,000; 1916-17, 187,000. What these states can do this spring it is difficult to determine.

It is hoped that many farmers, especially in the northern part of the corn belt, will find it possible to plant five to ten acres additional in wheat. In some cases they will plant more. In a number of states in the eastern and central portions of the country where spring wheat has not been grown in recent years, the crop is now being reestablished and it is recommended that this movement be encouraged.

To a small extent the acreage in oats, if necessary, could be reduced in the interest of wheat. Likewise, a very small portion of the acreage which normally would be planted to corn in the northern part of the corn belt might be sown to spring wheat.

If the acreage of spring wheat indicated for some of the states cannot be planted, the barley acreage, which is known to grow better in some localities, might be increased. The use of barley for food is increasing in this country and it is a welcome food in Europe.

Summary of Other Recommendations.

Hogs. The number of hogs should be increased by at least 15 per cent during the year 1918.

Sugar. Effort should be made to maintain the acreage of sugar cane and sugar beets, and to increase these areas in so far as these crops are well established or are necessary to sound agricultural practice.

Production of satisfactory substitutes for sugar, including sorghum, corn and cane strup, maple products and honey can and should be increased.

Sorghum strup, it is pointed out, may be produced in nearly every state in the Union, and increased production of sorghum sweets would enable the public to conserve still further the sugar supply in the form most available for transportation to our soldiers.

Dairy Products. The supply of dairy products should be maintained to meet the needs of this country and to help supply the increasing demands of the allies.

Poultry. Poultry production should be increased greatly, especially as a war measure. Poultry is a valuable and expensive grains and other materials are not required.

Corn. An acreage of corn approximately equal to that of 1917 should be planted, with possible slight reductions in certain sections to free areas for spring wheat.

Oats, Barley, Rice, Buckwheat and Flaxseed. The area in oats should be maintained, especially in regions and on soils which are not so well adapted to other grains, but with a small reduction to provide for increasing the wheat acreage. Barley production should be increased in regions where it grows best, especially in the northern edge of the corn belt and in sections north and west of the belt; and rice, buckwheat and flaxseed production should be maintained and, if possible, increased.

Grain Sorghums. The production of grain sorghums (kafir, milo, feterita, etc.) should be increased greatly throughout the drier portion of the Plains region. Kafirs are the most certain grain crops in this section and they can be made to supplement wheat as human food and to replace corn as animal food.

Potatoes. The normal acreage of Irish and sweet potatoes should be maintained in 1918, notwithstanding the large crops in 1917.

Hay, Forage and Pastures. Wherever feasible, the area devoted to hay, forage and silage crops should be increased and these products should be used to a greater extent in place of grains and other concentrates.

Beef Animals. The number of beef animals should be maintained and, in areas where it is clearly the best range and farm practice, should be increased.

Beans, Peas and Peanuts. The production of beans and peas should be increased in regions to which they are adapted, because of their high food value, keeping qualities, and availability for domestic or export trade. Soy beans and peanuts should be increased in order to supplement beans and peas as human food, as a source of much needed oil, and as animal feeds.

Perishables. (a) Market gardens near large consuming centers should be increased so as to meet, as nearly as possible, the needs of the community, and in order to obviate the necessity of transporting such products from distant points.

It is important to do all that is possible to relieve the strain upon transportation facilities.

(b) The planting of home gardens, especially for family needs and for preserving food for future use, again should be emphasized.

(c) The commercial production of perishables generally should be increased above normal wherever it is reasonably clear that transportation and marketing facilities will be available.

CALL FOR 250,000 SHIPYARD HELPERS

Each State Asked to Contribute Volunteers to Speed Merchant Fleet.

FORM RESERVE ORGANIZATION

Two hundred and fifty thousand workmen are to be enrolled in a reserve organization of American mechanics, skilled workmen in many lines, to bring to completion the gigantic shipbuilding program to win the war. The organization is known as the United States Shipyard Volunteers of the Public Reserve. Those who enroll will stand ready to respond when they are called to report at the shipyards for duty.

An appeal for volunteers has been made by the department of labor, the council of national defense, the shipping board, the 20,000 four-minute men, governors of the various states, organized labor and business men. The aim is to fill all the present and future needs of the government's shipyards.

Pay of volunteers will be in accordance with the prevailing wage in the shipyards at the time they are called. Construction of houses for the workers is being pushed with energy, and the necessary homes will be ready when the men are called.

Cards are issued to all applicants, bearing statements of the purposes of the shipyard volunteers, classifying them according to trades and asking signers to respond when called. Buttons will be given to volunteers bearing the inscription, "U. S. Shipyard Volunteers." In addition, the workers will receive a certificate signed by Chairman Hurley, which reads:

"This is to certify (name of volunteer of (city, state), has been enrolled in the United States Shipyard Volunteers of Public Service Reserve to aid the nation in its imperative needs for merchant ships with which to overcome the submarine menace and maintain our forces at the front."

Shipyards to Win or Lose.

"The world war will be won or lost in the American shipyards. Every rivet driven is a blow at the kaiser. Every ship turned out brings America nearer to victory."

"Those who give their strength and influence to the speedy construction of ships render service that is patriotic in the highest degree. An essential factor in the speedy termination of the war."

Plans for the organization of the Shipyard Volunteers were laid with the view to interfere as little as possible with the private industrial concerns and to cause the minimum of inconvenience to the workers themselves.

Under this system, when an acetylene or electrical welder, blacksmith, boiler maker, carpenter or any other of the skilled workers volunteers in response to the call, he need not fear that he will be called upon to quit his present position without notice and go immediately to a shipyard. The government does not contemplate issuing calls to the volunteers until the yards are ready to receive them.

When a man is enrolled he may make his personal plans in accordance with the government's wishes and be ready when the call comes. He will then have only to join a definite job at a definite place, at a definite, generous rate of pay.

Quota of Each State.

Each state has been assigned a quota, based upon the population and industries. The quota is as follows:

Scenes of Prosperity

Are Common in Western Canada

The thousands of U. S. farmers who have accepted Canada's generous offer to settle on homesteads or buy farm land in her provinces have been well repaid by bountiful crops of wheat and other grains.

Where you can buy good farm land at $15 to $30 per acre—get $3 a bushel for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre you are bound to make money—that's what you can do in Western Canada.

In the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta you can get a

HOMESTEAD OF 160 ACRES FREE

and other land at very low prices.

During many years Canadian wheat fields have averaged 20 bushels to the acre—many yields as high as 45 bushels to the acre. Wonderful crops also of Oats, Barley, and Flax.

Mixed Farming is as profitable an industry as grain raising. Good schools, churches, markets convenient, climate excellent. Write for literature and particulars as to reduced railway rates to Supt. of Immigration, Ottawa, Can., or to

GREATEST DANGER FOLLOWS GRIP

Weakened Victims Fall Easy Prey to Other Diseases

The getting-well stage of grip is the most dangerous of all because the body, weakened by the grip, is wide open to attacks of other lurking disease germs.

That is why all the organs of the body must be kept in their most vigorous order, not only to drive out the poisons left by the grip germ, but that the patient shall regain strength as soon as possible to avoid further attacks resulting from the poisons in the system.

As a means toward good health after the grip Father John's Medicine builds up the body because it is all pure wholesome nourishment and free from opium, morphine, chloroform or other poisonous drugs or alcohol. Father John's Medicine has had 60 years' success for colds and throat troubles, coughs and lung troubles, and as a tonic and body builder.

Proof:—

"After an attack of pneumonia the doctor ordered me to give my baby Father John's Medicine and the result he regained health and strength. I always give it to my children whenever they catch cold. I am writing this to tell you how grateful I am to Father John's Medicine."—(Signed) Mrs. Geo. Hunsberger, 1054 Pike St., Reading, Pa. Because of its body-building, strength-giving qualities Father John's Medicine is an ideal family medicine for all who are weak and run-down.

HUSBAND SHOOTS RICH INTRUDER

Cleveland Oil Promoter Kills Man Found in Attic of His House.

DAUGHTER IS WITNESS

Tragedy Occurs When Man Changes His Plans and Returns Home Without Informing Wife of His Early Arrival.

Cleveland.—A formal charge of murder has been lodged against Elmer Hupp, wealthy oil promoter of Cleveland, O., who shot and killed Charles A. Joyce, also wealthy and connected with a leading clothing firm in New York city, when he found Joyce in the Hupp home at Lakewood, a fashionable Cleveland suburb.

Immediately after the shooting Hupp informed the police and surrendered. He is at liberty under $35,000 bail pending the trial, in which his wife and thirteen-year-old daughter, who witnessed the tragedy, will be important factors.

In a statement after his release Hupp said: "Everybody makes mistakes. I guess we have made ours. I am now going back to my wife and daughter."

Joyce, according to the Cleveland police, was thirty-five years of age and lived at Bratenthal, a district known in Cleveland as the "millionaire colony," which, although located within the city limits of Cleveland, is a separate municipality.

Hupp Changed His Mind.

According to the story related to the police by Hupp, he left home several days before the tragedy on a business trip to Chicago and Kansas City. After reaching Chicago he changed his plans and started for home without informing his wife. On the evening of the tragedy he heard a strange noise after entering his house and rushed to his wife's apartments. There Hupp informed the police, he found Mrs. Hupp and asked if she was alone. She said she was.

Hupp told the officers that he heard a noise in the attic and started up the stairs to investigate, when he met

Joyce. He opened fire immediately, three bullets taking effect in Joyce's body and causing instant death.

PAID HIS DEBT OF HONOR

Kansas Lawyer Struggles Nine Years to Wipe Out Moral Obligation.

Fort Scott, Kan.—Attorney J. I. Sheppard of this town recently made the last payment on his debt of honor. The law declared the debt legally blotted out years ago, but Sheppard considered it a moral obligation, and paid every cent of it.

When the First National bank of Fort Scott failed nine years ago notes totaling $17,000, given by Sheppard were among the bank's papers. Under the receivership the debt was compromised for $5,000 and Sheppard mortgaged his home to pay that amount. He declared at the time that he would pay the balance, even though it had been "legally" paid by court proceedings.

The first payment, amounting to $7,500, was made in 1914. In the following year he paid $2,500, and a payment of equal size recently wiped out the obligation.

Another Human Ostrich.

Shawano, Wis.—When surgeons performed an operation on James Poppendorf, a feeble-minded man sent here for treatment, they discovered that his stomach, among other things, contained a glass tube from a thermometer, a pipe stem and a buttonhook over six inches long. The point of this hook had protruded through the walls of the stomach.

'SUICIDE" SAVED BY ICE AND POLICE

Chicago Architect Hadn't Realized How Cold the Nights Were Getting.

Chicago.—Charles J. Hancox, an architect, stood on the bridge at Van Buren street, felt in his inside coat pocket to see that the note he had written was safe, and then climbed up on the ice railing. While he is balancing himself for the leap the reader may glance at the note:

"Please notify my wife, Mrs. Charles J. Hancox; my sister, Miss Lottie Hancox, 5010 West Monroe street, and S. W. Hancox of Oak Park."

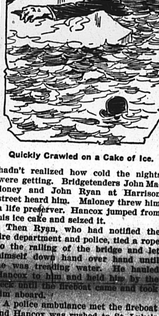

Mr. Hancox cast a farewell look toward the loop lights and dived. It was a good dive. He came up like a seal lion and quickly crawled on a cake of ice and began crying for help. He hadn't realized how cold the nights were getting. Bridgetenders John Maloney and John Ryan at Harrison street heard him. Maloney threw him a life preserver. Hancox jumped from his ice cake and seized it.

Then Ryan, who had notified the fire department and police, tied a rope to the railing of the bridge and let himself down hand over hand until he was within reach of the struggling Hancox to him and held him by a

Firemen came and took him aboard.

A police ambulance met the fireboat and Hancox was rushed to St. Luke's hospital for treatment, his hands having been frozen. Otherwise he was uninjured, it was stated. He declined to talk.

NOBODY WANTS HUSBAND WHO SLEEPS WITH HORSE

Cleveland.—Nobody wants a husband who insists upon sleeping in the barn with the horse. At least, that's what Mrs. Louise Chrisinger thinks. The court thought so, too, for when Mrs. Chrissinger filed her petition for divorce the court promised her a writ of separation.

"He would eat his supper and stick around the house until bed time, and then he'd go out and bed down with the horse," the complainant told the judge.

OREGON BOYS STAGE DUEL

One Shot to Death in Effort to Relieve Monotony of Hunting Trip.

Oregon City, Ore.—Leslie Ledoux, aged sixteen, is dead at Park Place, near here, because he and his boy companions staged a duel in the woods to break the ennui of an unsuccessful hunting trip.

Unable to find any game, the boys decided to stage a battle, and Ledoux armed with a repeating 22 caliber rifle, agreed "to stand off" Cecil Green, thirteen, and Lake Smith, fifteen, each armed with single shot 22s.

Crouching behind a stump and only stating to fire, Ledoux stood his companions off for 15 minutes, and then dropped dead with a bullet hole in his forehead. His companions went home and told their parents Ledoux was sick, but later confessed to the sheriff what had happened.

TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the effectual efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operations.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of courses but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and fine and comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundaries to destination and return.

WELLINGTON'S COOLNESS

A story is told that shows the Duke of Wellington's characteristic coolness in battle. Even the hottest engagements he sometimes found time to make humorous observations, especially when it seemed to raise the spirits of his men. This was the case when the British were storming Badajoz.

The general rode up while the balls were falling thickly and, observing an artilleryman who was particularly active, inquired the man's name. He was answered, "Taylor."

"A very good name, too," remarked Wellington. "Cheer up, my men, our Taylor will soon make a pair of breaches in the wall!"

At this sally the men forgot the danger. A burst of laughter broke from them, and the next charge carried the fortress.

PAT WAS BEWILDERED

A certain member of the House of Lords, who was traveling in Ireland for a fancy to a stalwart Connaught lad, and engaged him as footman.

"O'Brien," said his lordship to the new servant one morning, "see if your mistress is 'at home' to-day."

"That her lad'ship is, your lordship," was the ready reply of the unsophisticated youth. "Sure, I just saw her ladyship go into the drawing-room."

"You misunderstand me, O'Brien," said his lordship, stiffly. "Go and ask your mistress if she is 'at home' today."

"Sure now," muttered the puzzled footman, as he obeyed, "if his lordship ain't crazy. Why, I saw her ladyship with my own eyes. And now I've got to ask her that same, and she's in the house all the time."

Then, thrusting his head into the drawing-room he asked, "Are you at home, my lady?"

"No, O'Brien, not to-day," replied his mistress; and the footman retired slowly in utter bewilderment.

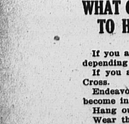

"Well, well!" exclaimed the nonplussed Pat. "Where does she think she is, poor soul? Sure, it's mad she is, and the master, too. More's the pity."

"BETSEY BUCKET"

Xanthippe, wife of Socrates, is perhaps the most famous shrew in history; yet we know, on the testimony of the great philosopher himself, that she was a wife of many virtues. Other notable shrews and termagants have been exemplary in important domestic aspects; especially, they have often been of that efficient if formidable type of housewife expressively known in New England as the "driver."

One such competent vixen of old Sanbornton was a "driver" who drove her household to their utmost ounce of strength and achievement and herself into frequent nervous "tantrums." She developed a peculiarly ingenious form of punishment for her poor, meek husband if he vexed her, or crossed her in any way. She would insist on weeding the vegetable patch in the rain, declaring that she would "catch her death of cold, and then he'd see!" Sometimes he pursued her up and down the dripping rows with warnings and remonstrances, but always in vain; she weeded viciously until her temper was exhausted or there were no more weeds to pull. Even when it was the heat of her wrath that saved her, but she never caught cold.

A Rhode Island shrew made herself even more suicidally obnoxious whenever things did not suit her in her home. She, too, was a "driver," who drove her three daughters nearly to distraction; but her heart was weak, —at least, so everyone supposed, and she could only share the very lightest of their labors without danger. The girls did their best, but they were never able to achieve the ideal of speklessness, perfect order and instant promptitude that she exacted. When she had exhausted every resource of a tongue like a whiplash, she had one weapon still in reserve. Declaring that if they would not do the work of the house properly she must, and that she might as well give up expecting any consideration for her health and tackle the hardest job first, she would dash out to the well curb, and while the girls wept, blustered and pleaded about her would begin, furious and panting, to haul up the heavy buckets from the depths. She was likely to drop dead at any moment, she told them; but some one had to draw water and it might as well be she!

She did not drop dead; nevertheless, one day there was a catastrophe. In her haste and temper she overhauled the well herself as she hauled, and pitched headfirst into the well. Clutching at the rope as she fell, she somehow righted herself and, screaming and floundering, managed to get a foot in the bucket. Her terrified daughters drew her to the surface unharmed but since her heart had stood the strain of such an experience, even they considered afterwards that it was equal to the stress of ordinary life. They never again interfered when she drew water from the well. Her neighbors promptly dubbed her "Betsey Bucket," and regarded the affair as a huge joke.

"Betsey Bucket" never became an amiable woman; but she was a good deal subdued, nevertheless. As she, too, was convinced that her heart was a tougher organ that it had seemed, she was able to work off a good deal of her energy in useful work, and her daughters' burden was doubly lightened. The three married well in time, and displayed their mother's domestic efficiency without her tyranny and "tantrums."—Youth's Companion.

THE CUP THAT CHEERS

A business girl who wished to brew an occasional cup of tea in her room hit upon this happy device. She went about among the secondhand furniture shops until she found an old machine table with the treadle removed. The top of the table she covered with asbestos, and on this she installed a small gas stove. The machine drawers were used for holding knives and forks, small tea, coffee and sugar canisters and paper napkins. Screw hooks fastened to the underside of the table hold tea and coffee pots, a saucepan and a frying pan, and curtains acts as a screen. A compact the useful device is this.—Home Companion.

CONTRABAND

An English lady was taken in to supper at a private party a few nights ago by a young Scotsman who had a high estimate of his own mental capacity. They drifted on the subject of the Scot abroad.

"I've often heard," said the lady, "that Scotsmen who leave their country are generally speaking much cleverer than those who stay at home."

"Oh, yes," replied the Scot, with an attempt at wit, "You see, the reason is that at every outlet there are persons mustered who examine all who pass out, that, for the honor of the country, no one is allowed to leave who is not able to uphold his own and his country's dignity."

"Oh, then," she said, with a bright smile, "you were smuggled, were you?"

NAPOLEON'S BIRTHPLACE

The Empress Eugenie, a French contemporary says, has erected a small museum in the house at Ajaccio where Napoleon was born.

Of the original building, with its green window shutters and yellow latticed walls, there was nothing to distinguish it from the neighboring houses except a marble slab announcing the birth on August 15, 1769, of the man who afterward became Napoleon I. The best preserved room in the building was that which Napoleon, then a young and unknown officer, used to occupy when he visited his family at holiday time.—Westminster Gazette.

EVELESS EDEN

C. L. Edson, "the man from Arkansaw," who was formerly a paragrapher on a New York newspaper, was wandering along Broadway one evening when he came on a Suffragist mounted on a soap-box, and orating to a considerable crowd of people.

"What would home be without a woman?" the lady was demanding earnestly. "Can any of you gentlemen within sound of my voice think of any home without a woman? Can you, sir?" she added, pointing to Edson, mildly; "I can."

"Oh, you can, can you?" said the Suffragist with a slight tinge of sarcasm in her tone. "Well, my dear sir, will you kindly tell us what kind of home it is?"

"The Old Soldiers' Home," replied Mr. Edson.

Teacher—Tommy, what is salt?

Pupil—Sideways or top?

Teacher—What do you mean?

Handing Out Cigars
is an extreme pleasure with us

We have so many corking good smokes that we find it easy to satisfy the most fastidious taste. Particular fellows who have given BLACK AND WHITE TOBACCO PRODUCTS a trial, endorse them heartily. The cigars especially, have a taste and aroma which are exceedingly good, and the smoke is enjoyed from the "match" to the "stump." Black and White cigarettes are "strikingly superior." A blend of Turkish and domestic tobacco, 20 cigarettes to the package for the small sum of 11 cents, in BLACK AND WHITE ROLL CUT real pipe comfort is to be found. Nothing but the best in ROLL CUT, and it is practically the only 10 cent tin on the market. If you are a judge of good tobacco, let us have your verdict.

EX-JUDGE JOHN G. HORNER PASSES AWAY

Was a Former Palmyra Boy and Received Early Schooling Here

It is with deepest sorrow and regret that we announce the death of Hon. John G. Horner, of Moorestown, N. J., former State Senator and ex-Judge of Burlington county.

Judge Horner was 46 years old and was the son of the late Judge Asa P. Horner, of Pennsville, Camden county, and was born in the Horner Homestead on the Burlington pike. After passing through the public schools, he attended the Farum Preparatory School of Beverly, South Jersey Institute at Bridgeton, he studied law with former Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in June, 1893. Two years later, June, 1895, he was admitted to the bar and was law partner of former Judge Lewis Starr, with offices in Camden and Palmyra.

The deceased has a place in the hearts of the people of Palmyra, having been raised, after the death of his mother, by the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morgan. He also made his home with Mr. William Morgan on Morgan Heights. His upward career was watched with interest by his many friends who, when he was made Judge, affectionately termed him "Our Jack." Mrs. Horner will be remembered as Miss Emily Maguire, daughter of the late Mr. Irvine P. Maguire, formerly of Palmyra.

The funeral services will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late residence, Moorestown. They will be in charge of Rev. Dr. Dunham, of Temple University and other clergymen. Interment will be in Harleigh Cemetery. The deceased is survived by wife and several children. He was a prominent member of the Masonic Order, a Shriner, a Knight of Pythias, a Woodman, a Red Man, a Knight of Columbus, a Moose and a Brotherhood.

Judge Horner was a native of Burlington county, having been born in Pennsville, Camden county, on the Republican ticket by a plurality of 2811. He was re-elected in 1902 and 1907. He was chosen Speaker of the House in 1903, was elected State Senator from his county in 1904 and served until 1906. He was appointed Judge of the Common Pleas Court of Burlington county in 1907 and served until 1914.

BETROTHAL ANNOUNCED

On last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Brown, of Seventh and Linden streets, entertained a number of friends at a birthday party in honor of their daughter Ada Mae Brown. The evening was delightfully spent in games and music. The dining room and table were tastefully decorated, pink and white being the color scheme. A huge log-cabin filled with pink and white carnations and ferns was used for a centre piece and was suspended from the chandelier by ribbons streamers bearing the surprising news of the engagement of Miss Mae Brown to Mr. Percy McAfee, of Poughkeepsie, New York, formerly of Narberth. The guests were Fred Boyersford, Narberth, Philadelphia, Miss Hammonton Lambertville, Riverton and Palmyra. Miss Brown, who is a student of Combs Conservatory, will graduate from that institution in June. The date has not as yet been set for the wedding.

EPWORTH ORCHESTRA, ALTHOUGH DEPLETED, MAKES FINE SHOWING

The concert given by the Epworth Orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. T. M. Griffenberg, at Epworth Temple, last evening, March 1, was a great success. A crowded house, inspiring music and Miss Jennie Weart's recitations made in full, well rounded program. Thursday evening at their regular celebration of their first wedding anniversary. Nineteen guests were present.

Mrs. George Lytle, of Philadelphia, spent Monday and Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Davis, of Delaware street.

Miss Bessie McCullough, of West Philadelphia, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. John Griffenberg, of Morgan avenue, on Sunday.

Mr. Albert C. Giberson and daughter, Miss Evelyn, passed Sunday last with relatives in New York.

Miss Louise Brooke, of Camden, was the week-end guest of Miss Eleanor McCuen, of Parry avenue.

Mrs. Herold Baker entertained on Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Bertha Joyce and Miss Marcia Strickland, who are Palmyra's future brides.

"KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS" MAKE WAR FUND DRIVE

Riverton and Palmyra Urged to Respond Liberally

The following letter from Mr. Charles Wright explains the drive and its object and it is hoped that Riverton and Palmyra will "produce results!"

To the Citizens of Riverton and Palmyra:

From the 11th to the 18th of March, inclusive, there will be a drive for the "Knights of Columbus" War Camp Fund. It is sincerely hoped that our citizens, irrespective of creed, will see the justice of acting as liberally toward this patriotic movement as they have toward similar movements in the past.

How many of us realize the wonderful stimulating effect in the hearts of true patriots to see the influential Catholic church not only sending her sons in such large numbers to sustain the flag and traditions of our beloved country, but to have the church ecclesiastics teach the patriotic necessity of doing so.

Have we not all been stirred to greater devotion to our flag and country by the patriotic teachings of Cardinal Gibbons and others as well as our Protestant clergymen?

If we are for win this war for Democracy, let us forget that we differ in creed, politics or other issues and remember that we are all citizens of a great republic and delegated with the greatest task that has ever confronted us as a nation and help administer to the comfort of our boys in camp by generously supporting this non-sectarian movement, which, like the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross, welcomes all, irrespective of their religious convictions.

Respectfully,
CHARLES A. WRIGHT.

RECORD ANNOUNCES NEW CANDIDACY IN SHORT ORDER

Owing to the unexpected candidacy for the Republican United States Senatorial nomination at the September primaries, at which Gov. Edge and Col. Austen Colgate will also be candidates, Record's announcement assures a triangular contest for this nomination.

He becomes the candidate of the Progressive and Home Rule wings of the Republican party.

In his statement to-day Record condemns the control of the Republican party by reactionary leaders and refers to the domination of the party by men like David Baird in New Jersey and Penrose in Pennsylvania.

Record makes government ownership of railroads and the payment of the war bill by the rich the big features of his platform in the United States Senatorial struggle.

HEART ATTACK BRINGS SUDDEN DEATH

While on Her Way to Visit, Mrs. Williams Falls Dead on Street

Mrs. Mary Peast, wife of Mr. Warren S. Williams, of Elm avenue, while on her way home from a visit with her daughter, Mrs. James Richards, of 609 Washington avenue, on Monday evening, became a victim of heart trouble and fell dead at Broad and Washington avenue.

Her body was discovered by Mrs. Hicks, of Thomas avenue, Riverton, who immediately notified Chief Beck and John E. Morton.

While Mrs. Williams was apparently in good health, she had been under the care of the physician for some time.

The funeral services were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock from her daughter's residence, interment being made in Morgan Cemetery.

LAST OF FIRST ARMY MEN PASS EXAMINATIONS

Privilege of Going to Dix Instead of Southern Camp Withdrawn

Despite the rumors that Hess and Wallace, of Palmyra, who were among the last fifty-three men to go to Dix in filling the last quota, had been rejected owing to physical unfitness, they have all been passed by the Federal examiners.

The last six per cent. of the first draft army left Beverly on Wednesday, in charge of William Mills, of Palmyra, who was one of the number to go to Camp Gettorhorpe, Ga. Joseph Cuglietta, also of Palmyra, was among this quota.

William Strong and Morris Wolf left on Monday for Camp Dix, they having accepted the privilege of giving themselves up in order that they may go to Dix.

Robert Miller, editor, Frederick Rodgers, Wilbur Baird, both of Palmyra, and Charles Williams, of Riverton, left on Tuesday for Camp Dix, where they are now being held subject to 24-hour call when their destination has been decided upon.

Robinson MacMullin, of Riverton, obtained a release from the board to join the ambulance corps.

The examining of men has been now reduced to two days a week, instead of four, Tuesday and Fridays of every week.

Up to this week the examinations reached to 1800, but calls have been made up to the 1800.

While nothing definite could be obtained regarding the calling of other men to camps, it is expected that they will be made from week to week.

The committee representing Palmyra Township with Maurice Schartz as chairman; the Palmyra Red Cross, and the Palmyra Home Guards are to be commended for their thorough cooperation. Every man has left with a complete outfit of the gifts according to the standard set when the last quota was sent to Dix.

BACK TO SOLID EARTH

Counsel for the prosecution and defense had been allowed fifteen minutes each to argue the case. Counsel for the defense had begun his arguments with the allusion to the old swimming hole of his boyhood days. He told in flowery oratory of the balmy air, the singing birds, the joy of youth, the delights of the cool water—

And in the midst of it he was interrupted by the drawling voice of the Judge:

"Come out, Chauncey," he said "and put on your clothes. Your fifteen minutes are up."

RIVERTON SCHOOL PUPILS EXAMPLES OF THRIFT

Junior Red Cross Now Has 100 Per Cent. Membership

At the meeting of the Board of Education of Riverton held on Monday evening, Supervisor Prof. Turner, of the public school, rendered a report on the uplift thrift system of banking which was installed in the school last November.

The February account amounted to $140.86 and 120 bonds issued, making a total to date of $568.30 subscribed and 484 bonds in all. This averages $143.05 a month since its installation, a hard record to beat and one that should serve as an example to show their elders the right spirit of "thrift."

126 pupils have opened accounts at the Cinnaminson National Bank since November and this, together with those previously having accounts, 46, makes a total of 169 out of an enrollment of 290 pupils.

Two new text books were adopted at the meeting on Monday evening by the board, a book for the use of the eighth grade entitled "The Community and the Citizen" and the other for the fourth grade, in history, entitled "Our Ancestors in Europe," this being in keeping with the State requirements.

Indian clubs were also ordered purchased for use in physical training.

Prof. Turner made an astonishing report and announced that the enrollment for the Junior Red Cross was complete, they now enjoying a 100 per cent. efficiency.

A demonstration in music and physical training will be held on Thursday evening, March 21, at the school to which the public is invited. Admission free.

Prof. Turner represented the Riverton Board of Education at a meeting of the Department of Superintendents of the N. E. A., which was held in

ENTERTAINMENT FOR SAMMIES

Governor Edge and Many of Prominence Present

In honor of the visit of Governor Edge and the New Jersey State Legislators to Camp Dix on Monday, a dinner and dance were held in "I" Company of the 311th Infantry, whose members are from Burlington county. The feature of the evening was an entertainment given in the company's recreation room in which a number of prominent Burlington county folks had a part.

The individual success was scored by Miss Esther Cassell, of Philadelphia, who summers in Palmyra. She sang a group of songs which were enthusiastically received by the soldiers and their hundred guests who had gathered for the occasion. The program was arranged by Captain Frederick S. Laing, commander of the company.

Miss Cassell sang Ivor Novello's "Laddie in Khaki," and Sidney Homer's "Banjo Song," and gave as encores Reginal De Koven's "The Naughty Little Clock" and "A Bag of Whistles." Other numbers were furnished by the Mt. Holly Quartette, composed of Messrs. Grigg, Robertson, Slamm and Irons, Harry L. Smith, P. H. Stanton in an original female impersonation, and Bill Haines and Cotton Irons in an amusing skit. Dinner followed the entertainment.

COLLIER HAD THE REMEDY

William Collier, W. L. Abingdon and an English actor were discussing the war problem in the grillroom of the Lambs' Club.

"I think it is your duty to go home and fight," declared Abington.

"It is not for you to say that," retorted the English actor. "You are a British subject yourself."

"Yes, and I tried to enlist," declared Abingdon. "I was ruled out on my age."

"I tried to enlist in the army, too," said the English actor, "but was ruled out on account of my health. The surgeons discovered that I had a floating kidney."

"You ought to have entered the navy," remarked Collier.

Batoum, Karaband and Kars, in Transcaucasia, Are Surrendered—Indemnity of $3,000 Officers and Men and Mass of Munitions Also Taken.

Berlin, via London.—"By reason of the signing of the peace treaty with Russia," says the official communication from headquarters, "military movements in Great Russia have ceased."

The Germans in their advance through Russia have captured, according to the official communication from headquarters, 6,800 officers and 27,000 men, 2,400 guns, 5,000 machine guns, thousands of motor vehicles, 800 locomotives and thousands of railroad trucks.

The official statement says:

Eastern Theater, Front of Prince Leopold of Bavaria.—Operations initiated after the lapse of the armistice terms have led to great successes. Troops under Col. Gen. Count Kirchbach have hastened in their glorious career through Livonia and Esthonia to the support of the oppressed inhabitants. They were accompanied by detachments of troops from the Baltic islands, which were advancing across frozen Moon sound, and also by Esthonian regiments.

Reval and Dorpat have been captured. Our troops have arrived before Narva.

NEWS REVIEW OF THE PAST WEEK

Japan Offers to Land Troops in Siberia If Allies Say the Word.

EMBASSIES LEAVE PETROGRAD

Traveling Through Bandit-Infested Siberia to Reach Safety—Austria Cannot Break Away From Her Alliance With Germany.

Japan has asked for permission to land troops in Siberia to prevent the vast quantities of munitions and other military stores at Vladivostok and along the lines of the Siberian railroad from falling into the hands of the Germans. It was feared that the Germans might attempt to force the Bolsheviki to deliver these stores to the Germans as a part of a peace agreement. Japan announced her willingness to undertake such an expedition by the consent of the associated nations sent by other of the allied nations. The United States and the other co-belligerents which would make the plan of joint action wholly acceptable to all and thoroughly define its extent and duration.

Russian representatives at Washington object to action by the Japanese in Siberia, but the co-belligerents are thoroughly alarmed lest the vast quantities of supplies piled up at Vladivostok, bought and paid for with American cash, should fall into the hands of the Germans.

Criticism at home of the failure of Japan to play a larger part in the war is said to have been influential in bringing about the negotiations.

Our boys have had their first taste of the deadly Hun gas. Without warning of any kind gas shells began bursting among the men of an American artillery regiment on the western front, and more than 200 men were down before they could put on gas masks. Eight men died within a few minutes and 200 were taken to hospitals where they suffered every conceivable torture while the doctors worked over them in an effort to get air into their lungs. While the American troops in France have been supplied with gas engineers and with gas shells for the field guns they had never been used, American commanders feeling that they would not bring themselves to so violate all evidences of civilization by such a method of warfare. The gassing of American troops has, however, convinced our commanders at the front that they must fight the Hun in his own way, brutal and inhuman though that way may be, and the Boches will be given a taste of their own weapons.

The strain between Austria and Germany is undoubtedly increasing. Austria's refusal to again attack Russia in spite of Germany's renewal of the war against the bolshevik has increased the tenseness of the situation existing between the two governments, and it was reported that Germany had practically ordered the Austrian government to send troops into Russia, and that Austria had refused. Austria also refuses to continue the war against Roumania so long as there is a possibility of concluding a peace arrangement with that nation. Poor Roumania, cut off from every possible source of assistance from the outside, without munitions or adequate guns can seemingly do nothing more than accept such peace terms as the Huns may offer.

The most encouraging thing for the future of both Roumania and Russia is the statement made for the allied governments to the effect that any peace that may be forced upon these two countries by the Teutonic nations will not be considered as final, and particularly so if such a peace involves the cession of any territory to the nations of the central powers. The allied nations are committed to the terms of no annexations and no indemnities for Germany or her cohorts. To permit Germany to seize the best provinces of Russia would mean simply preparing the German people for a repetition of their attack on the world's freedom in the future.

The speech of Count von Hertling, German imperial chancellor, before the reichstag, in reply to President Wilson's most recent address before congress regarding the war aims of the United States, is not regarded by leaders in the United States or England as increasing the chance for peace. Count von Hertling professed acceptance of the four principles of a democratic peace enunciated by President Wilson and disclaimed any intention of conquest but these protestations have not convinced President Wilson and his advisers, it is said, that Germany is ready to forgo ambitions of conquest. Other parts of the chancellor's speech are regarded as conclusive proof that Germany intends retaining control, in one form or another, of nearly all the foreign territory that she now occupies.

Count von Hertling's reference to Belgium is far from satisfactory. While hinting that Germany does not contemplate annexing Belgium, the chancellor would restrict the freedom of that country to one distinguished diplomat who declared that von Hertling's speech has effectually closed the door to further peace talk. "Belgium is a question of honor," he declared. "It cannot be discussed. So long as the enemy refuses to do justice to Belgium they cannot be expected to perform justice in any other instances."

While the long-distance debate between the statesmen of the belligerent countries has been looked upon with approval by leaders of thought in this country on the theory that no chance of effecting a peace on terms acceptable to the allies should be overlooked, at the same time there has been a feeling that the continued peace talk may have a harmful effect upon the public morale in the allied countries. There has been a determination in Washington not to permit any peace discussions to delay war preparations for one minute, and the only harmful effect, it is declared, would be upon the spirit of the people.

While there are still conflicting opinions as to whether Germany will undertake a real offensive on the west front this spring, reports coming indirectly from Germany indicate that the German public is being prepared for the tremendous losses that must result if such an offensive is attempted. Dispatches from Stockholm declare that the German high command has given the executive committee of the reichstag the confidential information that the contemplated offensive will cost Germany a million men. For this staggering price, it is declared, General von Hindenburg and General von Ludendorf have absolutely guaranteed success. Leaders of the majority in the reichstag are said to be reconciled to the offensive as the only thing left for Germany to do, but there is a widespread feeling of pity and horror that a million lives should be sacrificed when victory, however great it may be, will not force peace. The Germans, it is declared, at the most, expect that a big military victory will convince America and England that Germany is unbeatable and to make the western world amendable to suggestions for a peace conference.

While the allied commanders realize that the expected German offensive will be a staggering blow to withstand, they are confident that the western line will hold, and that the Hun plans will result in defeat for the central powers. America will soon have half a million men on the western front, England has added nearly half a million more men to her vast army under General Haig, and while the French army is not any larger in numbers than it was, it is stronger in guns and munitions, and the determination of French troops to defeat Germany is stronger if possible, than it was during the long months of the Verdun campaign.

Both the English, the French and the American forces occupy splendid positions throughout practically the entire line. They are in nearly all cases on the high ground, and it is these strong defensive positions against which Germany must throw her shock troops in massed battalions. The price these troops will pay for even an attempt to break through will be terrific, and in all probability more than the million men von Hindenburg has prophesied. It is not likely that even the iron discipline of the German army will withstand such losses.

Possibility of a disagreement between the United States and Spain because of the refusal of the latter country to supply certain war materials to General Pershing was removed by the signing of an economic agreement, under which General Pershing will get mules, army blankets and other materials from Spain in return for cotton, oil and other commodities from the United States. Success of these negotiations was welcomed by officials in Washington as ability to buy supplies in Spain will save ship tonnage, and enable General Pershing to build up his reserve stores more rapidly. The United States was able to bring pressure to bear upon Spain by refusing fuel to Spanish steamers in American ports.

The German invasion of Russia is mysteriously slowed down. The German advance has been stopped on orders from Berlin. At the same time reports from Petrograd were to the effect that the bolsheviki were preparing to make the last possible defense of that city if it was attacked.

On February 28 it was reported from Petrograd that the allied ambassadors had left the Russian capital for Siberia. It is unlikely that they will be able to reach the Pacific coast at Vladivostok in less than close to three weeks, and the probabilities are that they will be seriously molested by the mobs of armed bandits that are roaming the country from the Ural mountains to beyond Lake Baikal. The bolsheviki have practically no control of any kind beyond the Ural mountains, though it claims to have suppressed the so-called Siberian republic.

Every report received from Austria indicates that that country would willingly seek peace on any fairly reasonable basis offered by the allies, if it were possible for her to do so, but she is so dominated by German influence that it is hardly possible for her to break away. The hold of Germany is maintained through the Austrian army which has been very largely Germanized since the war began.

So it is believed that Austria will have to remain in her unholy partnership despite her war weariness. She has lost 3,500,000 men, her food situation is desperate, and the future, even if Germany could win, is dark for her, for a greater Germany would only mean a more impotent Austria, but she cannot break away. She must continue in the war under pain of being stamped on by the nation that has her in its power.

That is how our allies regard the Austrian situation, and is the explanation of their lukewarmness toward the American effort to widen the rift between the kaiser and Emperor Carl.

The German socialists have not taken kindly to the German government's attitude toward President Wilson's last peace message. During the debate in the reichstag on von Hertling's speech Philipp Scheidemann, socialist, took the emperor to task for his reply to the address of the burgomaster of Hamburg, in which the emperor said:

"We desire to live in friendship with neighboring peoples, but victory for the German arms must first be recognized."

"The imperial chancellor frankly stated yesterday that he accepted President Wilson's four principles," said Scheidemann. "This declaration is all the more important when one considers that President Wilson emphasized that his principles were accepted everywhere except by the German military and annexationist party. Well, this party, fortunately, is in this country no longer of decisive importance."

In the house where good men dwell.

HELPFUL IDEAS.

In buying a chicken or fowl it is more economical to buy a large one that one that is small, as the proportion of meat to the bone is greater. The bones may be covered with water after the meat has been served, with a piece of celery, a slice of onion with a bit of rice or barley making a good soup. Any bits of meat may be used in combination with apple, potato or other vegetable for a salad, or used as stuffing for boiled onions and then baked or in a white sauce on toast. Other ways will occur to the progressive woman, to dispose of bits of chicken or other meats making palatable dishes.

Cheese is a food which should be more commonly used. It is highly nutritious, very concentrated and with no waste. Compared to many of our high-priced meats it is economical and a pound of cheese equals two pounds of meat as for food value.

Cornmeal Muffins.—Sift together three times one and a half cupfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one and a half tablespoonfuls of cornmeal, half a teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, then add three-fourths of a cupful of milk, two well-beaten eggs, three tablespoonfuls of melted shortening, mix and beat well, then pour into buttered muffin pans and bake twenty minutes.

Coconut Indian Pudding—Mix together one tablespoonful of fresh grated coconut, two tablespoonfuls of Indian meal, one tablespoonful of minced suet, one-half cupful of molasses, one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of shortening, one quart of milk and salt to taste. Pour into a buttered dish and bake two hours. Serve hot with cream.

Fig and Nut Pudding—Stir a half teaspoonful of salt into two cupfuls of boiling water, add a half cupful of sugar and stir in enough graham flour to make a mush. Cook a half hour, then add a half cupful of chopped figs and a few finely chopped Brazil nuts. Serve with whipped cream. This is an emergency pudding which will be good enough to try again. Raisins or dates may be substituted for figs and other nuts may be used if desired.

The beauty of the house is order, the beauty of the home is quietness.

GOOD EATING.

Those who are fortunate enough to be able to obtain rabbit will not suffer for good, wholesome meat. A rabbit should be hung two or three days, not longer unless kept in cold storage. The age of the rabbit may be told by the paw. If there is a little hard nut in the paw which cannot be easily broken with the thumb and finger, the rabbit is an old one. If it has entirely disappeared and the paw resists pressure it is too old for anything except a stew. When dressing a rabbit there is a thin, membrane which extends from the liver over the intestines. If this is removed the strong flavor which to many is highly objectionable, goes with it, making the flesh delightfully sweet.

Rabbit Fricassee.—A young rabbit is the only kind to use for such a dish. After carefully dressing it cut it up in serving-sized pieces or into quarters and eighths. Roll in highly-seasoned flour and brown in a little hot chicken fat, then simmer until tender and when nearly cooked add cream or rich milk. Cook until a nice gravy is formed, then serve hot with mashed potatoes.

Rabbit With Carrots.—Prepare the rabbit as for a fricassee, and when browned add a quart or less of finely shredded carrots cut in matchlike pieces with a small chopped onion and plenty of seasoning; add water to stew and let cook slowly in the stove or on the back of the stove or in a casserole two or three hours.

Luncheon Dish.—Free left-over fish from bones and skin and flake with a fork. To a cupful allow a teaspoonful of flour with a quarter of a teaspoonful of mustard, a dash of cayenne, a tablespoonful of butter and a few dashes of salt. Rub these ingredients together, adding enough lemon juice to moisten and half fill scallop shells, cover with buttered bread crumbs and set in the oven until well heated through.

Dry cake crumbs make excellent puddings stirred into a custard and baked.

Mr. Urban—I see where the German government put down the labor strike by threatening to shoot all the employees who would not work.

Mr. Suburb (bitterly)—How unjust things are in this world! The law would soon take hold of me if I tried that game with our cook.

WORLD NEEDS

Men are thinking in world terms. The international spirit rises supreme and the welfare of humanity takes precedence over the selfish interests of nations and races.

Too long we thought that the nation was the end as we labored unceasingly to enrich her treasury and advance her interest. Too long we allowed our horizon to be limited by our borders and our sympathies narrowed by her patriotic zeal. In the night of national adolescence the stars did not shine on humanity, but on nations. But now, in the sunlight of maturity, we see the glory of the world and the kinship of man as never before.

What are the outstanding needs of the world to-day?

I. The establishment of a moral, social and economical basis on which men can live together in peace.

Peace is not the ultimate goal of life, but it is a condition which must be secured before we can achieve those things which are highest and best. War takes the farmer from his fields, the mechanic from his bench, the merchant from his office, the artist from his studio and the scholar from his books. It tears the husband from the wife, separates families, destroys friendships and creates a condition in which progress is impossible. Nations must abrogate war as the method of settling disputes if we are to achieve the goal for which we are striving.

But peace is no easy thing to achieve. It is the result of wise thinking and courageous living. It is a plant which grows slowly and only achieves maturity through constant care. Before a man can achieve peace in his own soul he must learn what the things are which make for peace, and with persistent eagerness follow after them until contending forces are harmonized, warring elements adjusted and the whole life fused in a unit. Before permanent international peace can be secured we must be courageous to extirpate the things which make for war and pursue those things which make for peace.

The present world danger is that we may think that peace will be secured simply through suppressing the evil forces which produce war, and forget to build into society those elements which will produce peace. It is just as necessary to-day that we build an international peace platform as it is that we destroy a German war machine. Here is the task which our men of vision and maturity must give themselves to with unabating zeal.

Out of the plague-infested city comes the inspiration for sanitation, and out of the hell and barbarism of war comes the inspiration to work for the things which make for peace. The establishment of a basis upon which nations can live together in peace is a big task. Are we big enough to identify ourselves with it?

II. The world needs a clear conception of the goal of humanity.

President Wilson spoke truth when he said: "The man who succeeds is the man with a program." Men and nations only realize themselves in measure as they perceive the goal of their life. The world will never be headed right until we see the world goal and dedicate ourselves to a world program.

When God created the world He had a dream in His heart of what it would ultimately be. His heart has been saddened by the failure of humanity to measure up to His expectations. But in spite of all, God is still hopeful of the world.

Jesus thought in international terms. He was possessed of God's vision, and worked to establish the kingdom of God and the earth. To Jesus the kingdom meant the appreciation and realization of the ideal by both the individual and the group.

The world needs men who will become dreamers with God. Men who will enter boldly into the sublimental consciousness of the Eternal and infuse into every human endeavor the things that are the goal of humanity and secure the much-needed world program.

III. The world needs an awakening to the fact of God's presence in life.

Many have not the spiritual imagination to conceive of God, and His name is only a word which they use to cover their ignorance. To others God is only a logical necessity in their philosophical interpretations of life. Again others think of Him in terms of an unknowable moral force in the universe which battles to enthrone good in the seat of evil. But those who recognize personality as supreme in the world can never be satisfied with less than the discovery of a personal God.

God was a personal reality to all the great spiritual leaders and moral reformers. In His presence they found manhood and womanhood. And with the call comes the assurance that "God is able to make all grace abound unto you; that ye, having always all sufficiency in everything, may abound unto every good work." (2 Cor. 9:8.)

By the grace of God, and with the aid of the Holy Spirit, with Christ as our guide and supporter, we can climb Jacob's ladder, and live in "heavenly places in Christ." But in order that we may do so we need to have the eyes of our hearts enlightened, that we may know "what is the hope of His calling and what the riches of the glory of His inheritance in the saints," and what the exceeding greatness of His power toward us who believe, according to that working of the strength of His might which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead." (Eph. 1:3, 18-20.)

But if we want to climb up into fellowship with God, we must begin by climbing down out of our vanity and pride and self-assertiveness. We must recognize our own weakness and inherent sinfulness and get a firm grip on the hand of Christ.

And we must remember that we cannot climb selfishly. Spiritual selfishness is selfishness still. If we want to climb, we must help others to climb, and by the very act of helping others we shall obtain help from others.

LISTEN!
Heb. 4:7

"To-day, if ye shall hear His voice, harden not your hearts." God speaks to men in many ways, adapting His methods of communication to the spiritual condition and needs of those to whom He speaks.

In old times He sent messages to the children of Israel through prophets. (Heb. 1:1.) He also spoke to them through angels. (Heb. 2:2.) But they closed their ears and refused to heed the messages of warning and instruction. (See Zech. 7:8-12.) God was very patient and persistent, but at last the time came when patience was no longer possible, and the people who had deliberately and persistently rejected God were rejected by God. "And it came to pass that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they shall cry, and I will not hear, said Jehovah of hosts." (Zech. 7:13.)

To us God has spoken in His Son, through whom He made the worlds, who is the very image of God, and who upholds all things by the word of His power. (Heb. 1:1-3.) And if the Israelites who refused to listen to the voice of God speaking through His messengers were rejected by God, "how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? which, having at the first been spoken through the Lord, was confirmed unto us by them that heard." (Heb. 2:1-4.)

God speaks to individuals by the Holy Spirit, but the voice of the Spirit is a "still, small voice," and it can only be heard by ears that are very attentive.

Just before leaving His disciples Jesus said to them, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now." Howbeit when He the Spirit of truth is come, He shall guide you into all the truth: for He shall not speak from Himself." (John 16:12, 13.) God's most direct and most intimate communications come to us through the Holy Spirit who dwells in every true disciple of Christ.

A BOY NATURALIST

The boy who has a penchant for bugs, insects and reptiles may make a smart man, but he certainly is a disagreeable companion. He generally all his spare time foraging, and he has an unpleasant habit of taking his specimens to school in his pockets.

Such a boy lives in Atlanta, Ga., and recently the teacher found in his desk several varieties of beetles, English sparrows, butterflies, slugs, snails, earthware and lizzards. She bundled the whole collection out of doors, with a severe reprimand, but the very next day she caught him distributing grasshoppers all over them.

"Come here," commanded the teacher to the lover of insects, as she reached for a ferule. "Give me your hand, sir!"

The young naturalist held out his hand, as if he was a martyr to science.

The teacher was about to seize it, when she caught sight of two green eyes and a forked tongue. The boy had a snake coiled around his arm. It was a harmless reptile, but the teacher did not ferule the boy, and she has not felt well since.

WORD OF ADVICE

The nobility and gentry of Little Plowboro were recently gathered in the village schoolroom to enjoy some tableaux vivants by local performers. The curtain was just taken on a really creditable picture of the Death of Nelson, shown to slow music.

"Keep your seats, please," said the stage manager. "We're much obliged for your kind applause, ladies and gentlemen, and we're going to give you the Death of Nelson over again."

"Oh, are yer?" came from a friend of the man who was playing the chief part. "Then, if you'll tell Nelson his kitchen chimley's afire and his wife's jest had a couple o' fits, perhaps he won't die so blessed lingerin'."

The Ministry of Sorrow

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

We have been greatly impressed lately with the value of trouble as a means of opening men's spiritual understanding. Talking with a bank president some time ago, he informed me that he had been ill for several months and that the illness had left him almost totally blind. "I can see that someone is sitting in your chair," he said, "but if it were not for your voice, I should not have the slightest idea who you were." A little later he wrote me, "You left me a poem entitled 'What Does It Mean?' which has been read to me time and again until I have absorbed the spirit of it, if not all the words, and to one who has been so extremely active as myself, and finally has had 'The hindering wall placed before his meet,' the sentiment expressed in the poem has been most helpful, and I want to thank you for leaving it with me."

In a recent letter he says, "For more than a year I have been totally blind. I am not praying so much for restoration of sight, which can never come because of the withering of the optic nerve, but I am always praying with Paul for grace and strength, which I am thankful to say has been given me, and for that sight which Elisha wanted his servant to have, that he might see the hosts the Lord had arrayed on his side for his defense and salvation."

Here is a strong, active business man, so blind that he has to be led about the streets, but whose spiritual eyes have been so opened that he sees far more in this world than he ever saw before.

And what has caused this change? Trouble. Nothing else, probably, could have arrested his attention so effectually and forced him to fix it on things spiritual so long and earnestly that now Jesus has become the sun and center of the universe, the source and sufficiency of his own soul. Truly his "light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

These incidents show what a large and blessed ministry trouble has in opening our eyes to the deeper things of life. We see also why it is that God who causeth all things to work together for good to those who love him, mingles the bitter so plentifully with the sweet.

He knoweth that the natural heart is not inclined toward God, but away from him. We are so busy digging in the dirt for dollars that we will not look up at the Sun of Righteousness until he puts us on our back, where we can only look in one direction, and that upward.

And just as the stars are invisible by day, but shine out in all their beauty when night comes on, so God fills the Bible with special promises, bargain-day attractions to those in trouble.—"For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion. (Literally, in a leafy bower, fragrant, sheltered and cozy.) In the secret of his tent shall he hide me; he shall set me up upon a rock" (Ps. 27:5). So, too, in Ps. 46:1 he says, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help (that is an immediate, right-away help) in trouble."

Psalm 107 tells the sad story of four different classes of people who wandered about by themselves until they were hopeless. "Then they cried unto the Lord in their trouble, and he delivered them out of their distresses." No wonder he exclaims again and again, "Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

In these sad, sad times when trouble is more plentiful than ever before, what a comfort to realize that God is able to use every bit of it as a finger board to point living and dying men to the cross of Christ. Let us keep the promises of God in sight in our homes, schools and places of business, and let us fill our correspondence and conversation with the words of Jesus. I wish some Christian printer would get up a window card containing in fine display God's challenge to people in trouble: "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me" (Ps. 50:15).

We must humble ourselves before God; we must recognize how incapable we are by ourselves of well-doing, how without the help of God all our actions would only be sinful.—Savonarola.

People talk of dying for Jesus. The way to do this is to die to sin; and if you love Christ enough you cannot help doing so.

A man has as much of a place in the kingdom of God as he allows the kingdom of God to have a place in him.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By E. O. SELLERS, Acting Director of the Sunday School Courses of the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.)
(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 10

JESUS RESTORING LIFE AND HEALTH.

(May be used as missionary lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 5:21-43.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR TEACHERS—Matt. 9:27-35; Luke 7:16-17; 11-39; John 3:1-9; 11:1-46; 10:7-18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus restoring the little girl to life.

MEMORY VERSE—Bless Jehovah O my soul, and forget not all his benefits.—Ps. 103:2.

INTERMEDIATE AND TOPIC—Jesus the giver of life.

MEMORY VERSE—John 10:10.

SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—Medical missions.

This is one of the most beautiful stories of the Bible. It appeals to the loving parents' hearts and charms the attention of every child. The introduction of the woman who touched the Master's garment is referred to by three of the gospel writers and gives us an intensely interesting sidelight on the reception accorded to Jesus during his Galilean ministry.

The dramatis personæ is as follows: (1) The Father is about to lose all the poetry and music of life. (2) The Child, twelve years old, is just on the threshold of Jewish womanhood. It takes little imagination to picture how her life had entwined itself about the heart of the father and the other loved ones. The stricken child is still to be found in the land, and it is this background which makes the picture so vivid. Way the suffering? Why the separation? Only our Heavenly Father knows it all, and some day we will read the answer in the glory of his presence. (3) The Woman, who—where from or whither we are not told—only one of a vast throng who had just faith enough to touch the hem of his garment and be made whole. (4) The Galilean Prophet's response to the furtive touch of need was instantaneous, but without the marring movement of haste. We can fancy these characters walking along the highway. Jesus paused as they were interrupted. The woman was healed the moment she touched his garment. What is the meaning of the pause?

Having taught the multitude and encouraged the heart of Jairus, they reached the home, where Jesus excluded all but Peter, James and John, who entered with him into the house of mourning.

Calm Dignity of Jesus.

as he asked, "Why this tumult? the child only sleeps." Their laughing scorn is due to their ignorance of the power of the Mighty Christ in face of the fact that the child was really dead. When he had turned the unbelievers out, Jesus took the father, mother and disciples into the chamber of death. The occasion was not for a spectacular demonstration of power. Having restored the child to life and to its parents, Jesus admonishes them not to publish the news broadcast. Evidently he was not yet ready to precipitate matters in the minds of the multitude. For of a surety the time was certain quarters the fact of the cure would be made known.

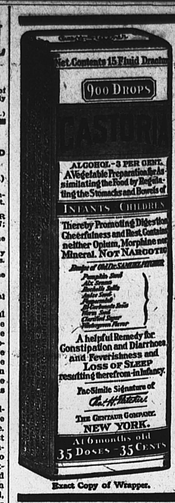

Here is a beautiful picture of love: (1) The Father's love (vv. 22-24). (a) His need; (b) his position "at Jesus' feet" (c) his plea, "I pray thee" (d) his insistence, "besought greatly." (2) The Stranger's Plea (vv. 25-35). (a) An interruption; (b) "Of long standing" (c) Jesus' knowledge; (d) Jesus' response; (e) her confession; (f) her blessing. (3) The Maker's Love (vv. 35-43). (a) Jesus' knowledge; the child was not dead in his sight; (b) delay does not mean refusal; (c) the tender resurrection is answer to faith; (d) the provision for her needs.

Borrow brought Jairus to Jesus. Sorrow today brings more men to Jesus than perhaps any other means. Certainly it has been so during this great war. As the ruler of the synagogue Jairus laid aside his pride and hostility to make his plea for help and accept service of Jesus.

There are three recorded instances where Jesus raised the dead. This story today brings more men to Jesus and apparently easy matter. (2) The "only son" of a widow, when he "stopped the bier." This was apparently attended with more difficulty than that of the little girl, for "she only slept." The raising of Lazarus, a grown man, apparently presented still greater difficulties. Viewed from our human standpoint these difficulties, but with God there are none. His fiat created the time and matter worlds. To ascribe difficulty to God is but to judge him by our standards.

The great need in the foreign field is evangelization supplemented by education and the ministry of healing through dispensaries and hospitals. In the midst of the present war situation let us not forget our responsibility to the unevangelized at home and abroad. Jesus is still the Resurrection and the Life for "sleeping" children, communities and nations.

Why did Jesus spend so much time in working miracles? To impress the value of his life upon the world as a testimony to his divine office, and a prophecy of his authority in his coming Kingdom.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operations.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of Canada has [illegible] States developed first as a [illegible] ever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied. we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

When Johnny was in school one morning the teacher said: "What are the fewest pieces of coin that make eight dollars and seventy cents?"

The pupils were still for a moment, but soon a little boy raised his hand and the teacher said: "Alright, Johnny, what is the answer?"

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Full directions for mixing and use come in each box of Barbo Compound. It will gradually darken streaked, faded gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy, and does not rub off. Adv.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

A shortage of trained nurses confronts the Red Cross and young high school and college women must save the day for the organization in this dilemma. Even though these young women have no expectation of following nursing as a life vocation they may benefit themselves and show their willingness to help when help is badly needed by qualifying to do Red Cross work. The time spent in the nurses' training schools of the country, and the actual nursing, will prove a lifelong asset—broaden the vision and sympathies and make better and more anxious mothers of the girls who undertake such training.

We are to discontinue the knitting of trench caps because the government is to include a trench cap in every man's equipment. And furthermore, we are asked to use the yarn for socks and more socks. The hand-knitted varieties are most satisfactory and even when the upper part is made by machine the stitches may be taken up on needles of the correct size and the foot knitted by hand.

COATS WITH "THROW" COLLARS.

Gauntlet cuffs and "throw" or scarf collars are among the small innovations in coat styles that distinguish them from preceding seasons. Another almost universal feature of new coats is some sort of definition at the waistline which may be either above or below the normal waistline and is oftenmost above. Nevertheless, many of the new coats achieve an almost straight silhouette. Bearing these three peculiarities in mind, it will not be at all hard to acquire an up-to-date coat, for spring styles show no radical departures from those of the winter.

Although the throw is merely a supplement to the spring coat for wear on keen, chilly days, it may be made a style note full of charm. There is a knack to wearing it which all this is adjusting it becomingly. Each of the two coats illustrated here is provided with a throw and one of them is further favored with one phase of the gauntlet cuff. Both are of wool velour, which has proved itself an ideal fabric for coats.

The model at the left is in beige color. It has straight panels down the front and a rather wide girdle set in about the sides and back, defining a long waistline. The skirt of the coat is shirred to the belt with scant fullness. The sleeves are roomy and finished with ample cuffs that are embellished with small buttons. There is a long, rolling shawl collar which may be fastened over the throat. The scarf hangs to the waistline and ends in large, soft tassels. It amounts to an ornament and is pictured with the throat uncovered and the ends hanging at each side of the coat.

NEW FASHIONS

Gray handkerchief linen is used for some of the most distinctive of French hand made blouses.

Cat stitching in heavy silk is in some cases replacing fill ure work on blouses, since it involves less time and labor and is almost as effective.

A novel edging, introduced by Lanvin on some of her blouses, is made of tiny seam beading, cut in half and applied by hand.

Blazer stripes are reported as returning to favor in England for sweaters.

Old-Fashioned Frocks.

Frocks of organdie in combinations that harken back to the fifties give an inkling to what may be expected this season, and illustrated in a model seen of gray organdie, the skirt fulled slightly into the waist is banded at the foot with self color and finished at the top with cord and narrow knife plaitings and cording to trim. A good looking brown and white plaid gingham dress is combined with white organdie and set off with a brown suede belt, which carries it above the rank of the commonplace.

Blouses Without Sleeves.

Pumpkin yellow handkerchief linen is developed into a mannish tucked front, sleeveless blouse to wear with a navy suit, the jacket of which is short and boxlike.

How To Use Them to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

A LETTER FROM THE DOMINICAN SISTERS

Give Grateful Praise to Father John's Medicine

Say They "Find It Most Useful for Colds and a Wonderful Strength Builder"

"We have used Father John's Medicine for colds and coughs and we are certainly willing to advertise its value. The Medicine is most useful for colds, restoring lost strength; in a word a wonderful strength builder. Gratefully (Signed) Dominican Sisters, Oakland Ave., Detroit, Michigan.

This letter, recently received from the Monastery of the Blessed Sacrament in Detroit is another evidence of the value of Father John's Medicine for colds and body building.

Father John's medicine is in use and recommended by various institutions, homes and hospitals throughout the country. Its value has been proved by more than sixty years of success. It is a doctor's prescription and is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form. Because of the fact that it is safe for children as well as older people, Father John's Medicine is used in thousands of homes by careful mothers who have found from experience that it keeps the children well, relieves colds and coughs promptly and builds new strength.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female troubles of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

22 Million Families in the United States

IF EACH FAMILY saved one cup of wheat flour it would amount to 5,500,000 pounds, or more than 28,000 barrels. If this saving was made three times a week, it would amount to 858,000,000 pounds, or 4,377,000 barrels in a year.

You can do your share in effecting this saving and really help to win the war by omitting white bread from one meal today and baking in its place muffins or corn bread made according to this recipe:

Corn Meal Muffins

½ cup corn meal	2 tablespoons sugar
1½ cups flour	No eggs
½ teaspoon salt	1 cup milk
4 teaspoons Royal Baking Powder	2 tablespoons shortening

Sift dry ingredients together into bowl; add milk and melted shortening and beat well. Bake in greased muffin tins in hot oven about 20 minutes. Same batter may be baked as corn bread in greased shallow pan.

Palmyra News

The engagements of Miss Joyce to Mr. Benjamin Hardy, and Miss Strickland to Mr. George M. Durgin, have been recently announced.

—Dorothy M., the eight months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur M. Harman, of Garfield avenue, died on Tuesday morning after an illness of only eight hours of lobular pneumonia. The funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock and in charge of John E. Morton. Interment was made in Morgan Cemetery.

—Miss Elsie Albright, of Morgan avenue, has been confined to her home this week with an attack of tonsilitis.

—The names of Stanley Daniel De Patronski, Order No. 99; Chester K. Goodwin, No. 376; Alex. Bortovitch, No. 394; Tony Avendo, No. 645, and Francisco Pepe, No. 815, were received this week from President Thomas Lee, of the Local Draft Board, for Division No. 2, by Chief of Police Beck, which represents those in Palmyra and Parry who had neither filed questionnaires nor reported for examination. Beck upon investigation said that De Patronski complied with the law and that Goodwin had already sent in his papers. The others were found to have moved without giving a postoffice address and therefore did not receive their copies of the questionnaire.

—Mrs. Harry Anthony, of Edgewater Park, N. J., passed several days here as the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Wright.

—Mr. and Mrs. George J. Seel, Jr., and daughters, Miss Helen and Miss Virginia, attended the fifteenth wedding anniversary celebration of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George J. Seel, Sr., at their home in West Philadelphia on Saturday evening.

—Mr. and Mrs. G. Harold Baker left to-day to spend the week-end with his parents in New York.

—Perry Dover (colored) chauffeur for Isaac Ferris, of Merchantville, N. J., through negligence and fast driving, ran into and mashed one of the electric traffic posts at Cinnaminson avenue and Broad street, on Wednesday. He was held in custody by Chief Morris Beck and was given a hearing before Recorder Hires and fined $10. Paul Wolfschmidt's barber shop proved to be the nearest place for it was that place that the Recorder was found.

—In a recent letter received at this office from Private R. H. Hickey, who is now confined at the base hospital at Camp Meade, recuperating from an operation, he expresses his gratitude and appreciation of the wonderful care tendered him by the Red Cross during his illness and trusts that they will receive the hearty support in all their efforts by the Palmyra people. In reading the "Record" he becomes informed of the boys from Palmyra who recently left for Camp Dix, and extends to them his wishes for their safe and speedy return.

—Mrs. Walter Smith, wife of Manager Smith, of Pine's drug store, underwent a serious operation on Wednesday at the Kensington Hospital for Women. It proved to be very successful and Mrs. Smith's recovery is looked for shortly.

—Mr. and Mrs. John Rosselle, of Philadelphia, motored here on Sunday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Seel, 3rd.

—All Odd Fellows of this vicinity, whether affiliated with Cinnaminson Lodge No. 201, of Palmyra or not, are invited to attend with them Saturday evening in their lodge room, when they will entertain their members' wives and sweethearts in celebration of their thirty-fourth anniversary. There will be noted speakers, national and State officers present and an excellent entertainment awaits every one.

—The Board of Directors of the Field Club held their regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mr. James T. Weart on Monday. Following the transaction of the business, Mr. Weart entertained them socially and the evening being conclusively ended by the serving of a tasty collation.

—Mr. A. C. Giberson and daughters, Miss Evelene and Miss Charlotte, have suffered attacks of tonsilitis this week.

—A cordial invitation is extended the public to attend a free lecture on New Thought, which will be delivered by Mrs. M. L. S. Butterworth, secretary of the National New Thought Alliance for New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, on Thursday evening, March 14, at 8 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. George M. Becker, 731 Morgan avenue, Palmyra. The subject of Mrs. Butterworth's lecture will be "The Science of Being."

—Mrs. Allen, of Philadelphia, is being entertained as the house guest of her daughter, Mrs. William Strimple, of Cinnaminson avenue.

—The young son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ballangee, while reconnoitering near the marsh land of the Charles Shaffer farm, near Fork Landing, Saturday, found a body of a man, who had supposedly been drowned. He notified Chief Beck and Officer Grubb, who made an investigation and found the body to be that of Charles Fisher, of Philadelphia, who was employed on the Shaffer farm. From Fisher's despondent mood of late and with other evidence his death was thought to be due to suicide. He is survived by a widow, who resides at 501 Fairmount avenue, Philadelphia. Coroner Belton took charge of the body. The burial was made at Bethel Cemetery on Thursday.

HAD HIM

Senator Simmons was discussing the proposed war tax on automobile owners.

"Making war taxes," he said, "isn't pleasant work. It puts one in the position of the facetious spinister at Ocean Grove who took a little girl on his knee, and said:

"'I don't love you, Nellie.'

"All the ladies on the breeze-swept veranda laughed, but little Nellie frowned, and said:

"'You've got to love me. You've got to.'

"'Got to? How so?' loughed the spinster.

"'Because,' said Nellie, stoutly, 'you've got to love them that hate you—and I hate you, goodness knows.'

MADE A DIFFERENCE

"In Indian Justice of the Peace in the United States had a very exalted opinion of the responsibility which rested upon him to command respect for the law at all times.

There was a neighbor of this justice, named Jim Waller, whose farm was just over the line in Ohio, a fence marking the exact division.

One day, when the justice was passing Waller's home, he observed Waller and an Ohio neighbor engaged in an argument.

The justice approached them, ordering on the scene just as they clinched. Springing upon the fence so as to be out of harm's way, he waved his umbrella in the air and shouted:

Just at that moment the fence gave way and the justice was precipitated to the ground. He fell on the Ohio side, and as he was struggling to get up he shouted to Waller:

"You, Jim Waller, Jim; I'm out of my jurisdiction!"

NOT AN ATHLETE

Two Irishmen, who had been boys together in the same village, did not see each other for several years. They responded to the brother hitch-ad," said Pat; "he's turned out a fine athlete, and has just won a gold medal for a hundred yards' sprint."

"Good for him," replied Dennis; but do you mind my uncle Maguire of Kilmore?"

Pat was not quite sure that he had ever heard of him.

"Well," resumed Dennis, "he's got gold medals for half a mile, five miles and ten miles; three silver cups for swimming, a marble clock for wrestling, two silver belts for boxing, and a heap of prizes for cycling."

DISAPPOINTED

"My bride is disappointed about housekeeping."

"What's the trouble?"

OLD-TIME TOASTS

The habit of proposing toasts in the form of epigrams has now fallen into disuse, but in the early days of the last century it gave birth to many a pretty conceit, such as the following:

May religion and civil liberty go hand-in-hand. May difference of opinion never divide friendship. Sense to win a heart and merit to keep it.

May he who wants friendship want friends.

May our principles be upright and our morals pure. Good luck till we are tired of it!

May love and reason be friends, and beauty and prudence marry.

Ability to serve a friend and honor to conceal it.

May the poor merit esteem and the rich veneration. May the rich be charitable and the poor grateful. May we never dread the crime of being poor.

The hand that gives and the heart that forgives.

THE GENTLE REBUKE

When a wealthy man who was stopping at a Florida hotel neglected to inquire the hotel rates, the proprietor took advantage of the oversight and at the guest's departure presented an exorbitant bill.

The guest, however, paid without a murmur. Then he said, as he folded up his receipt in his wallet:

"By the way, have you any two-cent stamps?"

"Yes, sir," said the proprietor. "How many would you like?"

The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon at his late residence, and interment was made in Morgan Cemetery.

—On Monday, March 11, while alighting from an eastbound trolley at Riverton station on her way to the bank, Miss Miriam Moore, daughter of the late Charles and Marian Moore was run into and knocked down by a runaway pony, which was frightened by a train. Miss Moore was immediately removed to the Riverside Hospital, where she received prompt attention, but never regained consciousness, and died at that institution on Tuesday, 12th inst., in her seventy-second year. The funeral services were held this afternoon from her late residence, 519 Garfield avenue. Interment in Morgan Cemetery.

—Mr. James M. Weart has received orders to report for duty in the U. S. Public Service Reserves on Monday, 18th. While it is not known where he will be stationed, it is thought that his duties will be abroad.

Mrs. William Strang is confined to her home on Linden avenue this evening in honor of Miss Grace Rush, of Horsham.

—Lieutenant Dr. Charles F. Voorhis returned from Camp Alfred Vale, Little Silver, New Jersey, on Saturday last in a very serious condition and is still confined to his home on Fourth and Cinnaminson avenue. In writing his condition is somewhat improved.

—Mrs. Clarence Shreve will entertain the Sewing 500 at her home at their next meeting on Thursday, March 28.

—Miss Eleanor Day will entertain the next Junior 500, which will convene on Wednesday afternoon next at her home on Broad street.

—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gibbon and Mrs. R. W. Gilpin will be guests of friends in Tioga on Sunday.

—The resignation of Miss Rebecca Stiles at the exchange, which will take effect on Saturday, we will greatly miss her congenial "number please" and her perpetual "telephone smile."

—Mrs. Watson Mervine will entertain at 500 on Saturday afternoon, March 23, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunt, of 539 Morgan avenue.

—A novelty shower was tendered Miss Rebecca Stiles at her home on Tuesday evening by the members of her Sunday school class, when she was the recipient of many useful and handsome gifts. Miss Stiles's marriage will take place on March 26.

—Mr. and Mrs. Yockel and daughters, Misses Dorothy and Pauline, of Philadelphia, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Bellerjeau at their home on Monday evening and Sunday.

—The Junior Red Cross dance, the second of the season, will be held in the High School auditorium on Friday evening next.

—The Stitch and Chatter Sewing Circle will meet at the home of Mrs. Elvin Powell, of Sixth street, on Thursday next.

NEW LABOR LAWS NOW IN FORCE

To Be No Work Slackers in This State, Sound of Gov. Edge's Proclamation

In accordance with the proclamation of Governor Edge, putting the compulsory-work law into effect, State Commissioner of Labor Bryant has set down rules for the guidance of Sheriffs, Mayors and other officials in enforcing the act.

All males between eighteen and fifty must hereafter have habitual and regular employment, with these exceptions:

(A) Students and persons fitting themselves to engage in trade or industrial pursuits.

(B) Persons temporarily unemployed by reason of differences with employers.

(C) Such seasonable or other regular employments as require in the proper discharge of their duties less than minimum number of thirty-six hours indicated in this act.

The assignment of positions will be made to those now idle with due consideration to their physical and general capabilities, but preference will be given to such activities as may seem the more essential during the stress of war conditions, including

(A) Agricultural and horticultural work of all kinds.

(B) Cannery work of all kinds, including all industries directly concerned in the manufacture and preservation of foodstuffs.

(C) Work of all kinds in shipyards.

(D) Work of all kinds in concerns interested in the manufacture of war munitions.

(E) Work of all kinds in concerns interested in the manufacture of any goods required by the Government in connection with the prosecution of the present war.

(F) Work of all kinds in connection with State, county and city roads and bridges.

Compensation will be paid at no less than the wage or salary afforded to others engaged in the same nature of work at that to which each person is assigned, and the number of hours required for work under this act shall not be fixed at less than the number of hours per day lawfully constituting a day's work in the occupation to which such person is required to engage.

WM. WOLFSCHMIDT DIES SUDDENLY

Acute Gastritis Claims One of Riverton's Oldest Residents

On Sunday, March 10, William Wolfschmidt passed away at his home, 613 Main street, of acute gastritis in his sixtieth year. Although he had been suffering for over a week and had several attacks, he was not entirely confined to his bed, and on the evening before his death was in his place of business attending to his affairs. Mr. Wolfschmidt has been a resident of Riverton for thirty-four years and was well known. He held membership in Camp 23, P. O. S. of A., Shepherds of Bethlehem, No. 11; Court Riverton, F. of A., No. 98. The funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Rev. Robert K. Stanfield, pastor of the Moravian Church, officiating. Interment was made in the Moravian Cemetery, Riverside.

When a London bank recently added to its business a branch on the "savings bank" principle, the act, as may be imagined, did not escape our canny neighbors across the Tweed. One morning a dour Scot arrived at the bank, and after depositing a quarter, asked if the establishment took care of parcels.

"Oh, yes—we'll look after your parcel," said an obliging cashier.

Two days after the Scotsman returned.

"I'll have my quarter," he said. He received it. "An' ma parcel." This, too, he got. Then, as he shook the cashier by the hand, he remarked: "I'm verra grateful—your bank's saved me two days' cloakroom fees!

HOME GUARD GUNS HAVE ARRIVED

Long Looked For Equipment Puts Finishing Touches in The Military Appearance of the Guard

The Palmyra Home Guards after months of eye straining and hopeful anticipation have now received their assignment of fifty guns, belts, bayonets and scabbards. They distributed them for the first on Tuesday evening at their drill, which seemed to add new life to the members and created a renewed enthusiasm.

This now makes their uniforms complete and they can enjoy the full realization of what it means to handle a "real" gun, instead of "canoefrags" ones they have been using.

All members not being present on Tuesday are asked to apply to Lieut. P. G. Mahon, at his home, 736 Parry avenue, for their equipment.

The guards will meet at Palmyra station on Sunday morning at 9 o'clock and take a hike to the drilling grounds back of the stand pipes. Here they will unite with Riverton and under the leadership of Capt. Frishmuth will undergo field maneuvers and possibly will indulge in gun practice, as several rounds of ammunition have been obtained.

All members that can are asked to be on hand at 9 o'clock.

DRAFT BOARD TO FINISH EXAMINATIONS NEXT WEEK

The draft board for the Local District No. 2 have had a much easier time lately, following their rush of several months past. They have been real busy making examinations of class 1-A men, but will have this completed next week.

Up to this writing the board knows nothing in respect to additional men being called for camp, but it will only be a matter of a few days when they will receive their orders.

REV. E. A. ROBINSON COMES TO M. E. CHURCH

Will Preach His Sermon of Welcome on Sunday

Rev. E. A. Robinson, former pastor of the First M. E. Church, of Millville, N. J., has been assigned to the pastorate of the Epworth M. E. Church, of Palmyra, during the recent conference and will preach his initial sermon at the services on Sunday.

Mr. Robinson comes with an excellent recommendation and the high esteem of his former congregation. He is a most entertaining and forceful speaker, possessing a pleasing personality, and we feel confident that he will be received here with the same enthusiasm and attitude as has been his pleasure of receiving wherever he preaches.

The "Record" extends to Mr. Robinson a hearty welcome and the key to Palmyra on behalf of its residents.

In celebration of this occasion the choir, which since its organization has been under the directorship of Mr. T. M. Griffenberg, will sing special music when thirty voices will be represented.

W. C. T. U.

Every lady invited to join the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. All members urged to attend the Tuesday afternoon meetings. The Warren County License Court has been asked to refuse the thirty-six applicants because America at war has no necessity for saloons. In Hoboken several saloon proprietors and bartenders were sentenced to three terms for violating the law for selling liquor to soldiers and sailors. Mothers are being asked to sacrifice their sons for a just cause. For this reason the Federal mandate must be observed. Saloonkeepers and barkeepers in Jersey had all better hunt

THIEVES MAKE A VISIT TO PALMYRA

Leave Town After Entering Four Homes—Get But Little Booty

During the early hours of Sunday morning Palmyra was stormed by thieves.

What kind or to the extent of their experience has puzzled the police authorities, as in several instances they overlooked considerable valuables, silverware, etc., and have taken but loose change, wearing apparel or other small or insignificant articles that would be passed unnoticed by professional men.

The places entered were: Quinn's grocery store, which was ransacked but nothing taken. The home of Thomas Tedley, of Sixth and Arch street, was entered by forcing a window. Here they took four bananas and a dish of salmon salad. Through an unlocked window at the home of Frank Windish they managed to enter and take a silver watch and two caps.

Not being satisfied with this as a complete night's work they traveled to the home of William Becker on Morgan avenue. They found here an unlocked window and entered, taking with them on their leave a felt hat, a pocketbook containing one dollar in change, a pipe and a small box of tobacco.

While their methods were liken to amateurs, yet they were evidently professional to some extent, for they evaded the Palmyra police all during their daring visits.

THE SIGN OF THE RED CROSS

Y. M. C. A. Building, Broad and Garfield Avenue

(By Margaret M. Williams)

"Interminable folds of gauze,
Endless bandages I weave,
Socks and sweaters, shirts and wristlets
Must I make for you and me?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than these whitened hills for you and me?
Sisters, sisters, who are watching
Where the lights are burning low,
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the service we bestow?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the bandages we weave,
Than the sweaters and the wristlets
Which we make for you and me?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the socks we fashion so,
Than the shirts and the supplies
Which to you we always sew?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the comforts we bestow?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the service we bestow?
Is there nothing else to offer
Than the bandages we weave,
Than the sweaters and the wristlets
Which we make for you and me?"

RIVERTON NEWS

—Joseph Pippitt, of the U. S. Marine Corps, stationed at Quantico, Va., spent the week-end here.

—The Riverton Fire Company was called out on Sunday evening last to a fire near the Dreer Nursery. A field had caught on fire and was threatening property in that vicinity.

—The Riverton Home Guards will take a hike and will indulge in field maneuvers on Sunday morning. They will leave at 9 o'clock. The officers have now received their swords and are "cutting" quite a figure.

—Word has been received from Duncan Cuthbert, of the Engineers Corps, stating that he has arrived safely in France.

—Lieut. A. P. Nicholson, of Midway, moved to Beverly this week.

—The son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Keen is reported having made a safe journey across the river and now is becoming acclimated to the conditions in France.

—A "sunshine service" will be held in the Calvary Presbyterian Church on this Sunday evening. The topic will be "The Art of Living With Others." It will be in charge of Mr. Dates Reed and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

—A card party will be given for charity in the Porch Club on Tuesday afternoon next, under the direction of Mrs. H. B. Hall, of Fourth street.

"To The Patriotic Citizens"

And This Means Every Resident of Palmyra and Riverton

As you doubtless know there is a

To serve our own, that keeps us clean
From shame that other women know.
Oh, saviors we have never seen,
Forgive us that we are so slow!
God—if that blood should cry in vain
And we have let our moment go!"

No stronger plea for real workers could be made than this little poem, written by Amelia Burr. Many helpers are needed for our Palmyra Branch Red Cross. There is much work to be accomplished and at the present time only a few consistent workers to do it. We trust every Palmyra woman's heart will be touched by the appeal and that she will respond in full lines, so that she may be inspired to throw off her apathy and gird herself with a new and determination to do her share. There have been many wounded American boys who have just come back to America and are now lying in a Long Island hospital. Some are blind, some are deaf and many of them deprived of their limbs, and this is only the beginning.

Our American boys and their mothers are the ones who are making the sacrifices. Surely we should back their sacrifices by self-denials, which after all are not conducive to great mental and physical anguish.

According to the report on February 13 the Palmyra branch sent to the chapter at Burlington a box containing 748 articles.

Work completed for month ending March 4, is as follows: 86 knitted sweaters, 144 socks, 1 knitted helmet, 1 quilt, besides 83 ear muffs sent to Camp Dix on February 15. Bandage department, 544 articles, including flannel, abdominal and triangular; 544 gauze articles, which includes 100 rolls, squares and strips. The garment department has credit for completing 28 garments, such as pajamas, hand shirts and 16 helpless case shirts. For the babies 16 complete layettes were finished.

One hundred and seven dollars and thirty-seven cents was Palmyra's share of the proceeds from the dance given by the Riverton and Palmyra Masonic Association, and $35.85 was cleared from the card party given by Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Parish for the benefit of the layette fund, making a total of $50.90, which has been collected for this fund. Old flannel petticoats will be gratefully accepted, as they can be used in this department to advantage.

"That man is so honest he wouldn't steal a pin," said the admiring friend.

"I never thought much of the pin," answered Miss Cayenne. "Try him with an umbrella!"

We require young men to leave their homes, enter cantonments and ultimately go to Europe, sacrifice their life, if necessary, in this war, in order that your property, and property, your life, my life, shall be protected and also insure that President Wilson's dream that hope that it shall be made safe for democracy be realized.

Many of these young men are accustomed to religious worship that necessarily requires insignia and paraphernalia, all of which they think they require essential to their spiritual comfort.

Could we expect them to come to Christ? No, we wish them to! We wish to convince you of the necessity of at least two organizations like the Y. M. C. A. where the spiritual and other comforts of our young men can be administered and have these young men given all that they enjoy at home, or at least endeavor on our part to aid in procuring them, and if we agree that this object is a laudable necessity, how can it be obtained in their case except through the offices of the K. of C.? I believe, if we are to win the war, both organizations are absolutely essential, notwithstanding the kindly feeling and hearty co-operation existing between them.

Would not the best interest of our Government, in this war, be obtained through the co-operation of every man's religious views, and to facilitate him enjoying these views as freely as the circumstances will admit?

You doubtless have been a student of the history of the British Empire. You will perceive that we agree with me that the secret of their success is the great tolerance and respect shown by the Crown to many and various religious beliefs practiced in the colonies under their dominion.

It is a phase of the subject rather foreign to an American and the quicker we see the necessity and cultivate a feeling of conciliation in this respect the further along we will be in our great aim to win this war for democracy.

Let me prevail upon you to give this matter great thought and on analysis of it, I think you will agree with me that this movement of the K. of C. should receive your hearty support and I trust you will make your contribution as generous as possible, recognizing that we should be as liberal towards this movement as we have been in the past towards similar movements.

Respectfully yours,
CHARLES A. WRIGHT,
General.

11 DIE, 46 HURT IN LONDON RAID

MANY HOMES ARE WRECKED.

Northwestern Section, Chiefly Residential, Scene of Worst Damage—Two of Seven Planes Get Over Metropolis.

London.—Eleven persons were killed and 46 others were injured in an airplane raid upon London, according to the latest police reports, says an official announcement. It is feared that an additional six bodies are in the ruins of houses wrecked.

There was a remarkable display of the northern lights during the night, and it is believed by many that this furnished conditions under which the air raiders could work more effectively than under a clear, star lit sky. Watchers on the Kent coast said that just before they heard the raiders approaching the whole northern sky became illuminated in bands of red and white light, which shone over the sea with far more powerful effect than the bright moon. Then, as if to accentuate the brightness by contrast, the skies to the southward toward France and the English channel grew what seemed to be pitch dark.

Another feature of the raid was the strong breeze, which most persons believed hindered the operations of the hostile airplanes. Those who watched from high points the spectacle of the searchlights and gun flashes wondered how the enemy could face the wind and cold.

The greatest damage in London was inflicted in the northwestern section, where four bombs demolished several houses. All the damage and casualties in this district were confined to two parallel streets, although, as usual, windows were broken for a radius of several blocks. A single raider appeared over this area. Hundreds of persons were just preparing to desert their homes, most of which are three story buildings, for the more substantial shelter of the two nearby subways when the bombs began to fall.

The first bomb made a square hit on a three story dwelling of concrete and brick, crashing through two floors before it exploded. While the police [illegible] near by in [illegible] lances arrived speedily, and notwithstanding the confusion the rescuers worked effectively under the anti-aircraft barrage. For 20 minutes after the bombing of this district the barrage was continued.

Several persons were killed by the destruction of private houses in northeastern London. The house of a vicar was partly wrecked, but the clergyman escaped. He is a special constable and had left home for duty when the warning came a few minutes before the explosion which damaged his residence. The vicar worked throughout the night, assisting the wounded and homeless neighbors.

A bomb which fell in a northern suburb destroyed two houses and damaged the windows of every residence in the street. Doors were wrenched from the hinges and chimneys collapsed.

Rescuers, who included Red Cross women, continued into the daylight hours to pull living persons from the wreckage of their homes. In one district two aged women, clinging to each other's arms, were dug out alive, while at midday an elderly man was brought out suffering only from bruises. He had been buried with his wife and daughter, who early had been extricated and who had thought him dead. As he was placed in an ambulance the onlookers cheered.

AN OLD SCOTTISH COVENANTER

One of the first railways laid in the North Britian connected the ancient city of Perth with Aberdeen. In Chambers' Journal there is a pleasant picture of a stanch covenanter at Whinnyknowe who was subjected to a loss that called for compensation from the railway company, William Reid, there is reason to doubt, who gave careful consideration to the question of injury, and when the railway official waited upon him he had decided the exact amount of the damage that he had suffered.

The official told the farmer that the company was agreed to allow him the sum of one hundred pounds in recompense.

"A hundred pounds!" exclaimed the old covenanter. "I winna touch it. I have considered the matter and I have made up my mind as to what I should get. I winna tak' a hunder."

"I would strongly advise you to accept," replied the offical. "You are not likely to get more. I think the directors have been generous."

"Too much so! too much so!" I'll hae forty pounds and not a penny more."

"Oh, is that the trouble?" was the laughing response. "Well, here is the order for one hundred pounds, which you will receive when you call at the office at Perth.

William Reid accepted the order, and a week later presented it at the company's office. A clerk asked him to sign a receipt, and this the farmer did for forty pounds.

"You are to receive one hundred pounds, not forty," said the clerk, counting out the money.

The old farmer was angry. I told your man," he cried, "that I would tak' forty and not a penny more; and I will not have it. I want nae man's silver that I've nae richt to!"

A LION HUNT

To the "tenderfoot" a mountain lion scarcely seems to be a beast that one can afford to be familiar with, but among hunters who know his traits there are some at least who hold him in scorn. One such is Mr. M. H. Bakker who describes in Outdoor Life how he captured four of the big cats for an Eastern "zoo."

I had heard, he says, that there were some lions near Troy, Montana; and so Charlie Wood and I bought food enough to last us four or five days, and started out to look for tracks. Finally we found a track two or three days old and set our dogs on it. Before long, they were out of hearing, but we followed their trail for about a mile and came to where three other lion tracks joined the one they were on. We traveled as fast as we could through the snow, and every time we reached a divide we listened for the dogs, but could hear nothing. We knew that they would never quit until they had every lion up a tree, and that they would hold them there until we came even if it took us two or three days.

At two o'clock the next afternoon we stopped at the top of a mountain to listen, and we could hear the dogs giving tongue about halfway down the other side. In an hour we were down to where the dogs were and found that they had two half-grown lions in large fir trees. They had held them there all night. After we had fed the dogs Charlie cut me a pole about six-teen feet long, and I went up the tree where the first lion was and put a wire loop round his neck with a long rope tied to it. We pulled him out, put a collar round his neck and chained him to a big pine tree, just as you would tie a dog. Then we went to the tree where the dogs had left the other lion; but just as I was near enough to put the wire noose round his neck, he got uneasy, and down the tree he came. Away he went with the dogs at his heels. After running about seven hundred rods the dogs treed him, and I tried the same tactics again. This time he was not so spry, and I put the wire round his neck. We tied him also to a tree

That night we stayed at a ranch house, and at daylight the next morning went back to where we had tied the last lion. We found that he had broken the chain near the collar and escaped. When we turned the dogs loose on his track they led us up the mountain to a deer carcass where we found the tracks of two other lions. Pretty soon the dogs barked "treed," and we captured another lion, which we took down and tied in the barn at the ranch, because the day had turned snowy.

The next day we returned to the place where the lions had killed the deer and found two sets of tracks in the snow—one leading up the mountain and the other down. The dogs took the latter track, and in less than fifteen minutes they had the lion up a tree. We captured him in the same manner as before, but he was a very big one, and so I just put him in my pack sack and carried him down the hill to the place where we had seen the other track. The dogs were only a few minutes treeing this lion, which was the one that had escaped with our collar. This time he climbed as high as he could, but I followed and caught him with the wire. We hired a wagon and team and took the four lions to Troy, where we boxed them for shipments to an Eastern "zoo."

Flinty—It's a shame, Bill, to think that anyone would swindle a poor, hard-working man in that way.

Stubble—Why, what's wrong wi' yer now?

Flinty—Wrong! Why, here I worked hard for half a day painting up a sparrer inter a Belgian canary, and I'm blowed if the fellow I sold it to didn't give me a bad half-crown for it!"

SEEKING ETERNAL SOURCES

"Seeking Eternal Sources." The text was from John iv:14: "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up into eternal life."

There are sayings of Jesus of which this is one of such astounding sort as to compel attention of any person who thinks at all. Such words as these carry such measureless meaning, make such limitless claim, utter such wondrous promises that no right-minded man can disregard them. The truth they declare is of such significance and value that to ignore it is to be self-confessedly unable to appreciate the realities of life's need or the marvel of the divine meaning of that necessity; to deny it is to seek to take away humanity's greatest resource and most precious possession.

These mighty words declare that Christ has power and readiness to give and that men have power to receive such gifts of spiritual resource and empowering that the only adequate expression of it is in a figure of speech comparing this inner enrichment and equipment to an unfailing spring of living water and ceaseless flow.

"The most imperative need of any age, and superlatively of this merely tired and burdened and perplexing age, is this need of the inner life.

But deeper than this outer necessity is the inner need. The demand of the hour is, first of all, for men, and for men of poise, of control; of self-discipline. And these men themselves need daily mental and spiritual equipment for their tasks; they require constant, unfailing, ever-renewed inner provision of courage and devotion and energy and loyalty and faith.

It is just this that Christ promises. Do not dislocate this great text, this glorious promise from the lives we live. Let us have it when and where we most desperately need it, and let us believe it and receive it in all its precious reality.

Christian faith is at its best when it confronts great obstacles, when it meets great demands, when it proves itself equal to great occasions.

Here is the truth which we need to understand and hold fast: If we desire to have an outer life of richness and power it must be nourished by and spring from a rich inner life. We recognize the demand of the age for achievement, but what we sometimes fail as clearly to see is that this outer demand can never be adequately met except as the deep inner sources supply purpose and power.

No individual man or woman of us can ever achieve more largely or nobly than is made possible by his own secret valuations, his own inner compulsions, his own visions and his own faith.

No age has ever needed real religion more than ours, and perhaps never in all our lives will there be greater need than that we now experience and shall experience in the crucial months just ahead. Men and women are almost certain to be overwhelmed by anxiety and perplexities and sorrows unless and until they find rest and peace and strength in God.

"The world of Thomas a-Kempis was poor because having such inner wealth it used it in such inadequate fashions, and our world is poor because having such demands for inner wealth we are forgetting how to create it."

And just this has been and is Christ's incomparable gift to the world, this gift of inner wealth, of inner resources, this gift of the inner water from overflowing springs.

We shall never understand Christ Himself save as we behold the glory of His own inner life. It was here that the true Christ was made manifest, and it is here that we shall see him in His glory. Not only in His mighty deeds and words, not only in His acts of power, not only in His

WHAT CAN WE DO FOR OURSELVES?

Eph. 4: 13

The most valuable possession any one can have is himself, and the value of any one to himself depends entirely upon his character and his capabilities. Therefore the boy or girl who is anxious to get the most and best out of life must give diligence to make the most and best out of himself or herself. Every one who imagines that a man's life consists in the abundance of the things which he possesses is making a terrible mistake. (Luke 12: 15.) It is a mistake which will cost him dear if he does not change his mind and make it his chief aim to be what he ought to be and to do what he ought to do.

There is no limit to the greatness to which any disciple of Christ may attain by the aid of the Holy Spirit, except such limits as may be imposed by lack of earnestness and wholehearted determination. If we do not attain to a full-grown manhood in Christ, "unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" it will not be because God has not made it possible for us to do so. But if we desire to attain to "the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" we must cherish the spirit of Christ, we must study the character of Christ and strive to become like Him in thought, words and deeds, for our character is the concentrated essence of our thoughts, words and deeds.

The outward things of life—possessions, power, social position—will pass away, but our character and our record will remain. We shall all be judged by our work, but our work itself will be judged by the motives behind it and by the spirit in which it was done.

MAKE PEOPLE LOVE YOU

Rom. 12: 3, 4; 1 Peter 3: 8, 9

A lady who lived near the writer remarked one day that she believed in making good neighbors, and her method of making good neighbors was to be a good neighbor. Every one knows that kindness and friendliness and considerateness are attractive qualities in others, but it is not always easy to practice these virtues, and most of us are far too ready to excuse ourselves from practicing them whenever we feel like uttering unkind words or doing unkind deeds. It is much easier to find fault with others than it is to control our own impulses and bring our thoughts "into captivity to the obedience of Christ" (2 Cor. 10: 5.)

Of course, it is always the other person's fault, when there is any friction or unpleasantness in the family circle, or in school, or anywhere else where people are brought into close contact with each other. At all events, that is the honest belief of the persons between whom there is friction; so let us assume that such is the case, what then?

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ." (Gal. 6: 2.) "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." If we feel strong in the assurance of our own rectitude, and think that some of those with whom we are associated have not learned to overcome their faults, then it is our duty to help them; not by quarrelling with them, but by gentleness and kindliness. "Let each one of us please his neighbor for that which is good unto edifying. For Christ also pleased not Himself." (Rom. 15: 1-3.)

"He long suffering toward all. See that none render unto any one evil for evil, but always follow after that which is good one toward another, and toward all." (1 Thess. 5: 14, 15.)

But it is impossible to act rightly if one does not act from right impulses. An assumed attitude of forbearance, or of patient endurance of wrong, may be much more offensive than the sharpest kind of fault finding. And it may be the exhibition of a much uglier spirit. There is nothing Christlike about any attempt to poise as a martyr. It is only by learning to cherish kind thoughts that we can be really kind in word and act. "Be tenderly affectioned one to another; in honor preferring one another. Rejoice with them that rejoice; weep with them that weep." (Rom. 12: 10-15.)

QUICKLY FULFILLED

Ended were the gay days of the honeymoon, and the newly-married couple had come back, crossing the threshold of their new home for the first time as man and wife.

Just inside the doorway the man paused, drew his bride closely to him, and whispered:

"This is our world, darling! In it we will try to accomplish great things."

He was proved a true prophet by subsequent events. Within three months they were fighting for the world's championship.

Our Daily Bread

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL
Assistant Dean, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Give us this day our daily bread.—Matthew 6:11.

This petition takes a new meaning today when the world's food supply is limited. How blessed that "our Father" is interested in such matters!

The word "bread" covers food in general. Some have thought it must contain a reference to Christ, the spiritual bread. True, it naturally leads our minds to him, but we believe its primary reference is to material bread. Here is a plain encouragement to present our physical needs before God, although it is to be kept in mind that six petitions out of the seven in the Lord's Prayer are taken up with spiritual things.

We ask God to "give" us our bread. Let us keep in mind that it comes from him. There is an old story of a man who met a boy in the village street, carrying a loaf of bread. He asked the boy where he got the loaf, and the boy replied: "From the baker." "But where did he get it?" "He made it." "How did he make it?" "With flour." "Where did he get his flour?" "He ground the wheat." "Where did he get his wheat?" "He got it from the farmer." "Yes, but where did the farmer get his wheat?" "Oh, from God," said the boy. "Then," said the man, "you got your loaf from God!"

And back of the flour the milk,
And back of the mill is the wheat and the shower
And the sun and the Father's will.

Although God gives us our bread, yet we must labor for it and the scriptural provision is, "If any will not work, neither let him eat." The fact that we toil assures us that God will feed us, for does he not feed the fowls of the air, which neither sow nor reap nor gather into barns? And as Luther says, "Even to feed the sparrows God spends more than the revenues of the French king would buy." How this has asked God to give him

Again, since God gives us our bread, we should thank him for it. How beautiful is the picture given us by the apostolic church, that "they ate their meat with gladness." But how neglectful we are of the duty and grace of thanksgiving."

We pray that God would give "us" our bread, considering our brother's need as well as our own. If we pray aright we shall not shut up our heart of compassion against the poor. Neither shall we make the poor man cry for bread in order to enrich ourselves.

How God Fed a Widow and Her Children.

It is to be noted that Jesus directs us to pray for bread for "this day" only. This implies that we are to trust our Father for the morrow and be unanxious. Dr. H. C. Trumbull tells of a poor widow and her children who lived near his boyhood home. One night, when she put her little ones to bed, she knew she had nothing to eat for the morrow, yet kneeled in faith and presented her needs to God. The next morning, she set the table as usual and then sent the children to the seashore to get sand for the floor; it was used in those days instead of carpet. While they were gone she prayed earnestly to God for food for them fast. The children soon came back in glee, bringing a fish which had been left in a hollow of the beach by the retreating tide. While the mother was cooking it a neighbor called and explained that years before the wife of the husband had done him a kindness which he now wished to repay; he left a bushel and a half of cornmeal. The mother proceeded to make Johnny-cake and then told her children how the fish and meal had come just in answer to prayer. With what gratitude to God they sat down to that breakfast! The neighbors heard the story, and saw to it that this good woman and her children were never again in want.

The word "daily" is found nowhere in the Greek Testament save in the Lord's Prayer. There has been much discussion as to its meaning. The best scholars incline to the view that "daily bread" means bread sufficient for our existence, which we actually need to sustain us. What a rebuke to luxury! The most spiritual men of the day tell us that they fear luxury as they fear but few things; it has a subtle power to sap spiritual strength. Our Heavenly Father only suggests as most the modest needs of his children. These needs vary considerably in the case of a king, for example, as compared with a peasant. But in every case God will hear the prayer of his children for their "daily bread."

How unhappy the state of those who do not know God as their Father in heaven!

JESUS SENDING FORTH THE TWELVE.

(May be used with missionary application.)

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:1-31.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR TEACHERS—Romans 10:13-15; Isa. 40:3-9; Matt. 28:18-20; Acts 1:6-8; 2:1-4; 16:9-10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus feeding the hungry.
MEMORY VERSE—Give ye them to eat. Mark 6:37.
JUNIOR MEMORY VERSE—Isa. 52:7.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Messengers of Christ.
JUNIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—The power of the Gospel of Christ.

The time of this lesson was autumn, A. D. 28; the location Galilee.

I. Marvelous Unbelief. (vv. 1-6a). Jesus is rejected the second time at Nazareth. He entered into the synagogue on the Sabbath, as was his custom, and the people were astonished at his doctrine. His application of the scripture was similar to that of his first rejection. The significance of this visit is found in verses 5 and 6 —the institution of the mighty Christ through unbelief by those who knew him best.

II. The Mission of the Twelve. (vv. 6a-13). From the parallel account we find why Jesus sent forth these disciples (Matt. 9:36)—because the people were scattered as sheep without a shepherd. In the tenth chapter of Matthew we find the names of those whom he sent out (vv. 2-5), the fifth verse of which designates that only Jews were included in this mission. We need to remember that these disciples were sent out before his crucifixion. Their pilgrim character is shown in Mark 6:9, and the solemn manner of their dealing with those who reject them is indicated in verse 11. They were being sent forth as sheep in the midst of wolves. They were to be delivered up to the council and haled before the rulers of the synagogues, but with them was to go an enabling power (Matt. 10:20). Meeting persecution was to be a part of their program. They anticipate the persecution with which Christ is identified, for he exhorts them (Matt. 10:29-31), to be of courage and to fear not, for are they not "of more value than the sparrows?" Their going forth was to bring divisions (Matt. 10:34).

Many of the ranchers of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta laid away 250,000 to 300,000 in the banks last fall. They may be planning only, however, that the growing of wheat is not the only inducement which is leading settlement to Canadian lands. Low taxation, favorable agricultural climate, and profitable prices not only for grain but for hogs, cattle and all forms of farm produce all contribute their share toward the rapid settlement of the fertile lands of Western Canada."—Advertisement.

Jones—"Did you get that mining stock at a bargain?" Brown—"Yes; I gave other mining stock for it."

INCREASE IN WESTERN CANADA ACREAGE

Will Prove a Big Factor in Winning the War.

Reports to hand indicate that Western Canada has a vastly increased acreage ready for crop this year over last year. The splendid open fall of 1917, gave a better opportunity for fall plowing than for some years. Work in the fields was almost continuous until the end of November. In fact, in the neighborhood of Pincher Creek, Alberta, there was sufficient mild weather in January of this year to permit farmers to plow, and many took advantage of it. A great many Americans owning land in Canada moved up last year, and this has also helped to increase the acreage. They came into possession of the land at prices varying from $15.00 to $30.00 an acre, and with the proven yields of wheat running from twenty and as high as fifty bushels per acre, with a set price of $2.21 a bushel, they could join production and patriotism together with a big margin of profit. The Post-Intelligencer of Seattle, Wash., gives a very conservative statement of the agricultural development and opportunities in Western Canada. In its issue of December 14, 1917, it says:—

"Since the beginning of the year American emigration into Canada has been greatly stimulated according to the reports of the Dominion authorities, and has been almost entirely made up of farmers attracted by the fertile and comparatively cheap wheat lands.

"Whatever may be said of wheat culture as a profitable avocation in ordinary years, since the beginning of the war it has offered advantages quite beyond the usual opportunities. War has boomed the price of wheat until the farmer now receives around $2 for his product at his granary. Average crops, according to the adaptation of soil and climate are from 12 to 25 bushels to the acre. Even the minimum crop at $2 per bushel, brings in these war times a reasonable profit. Before the war wheat culture was fast being abandoned by farmers who worked 'intelligently for results on the right side of the ledger. It has been the popular crop for new countries, but when the pioneers settled down to business it was generally corn, hogs, cattle and diversified farming that brought the profits. Iowa and the Dakotas in turn, as their prairies became settled, mortgaged the land on wheat culture and afterwards paid off the mortgages with corn and hogs. War is then bringing a temporary

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. I followed me from my trouble so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. HARRY BOYD, 1421 6th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

This is in no sense a religious or Knights of Columbus affair. It is for the benefit of ALL SOLDIERS, in camp and on the battle-field regardless of creed or color. This Society is acting only as custodian of the fund and is working under the direct supervision of our Government. An officer in high command at Camp Dix, said, "It is our duty to make soldiers of these men and your duty to look after their moral welfare."

WHO WANTS OTHERS TO FIGHT HIS BATTLES?

ond teams in a very interesting game on Thursday evening by a score of 22 to 16. Another game has been scheduled with Riverton for March 29.

—The inclement weather has its disadvantages, for it has seized a number of the workers on the Red Cross Boost drive and has placed them within the "infirmaries." This probably accounts for the number of boosts pledged only amounting to 1150, which is 350 shy of their goal of 1500. However, every cloud has a silver lining and we feel sure that when the storm passes the silver in the lining will be so evident that it will enable every "boost" seeker to see just where to get "his" or "hers." How many of the 350 will you take?

—"Tom Sawyer," which is perhaps the best role that has ever been played by the clever young actor, Jack Pickford will be shown at the Strand Way Palace Theatre on Thursday evening next. This is one you shouldn't miss.—Adv.

—Thomas Bromley, who recently enlisted in the Aviation Corps, left today for Cambridge, Mass., where he will pursue an eight weeks' course in technology. Upon its completion, if he is successful, he will receive a commission.

—The Epworth M. E. Church choir, which has been recently reorganized and which is under the direction of T. M. Griffenberg, will sing at both services in the church on Sunday.—Adv.

—The Parent-Teachers' Association will hold its regular monthly business meeting next Tuesday evening in the High School auditorium. While there has not been a speaker scheduled for the occasion, it is planned that the members will have heart-to-heart talks which will be followed by social features.

—Deprive yourself of a meal a week and subscribe for a "Boost." That's the "real" way to give.

—Owing to unforeseen circumstances, the "Weber Concerto" for two pianos, which was to have been rendered in Epworth M. E. Church on Sunday afternoon by Mrs. George M. Becker and daughter, Miss Carol, has been indefinitely postponed.

—Rev. E. A. Robinson will preach his opening sermon in Epworth M. E. Church on Sunday morning. Every one invited.—Adv.

LAST WEEK OF "FAIR AND WARMER" AT THE WALNUT

The last week's engagement of Avery Hopwood's farce, "Fair and Warmer," will commence at the Walnut Monday evening and the last performance will be given Saturday night, March 23.

"Fair and Warmer" is a farce so ingratiating, so convulsively funny and so universally appealing that during the performance Monday night at the Walnut Street Theatre there will be nothing but laughter from the time the curtain rose until the finish of same.

John Arthur, who plays the part of "Billy," proved himself to be a mirth-provoker in every sense the word implies. Edna Hibbard, who plays the part of "Blanney," also proved to be very amusing. The balance of the company are all artists in their line.

The Walnut Street Theatre will be closed during Holy Week, but will open Saturday, March 30, with the intimate musical comedy success, "His Bridal Night," with Frederick W. Bowers and a notable metropolitan cast and chorus. This attraction will remain for one week and will be followed by the latest version of "Mutt and Jeff," a musical comedy based on the famous cartoons by that name. The week of April 15, "Thurston," the greatest magician of all, will give an entirely new show at his annual visit to the Walnut.

—Miss Lulu Becker spent several days the forepart of the week with friends in Brow's Mills-in-the-Pines.

—Mr. Howard Marsten has successfully passed the examination as an entrance into the aviation corps and will leave on Saturday for the training camp in Texas.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Flanagan left on Tuesday to spend a week as the house guests of their niece, Mrs. Robert Varty, of Washington, D. C.

—Mrs. W. Bright and daughter, who for several years past have been living in Butte, Mont., returned to the borough on Tuesday. They will make their home for the present with her mother, Mrs. Conrad Becker. Mr. Bright upon the completion of business matters will return in about a month.

—Rev. E. A. Robinson will preach his introductory sermon in Epworth M. E. Church on Sunday. Come out to welcome him.—Adv.

—Mr. William Baker has passed a very successful examination in the quartermaster's department, receiving an exceptionally high average. He is now entitled to a commission.

—Mr. H. B. Hall and Mrs. Arthur Hall were visitors of Mrs. Harvey Mitchell in West Philadelphia on Wednesday.

—The Epworth M. E. Church choir, which has been recently reorganized, will be in evidence at the services in the church on Sunday, under the leadership of Prof. T. M. Griffenberg.—Adv.

Commends by children at the Zoo occasionally reveal a novel point of view. A youngster stood before the cage of a Sumatra tiger in the lion house. He watched the great beast pacing rapidly to and fro behind the bars, but always with its eyes keeping a sharp look-out for the arrival of dinner, for it was near feeding-time. After a long and critical examination of the performance the youth delivered judgment.

GROWING OLD

The tallest lilies droop at eventide,
The sweetest roses fall from off the stem;
The rarest things on earth cannot abide,
And we are passing, too, away like them;
We are growing old!

We had our dreams, those rosy dreams of youth!
They faded, and 'twas well. This after-prime
Hath brought us fuller hopes; and yet, forsooth,
We drop a tear now in this latter time
To think we're old.

We smile at those poor fancies of the past—
A saddened smile, almost akin to pain;
Those high desires, those purposes so vast,
Ah, our poor hearts! They cannot come again!
We're growing old.

Old wine is best, maturest fruit most sweet;
Much have we lost, more gained, although 'tis true
We tread life's way with most uncertain feet.
We're growing old.

We move along, and scatter as we pace
Soft graces, tender hopes on every hand;
At last, with grey-streaked hair and hollow face,
We step across the boundary of the land
—Atlanta Constitution.

DOROTHY'S PERIL

One day, when Dorothy's mother was reading to the little maid, she came to the word "gravitation." She explained its meaning, but thought the child would forget it. Consequently she was much surprised when, a few days later, Dorothy came running in, crying:

"Oh, mother! it's such a good thing for me there's a law of gravitation; if there wasn't I'd have surely tumbled head over heels into Heaven just now!"

ANIMALS THAT SWIM

Nearly all animals are better swimmers than man, and take to the water naturally. The rhinoceros and hippopotamus are wonderful swimmers and divers, while the Indian elephant crosses great rivers with heavy loads.

The elk and the reindeer are first-class swimmers. The elk keeps his head above water and crosses directly from bank to bank to avoid turning. The reindeer, on the other hand, swims as often as he likes, keeping his head only a little above the surface. But of all swimmers of all climes the best, though not the swiftest, is the Polar bear, who passes half his time in the water swimming and diving. His swimming power is nothing short of miraculous if it be remembered that the water in the regions he frequents is invariably cold, and that cold is normally prohibitive to good swimming. There are bears that can swim from twenty-five to thirty miles without great effort.

One of the swiftest swimming animals is the squirrel. A sportsman on one occasion, having at hand a squirrel born in captivity, which had never seen water, wanted to see if it could swim, and took it with him in a rowboat to the centre of a lake. The squirrel turned towards the bank, head and paws above the water, back and tail underneath it, and began to swim so rapidly that it was with the greatest difficulty that the man recovered it when it reached the shallow water near the land.

Mother of four daughters, of whom one has recently married, to a fortune of this common man sitting beside her in the drawing-room whom she would like for a son-in-law:

He (fighting shy): "The married one."

"Being exposed to extreme heat when working as an engineer, and then going outdoors to cool off, caused my kidney trouble," says Karl Goering, 8513 N. Orkney St., Philadelphia, Pa. "An cold weather and when it was damp, my joints and muscles would swell and ache and often my limbs were so badly affected it was only with great misery I was able to get around. For a week I was laid up in bed, hardly able to move hand or foot.

Mr. Goering

"Another trouble was from irregular and scanty passages of the kidney secretions. I became dull and weak and had to give up my work. Headaches and dizzy spells nearly blinded me and I went from bad to worse. Nothing seemed to help me and I felt I was doomed to a life of misery.

"At last I got Doan's Kidney Pills and after using them, it soon got back my strength and vigor and all the rheumatic pains and other kidney troubles left. I have remained entirely well since."

PISO'S

Fads And Fancies Of Fashion

SUIT WITH CLOSE FITTING COAT.

There is a choice this season in the line of the silhouette. We may discard the corset entirely and wear a coat or dress that is straight from neck to hem, or go to the other extreme and choose a bodice or coat that is fitted in to the figure closely, or stop anywhere between these. Half way between seems to be the happy medium that is most generally becoming. But the possessor of a very good figure may go even farther than the semi-fitted coat with fine effect as is attested by the coat suit which reflects this place of the style as shown in the picture above.

This coat is finished only by the body above the waist where the lines of the coat flow out into ripples at the back and sides, but are almost straight at the front. Narrow bands of self-material braid, stitched across the sides and back of the coat, end in a row of small pearl buttons at each side. This is a novel placing of braid which is charming.

The three hats pictured are typical styles. At the center is a wide-brimmed model of lustrous braid with its crown covered with crepe. Having gone this far last year the crown would consider nothing more expected of it. But now it is first dotted with beads and then its audacity in the new style adds as many tight roses of folded silk as it can carry without concealing the beads. Rose foliage lies in a flat wreath about the brim. It is one of the hats that trimmers class as belonging to the "bumpy" style. Below, at the right, a poke bonnet covered with crepe georgette, is faced with yeddo braid. It has a long sash of, ribbon that wanders over the crown and through slashes in the brim. The ends loiter along their way, which lends them half the length of the figure. A cluster of cherries and leaves are joined to the shape with chenille stitches that are disposed to divide attention with them.

The satin-covered shape at the left is the simplest of the three models. Except for folds on the side-crown the satin is put on plain. But there is method in this madness, the hat is merely a foil for a large ornament of cut crystals—mock amethysts—set in metal and elaborated with beads.

Julia Bottomley

acteristic of this season. Corresponding rows of braid, ending in buttons are placed on the sleeves. There is a shawl collar and an over-collar of washable white satin.

In order to preserve the snug lines about the waist this coat is fastened with three buttons at the front. There are several ways of arriving at this closely fitted effect by means of ingenious cutting. They are novel but not more successful than the simple and direct methods shown in the picture.

The style of the skirt in this suit may be taken as a criterion for the season. It is a straight-line model, fitted about the hips, with waistline very slightly raised and it could hardly be simpler. These are the ideals that all skirt makers seem to have in mind just now.

Millinery shops are radiant with joyous Easter hats all proclaiming that styles have taken a new tack and are sailing in the direction of bright trimmings and plenty of them. Flowers are sprouting all over some shapes, others are fully covered with foliage. Ribbons are nothing if not abundant, made up into all kinds of fanciful and beautiful garnitures and applied in novel ways. Ornaments, after a long, partial eclipse, have emerged and are given a conspicuous place of honor in the millinery firmament.

This return in favor of millinery trimmings comes as a surprise, for hats have been so meagerly ornamented for two seasons, that we were about to pronounce the obsequies over those lovely furbelows—the flowers and feathers and ribbons and laces and everything—that seemed to have languished to the point of death. There is no telling what will come to pass in a month in the world of millinery, for the eternal feminine.

THE RED CROSS NURSES OF EUROPE ARE GIVING TOASTED CIGARETTES TO THE BOYS

To anyone who doesn't know of the wonderful advancements that have been made in the preparation of smoking tobaccos in the last few years it may sound strange to speak of toasted cigarettes.

Strictly speaking, we should say cigarettes made of toasted tobacco; the smokers of this country will recognize it more readily by its trade name, "LUCKY STRIKE"—the toasted cigarette.

The American Tobacco Company are producing millions of these toasted cigarettes and these are being bought in enormous quantities through the various tobacco funds conducted by the newspapers of the country and forwarded through the Red Cross Society to the boys in France.

This new process of treating tobacco not only improves the flavor of the tobacco but it seals in this flavor and makes the cigarettes keep better.

The Red Cross nurse is always glad to have a cigarette for wounded soldiers, as, in most instances, that is the first thing asked for. —Adv.

Win the War by Preparing the Land Sowing the Seed and Producing Bigger Crops

Work in Joint Effort the Soil of the United States and Canada

CO-OPERATIVE FARMING IN MAN POWER NECESSARY TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

The Food Controllers of the United States and Canada are asking for greater food production. Scarcely 100,000,000 bushels of wheat are available to be sent to the allies overseas before the crop harvest. Upon the efforts of the United States and Canada rests the burden of supply.

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute; Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operations.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels.

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

For particulars as to routes and places where employment may be had apply to: U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

—Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Becton, delegate to the National Congress of Mothers, held in Atlantic City, in February, which was accepted with commendation by those present. A letter of greeting recently received from the association's first president, William McConnell, now of Baltimore, was also read. A motion was introduced and unanimously passed that the secretary be authorized to purchase a bond of Third Liberty Loan, same to be made in the name of the association.

—Miss Laura Lind, of Tioga, spent to-day as the guest of Mrs. Walter Gibson, of Garfield avenue.

—A quiet home wedding will take place on Tuesday evening next at 7.45 o'clock, when Miss Rebecca Styles will become the bride of Mr. P. Bennett Longfield, of Bridgeboro, at the home of her uncle, Mr. William Powell, of West Broad street. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. S. M. Van Sant, former pastor of the M. E. Church here. After a short wedding tour they will reside at the groom's residence in Bridgeboro, N. J.

—Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Day and family will move into their home, Second and Cinnaminson avenue, on April 1.

—Miss Margaret Wallace will entertain the Junior 500, which will meet on Wednesday, April 3.

—The "Vital" vacuum cleaner, the new ball-bearing vacuum light, easy running and effective, will work wonders for you in housecleaning. Phone 274-J. Can be purchased for cash or by easy monthly payments. It would be advisable for every housewife to investigate this means of labor and time saving.

—Mr. and Mrs. Arlo Hausman, of Tioga, were dinner guests of Mrs. Calvin Durgin, nee Fest, and mother, of Linden avenue, on Sunday.

—Mr. and Mrs. George J. Seel and family and Mrs. Ida Bertron and nephew, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Fox, of West Philadelphia, on Thursday.

—The Red Cross drive will end Saturday night. Up to the present time it has reached the $2000 mark for Riverton and Palmyra, which is much less than has been appropriated for this district. Have you done your bit to help the boys here and "over there?" Don't be a slacker; give before it is too late.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Price and daughter Mary spent Sunday with friends in Philadelphia.

—Mrs. Ralph Gibbon gave a surprise linen and towel shower in honor of Miss Grace Rush, whose engagement to Mr. Clinton Gibbon has recently been announced, on last Friday evening, at her home on Linden avenue. The evening was most enjoyably spent in the playing of games and vocal and instrumental music. The table decorations were unique and in keeping with St. Patrick's day. About sixteen guests were present and a number of handsome gifts were received.

—Mrs. Wilson Nein, of Reading Pa., is the house guest of her parents Mr. and Mrs. John Evans.

—Pines Rexall Store was a year old Saturday last. They celebrated their anniversary by experiencing the largest day's business in the year and also the largest week. For this they feel indebted to their patrons in Palmyra and Riverton and wish to thank them most heartily. Mr. Walter Smith, the genial manager, to which much of the credit is due, personally expresses his gratitude for their patronage which indirectly is an expemplification of their appreciation of the service rendered. Mr. Smith is a "twentieth century" manager and is a firm believer in the up-to-date and only method of obtaining business, which is advertising. The success of the Pines is due to the courtesies and unvaryingly advertising which brings patrons and with the proper treatment, they have to stay.

—Charles Hacker, of Philadelphia, has become successor to Watson's Riverton, Palmyra and Philadelphia Express and started this week for the first to give the public efficient and dependable service. He will be pleased to receive orders for incoming or outgoing express at Hahn's Bakery, or at his Riverton office. See his ad in this issue for further particulars.

—Private James M. Weart, who recently joined the U. S. Public Service Reserve Corps, left on Monday for duty and was assigned to Port Slocum, New York. Word has been received by his parents and a number of his friends announcing his safe arrival. He states that he has thus far enjoyed army life, although ill the

THIRD LIBERTY LOAN HERE SHORTLY

Chairmen Named for Riverton and Palmyra Are Already Busy

Postmaster William H. Cook, of Palmyra, and Walter L. Rogers, of Riverton, have been appointed by County Chairman W. E. Robb, to represent their respective towns in the great drive for the launching of the Third Liberty Loan, which will start on April 1.

George H. Smith has been appointed publicity director for Riverton, and is "on the hustle" doing his "bit" for his country.

It has been especially urged by the State body that the local chairmen impress it most emphatically upon the committees that in order that their home town receive the proper credit for the number of bonds sold, it is essential that they purchase same through the Cinnaminson National Bank, which is the authorized receive of all moneys.

Collectors have been assigned, but their duty will only be to receive the signatures of subscribers.

Burlington County's approximate quota is $4,000,000.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE OF NEW JERSEY WORKING UNCEASINGLY FOR LOCAL OPTION

The Anti-Saloon League is working at high pressure owing to campaigns that have been started all over the State for No-License campaigns under the new local option law. Over 6000 petition blanks, each providing for twenty-five names, have been distributed, and word has reached the office of campaigns in over one hundred municipalities. It is a race between the "drys" and the "wets" to see which can get the most signatures first, and the number of special elections which has to date twelve campaigns started.

Strong work is, of course, going on in every part of Jersey, where the anti-saloon sentiment is very pronounced.

The first election will be April 2, in Hampton, Hunterdon county. Four have been set for April 9, viz: Salem county; Williamstown in Gloucester county; Lumberton in Burlington county, and North Caldwell in Essex county. April 30 is the date for Montclair and Verona in Essex county.

MORE MEN FOR CAMP DIX ON APRIL 1

Will Constitute the First Official Call for Second Draft Army

On April 1 the first contingent of the second draft army will leave for Camp Dix.

While the names of those who will leave from Palmyra and Riverton have not been completed as yet, they will possibly receive their notices next week, and in this event such names will be published in our next issue.

New Jersey's quota for the first 95,000 call will be 5275. Our district will furnish 31 men, which approximately means 8 men between Palmyra and Riverton.

Should there be any who will voluntarily give themselves up during the period up until April 1, they will be counted in on this quota and those having the high order numbers will be subsequently held over until the next call.

These men will represent 12 per cent. of the State's gross quota.

HOME GUARDS CONTEMPLATING JOINING STATE

Will Put Question Up To Members Shortly

Captain Prishmuth has received from the State authorities blanks for the purpose of filling a report of the local Home Guards, together with an urgent request that they become a State organization.

The matter was discussed by the officers at a meeting on Wednesday evening and it was decided that it at once be brought to the attention and advisability of the members of the Guard.

The duty assigned by the State is optional, as it can be in the State, county or municipality.

The main object is to bring these organizations under the supervision of one head and to strongly enforce strict attendance and discipline which is lacking in a great many local Guards.

All members are urged to come out Tuesday and give the consensus of opinion and incidentally be on hand for exhibition drill which will be held in celebration of a reception that will be given to Rev. E. A. Robinson on that evening.

Board of Education Meeting a Disgrace to Palmyra

Election Deferred One-half Hour Awaiting a Quorum

One of the "blackest eyes" that Palmyra has received for some time was that of the meeting of the Board of Education held on Tuesday evening last in the auditorium of the high school, when the election of officers was withheld for one-half hour owing to the small attendance, which displayed the grave lack of interest in the educational welfare of Palmyra.

With the exception of two, which were due to illness, the board was in consultation a quorum.

After a lapse of one-half hour an appeal was made to the Township Committee who were holding a meeting at the time in the firehouse to send several men to their aid.

This was done and by this "commandeer" method, the election was accomplished.

Mr. Edward Bector was appointed secretary of the meeting; Mr. Walter Tees, chairman, and F. A. Matthews, Sr., Harry Kemmerele, Sr., Louis Krauss and T. Atwood Lloyd, tellers.

Only seventeen votes were cast, electing the members of the board and approving of the appropriation which constituted $10,914.30 for current expenses and $750 repairing school houses, making a total of $11,664.30.

Messrs. Edwin S. Keim, Frank J. Durgin and George W. Rogers were elected on the board for the term of three years, while Mr. John C. Hooper was elected to serve the unexpired term of one year of the late Elias Morgan.

Not only is a meeting of this kind a disgrace to Palmyra, but it is very discouraging to the board and faculty who are lending their efforts to place Palmyra in a high standard in the educational world.

From such a demonstration of lack of enthusiasm it could be inferred that the people of Palmyra at large have been inoculated with that "don't care" spirit.

Next Tuesday will be the regular evangelistic meeting in charge of Mrs. Hortense Peterson. All members, also members of the Calder Class, invited to this meeting. As Dover, Delaware, has been won over, Delaware has joined the ranks for national Constitutional Prohibition, making nine States in all. Four licenses have been denied in the courts of Coatesville, Pa. Bishop Berry, in his address to the Philadelphia Conference, certainly used no uncertain language in declaring it is more religious to vote than pray against rum on election day, adding that the time has come for the church to throttle this lawless, blackhanded enemy.

—Mrs. Falkenstein, of Philadelphia is being entertained for the week by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Seifert, of Garfield avenue.

CITIZENS ASK PERMISSION TO RAISE PIGS

Prevail Upon Township Committee to Grant Them the Right

Another problem faces the Township Committee. Notwithstanding the fact that the raising of pigs in a community like Palmyra would have its depressing effects on the town as a residential section, yet the food problem has presented itself to the extent of several citizens making an appeal to the Township Committee at their meeting on Tuesday evening for permission to raise these "porkers."

The question received considerable discussion and was referred to the Township Solicitor, Arnold Beckenbach, who was authorized to look into the legality of such a permission. If it be lawful, the Solicitor will draw up a binding resolution whereby the township would be relieved of any responsibility as far as any damage done to bona adjoining, and resolutions to include the information as to what conditions should prevail in such cases.

The following bills were then ordered paid:

T. W. Land, work on streets	$151.25
L. Samson, poor orders	3.14
C. Morris Beck, salary	83.33
Frank D. Grubb, salary	70.00
C. Stokley, salary	70.00

"THIRTEEN" HAS CHARMS FOR PALMYRA LAD

Sergeant Raymond L. Bailey of the Palmyra and Supply Detachment, Medical Department, American Expeditionary Forces in France, is reported to be has been in the hospital under quarantine and was the thirteenth patient in the thirteenth hospital. The letter written February 15-stated that he was leaving that day for the town he had in about with home on Christmas—that was to be thirty miles outside of Paris—he expected to have his first ride in a French train that day. Up to then he said all the traveling had been done in side door Pullmans, which were marked forty men and eight horses.

The letters are always cut almost to pieces and rarely contain more than very little news. It is usually four weeks before a letter reaches home, and when the letters, the letters reaching him from home are even slower, and when they do come, are received with joy. Don't let us forget the boys "over there;" let's write them and send them lots of home news, for they are hungry for it.

THE CRUCIFIXION

"He saved others, himself He cannot save," was the theme of Rev. E. A. Robinson, the newly appointed pastor to the Epworth M. E. Church, before a large audience last Sunday evening. The subject revealed the enormity and horrible nature of sin and the unbending justice and great love of God. Christ was obedient unto death. God highly exalted Him giving Him a name above every other name. The piercing of a human heart ended In peaceful harmony. Doubt and fear disappeared and faith and fortitude manifested itself, satisfying the longings of the followers unto the present day.

BADGERING THE DOWAGER

When the Desmythkins got on in the world a little, Tim, their husband, was promoted to a decayed dress suit and the title and emoluments of butler. In this capacity he had been taken severely to task by Mrs. De Smythkin, senior, for allowing simo visitors who inquired for her son's wife to go away without having announced the fact that she was at home.

"If this happens again, Tim, you must say, 'My mistress is out, but the dowager Mrs. Smythkins is within.' Please always say inside," she wound up. And Tim promised to obey.

Long words, however, were not his strong point and when, a few days later, more visitors called, the word "dowager" refused to remain in his mind.

"My mistress is out, sir," he said, but the—er—ah—the owld badger is within. Pray step inside. Sure, ye needn't look surprised! 'Tis what she towld me to say herself."

SPORTING

J. Howard Shoemaker made a new tournament high run record of 31 in the national amateur championship pocket billiards competition in New York.

From the club owners' point of view the change to be brought about by the daylight saving bill will be beneficial. The New York clubs, for instance, will be able to start their games at 4 o'clock. Ban Johnson, according to a report from Chicago, already has notified his club owners to get ready to discuss the matter.

Derrill Pratt came to terms with the Yankees.

Yale won the intercollegiate swimming championship by defeating Princeton in the concluding meet by 30 to 32.

Jess Willard of Kansas, heavyweight champion of the world, will defend his title on July 4 in a match with Fred Fulton of Rochester, Minn., which will be promoted by Col. J. C. Miller of Bliss, Okla., formerly one of the owners of 101 Ranch and one of the most widely known showmen in America. Fulton is to get a guarantee of $20,000 and a side bet of $5,000 is to be made. Colonel Miller for champion and Mike Collins for challenger sign agreement one hour before club offering best inducement.

FOREIGN

The press of Holland is divided on the allies' demand for Dutch ships. The Amsterdam Tyd resents "such rough usage," while the Handelsblad denounces the entente and the Telegraaf advises acceptance.

Switzerland has demanded an indemnity from Germany for the torpedoing of the grain steamer Sardinero, under charter from Spanish owners.

He Did Rise!
The disciples believed in the resurrection of Christ because it had actually taken place. No other account of their belief has ever been given which commends itself to the common understanding that accepts what appeals to it. No account of the belief has been given which is at all likely to gain currency or which is more credible than that which it seeks to supplant. The belief in the resurrection is the only explanation that can be assessed the first disciples remains unexplained by any other supposition than the simple one that the Lord did rise again.—Moule.
Lily Dedicated to the Virgin.
The white lily has in the symbolism of the Church been dedicated to the Virgin because of its purity. The lily was used by the Angel of the Annunciation, provided the [illegible] ...ecreed as vicious; that these consequences, when they have been foreseen, are properly the natural punishment annexed to such actions." These consequences are quite often foreseen by the poor vision of man. If you circle a tree, it will die; if you do not warm clothing when there is a low temperature, you will take cold; if you swallow poison, you will die; if you decline to sow your seed you will starve. Possibly the practice of forgetting that we are all under law in the unseen way may have a tendency to retribution; and this forgetfulness is possibly due, as Prof. Austin Phelps of Andover once said to me, to the fact that ev...n the children in the home are not taught the consequences of broken law.
But this great truth of retribution not obliterated withdrawn or modified by the Spirit, of God still prevails everywhere in the physical world, in ethics and in religion. Never in the history of the world was there greater need than now for the plainest, but most loving preaching of the whole truth, not only the Gospel that Jesus Christ died for the sins of the world, but the self-evident law that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die."
Retribution after death is not denied by intelligent universalists nowadays. Indeed, it is clearly and forcibly proclaimed by Lees, sometimes with more seriousness than by some evangelical preachers. ...es men look into the future, not one in scores is troubled about retribution. The life of the departed may have been thoroughly bad, vicious and cruel, and he died as he lived. With many retribution only lies in the fact that life is extinct; the man is dead, he has met his desert. Is that true?
The men who have been guilty of the present condition in Armenia, Belgium and elsewhere cannot receive a proper retribution by simply being put to death. With men that would seem to be a ripe retribution, but there is a settlement in the future, and we may leave such cries to an infinitely merciful, as well as an infinitely holy God.
In view of future retribution, what is the duty of the hour? Give proper thought to the sowing for retribution and escape the fearful reaping in the future. Remember that sin is malignant; that it brings death here and hereafter. As to the sins that cry out for retribution hereafter, lift up the eyes to the one who has born in his own body all the penalty. However that may reach into the other world and if the sin by the simple act of faith may be laid upon him, the retribution of the future, as far as hell is concerned, will not be visited.

Retribution

By REV. J. H. RALSTON, D.D.
Secretary of Correspondence Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—He that soweth shall reap.—Gal. 6:8.

These words are but a fragment of a text that Dwight L. Moody in his lifetime used frequently with terrific effect and caused thousands of people to believe as they had not believed in the certainty of retribution.

The times in which we find ourselves, men and women are thinking more seriously than they have for several decades. The most of Christendom has been indulging itself with the notion that the law of retribution has been buried in abeyance, when suddenly the war clouds burst and now three-fourths of the population of the world are directly involved in war. The sowing of all the past, particularly of the last half century, began to show above the surface, and all efforts to stop the growing into the ripeness of retribution were fruitless. But in these days not only are 40,000,000 men under arms, directly obeying the commands of those who are over them, even in going to certain death, but the manufacturing and commercial interests of half the world must not only cease to relinquish the profits of business, but must pay billions besides. Moreover, the peoples of the nations concerned are compelled to eat less, to eat what they do not like, and in a hundred other ways contribute to the great war budgets that are offered. All, whether they will or not, have reached the stage of retribution. The nations of the world have sown; they are now reaping.
In somewhat recent times a kind of camouflage of excessive mirth, hilarity and reckless living has been thrown over some of the scenes of social life, and they have been forgotten or ignored; retribution is one of them. Possibly some of the more thoughtful people will hunt up "Butler's Analogy of Religion to the Constitution and Course of Nature" and read his words which have a present pertinence and should have a present application. He says: "It has been observed that such [illegible] ...ch miseries naturally follow such and such actions of impudence and wilfulness, as well as actions more commonly and more distinctly considered as vicious; that these consequences, when they have been foreseen, are properly the natural punishment annexed to such actions." These consequences are quite often foreseen by the poor vision of man. If you circle a tree, it will die; if you do not warm clothing when there is a low temperature, you will take cold; if you swallow poison, you will die; if you decline to sow your seed you will starve. Possibly the practice of forgetting that we are all under law in the unseen way may have a tendency to retribution; and this forgetfulness is possibly due, as Prof. Austin Phelps of Andover once said to me, to the fact that ev...n the children in the home are not taught the consequences of broken law.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR MARCH 24

JESUS MINISTERING TO THE MULTITUDES.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:32-56.
GOLDEN TEXT—The son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.—Matt. 20:28.
DEVOTIONAL READING—John 6:35-40.
ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR TEACHERS—Exodus 16:14-18; Matt. 25:31-36; Luke 4:16-21; James 1:27; Rev. 17.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus a helper at all times.
MEMORY VERSE—Be of good cheer: it is I, be not afraid.—Mark 6:50.
INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—Helping the needy.
SENIOR AND ADULT TOPIC—(—)

This parable marks the high level of the year of popularity in the life of our Lord. It is such an important miracle as to be the only one recorded by all four gospel writers. The returning disciples (v. 31) are urged by the Master to come with him into a desert place and rest and also that he might comfort their hearts over the death of John the Baptist. "They had no leisure." Jesus knew the need and also the proper use of leisure, but the multitude would not grant him this but followed in his retreat in the desert. They followed that they might listen to his gracious words, or behold some new wonder, but Jesus saw and was moved, (v. 24). Carlyle said he saw in England "forty million people mostly fools." Not so with Jesus; he saw and was moved, not with sarcasm, but with a compassion that took the form of teaching (v. 34). It is better to teach a man how to help himself than to help the man without the teaching. We also infer that the soul of a man is of more value than his body. It is not enough, however, to say "God bless you; be warmed and fed," when a man is hungry. Sympathy must issue in action.

A Great Task.

John tells us of the conversation with Philip. Philip lived in Bethsaida nearby, but to feed this multitude was a great task, even with his knowledge and resources (John 6:5, 7). Yet we need not be surprised at Philip's slowness of faith. Moses in a similar case was once nonplussed as to how to feed the children of Israel in the wilderness (see Numbers 11:21-33). The central fact concerns neither the need nor our poverty, but the absolute surrender of our all—however little—to God.

Another disciple, Andrew, who had brought his brother, Simon Peter, to the Savior, in his desperation found a [illegible] ...provided him with a lunch consisting of five barley biscuits and two small dried herrings (John 6:9). This is a great commentary on the title of Christ as at this time—that even this hungry boy should have forgotten his lunch; the circumstances emphasized the helplessness of the disciples in order that Jesus might show his power. His command "Give ye them," (v. 37) teaches us that we are to give what we have, not to look to others, nor to do our charity by proxy (prov. 11:24, 25). Again the Savior asks his disciples to seek (v. 38) as though he would teach them that important steps have been taken to bring this about is the recent order by which it is made possible to take into Canada free of cost fourteen hundred dollars and less in the country of production. This will give those residing in the United States, owning lands in Canada, the opportunity to place them under cultivation at much less cost than in the past. Another inducement is the privilege of taking sheep and cattle in free of duty. Implements formerly a necessary part of the outfit of a good many farmers that would like to move to Canada. These could be provided free duty. Provision is also made that those requiring seed and unable to obtain it in any other way, may get it from the Government. So from this it will be seen that it is not only the farmers' lands in Western Canada that invite the settler, but the ease and cheapness with which a farmer may establish himself.—Advertisement.

No Cause for Alarm.

"Were you frightened, my darling?" asked a doting mother of her little one, who had been lost and was found after several hours' search in the woods.
"Why, no, mamma," replied the child, wonderingly. "I wasn't lost; it was my home that was lost."

THE BIG WORK IN THE WAR

The War Lord Salutes the Field Marshal.

Such is the striking title to a well-timed cartoon in an agricultural paper, showing the War Lord in salute to the farmer. The meaning of it is that without the assistance that the farmer renders in the matter of providing food for the army the fighting ability of that body would be proportionally decreased. While the army is fighting, the farmer is busy. The promptness with which he sprang into the breach was a patriotism equal to that of the man who enlisted and the farmer's record in this particular was worthy of the high record that has become his. All over the United States the appeal is being met by more production. Fields are enlarged, intensive agriculture has taken the place of slipshod methods, more cattle are being fattened, more hogs grown, veal and lamb have become scarce commodities. This is all in keeping with the food-controller's demands, and with the heartiness that is now prevalent, it would seem as if the requirements of the boys at the front and the allies in Europe would be fully met.

Not only are the tilled acres of the United States being brought into requisition, but the wild pasture lands are doing tribute with their cattle and sheep. Working in conjunction with the United States, Western Canada is also doing its share and a pretty large share it is, too. By an arrangement with the United States Government it will now be possible through its emigration agents to secure for the Western Canada fields such help as can be spared. It is thought in this way Canada will have its help to seed its millions of acres of wheat land fairly well met. The large number of young men of the farms who have enlisted and gone to the front has left many of the Western Canada farms weak in the matter of help, and men in the deepest and truest sense of that word. The poverty and perplexity of the disciples in the presence of similar great need, is being repeated over and over again, and yet how faithless it is. We have not enough to feed the multitude. Our few loaves of comfort, amusement, counsel, etc., will not suffice in the present world's crisis; but when we break unto them the living bread, it meets the deep hunger of the soul, and there will

IRISH WIT

The chauffeur never spoke except when addressed, but his few utterances, given in a broad brogue, were full of wit:

One of the men in the party remarked: "You're a bright sort of a fellow, and it's easy to see that your people came from Ireland."

"What!" said the man; "didn't they come from Ireland?"

"No, sor," answered Pat, "they're there yit."

A man may be rough-looking and yet have a touch of sentiment about him.

A ragged, unkempt-looking man appeared at the door of a woman's house, and in pleading tones asked:

"Have you a piece of cake, lady, to give a poor man who hasn't had a bite for two days?"

"Cake?" echoed the woman in surprise. "Isn't bread good enough for you?"

"Ordinarily, yes, ma'am. But this is my birthday," explained the tramp.

She—I can see you've made up your mind to stay in.

He—And it's plain you've made up your face to go out.

GENEROUS PRINCE

"Bilkins," said the merchant prince, "you have been in my employ for twenty-five years."

"Yes, sir," said the faithful clerk. "Twenty-five years to-day, is it not?"

"Yes, sir. Thank you, sir, for remembering it."

"Tut, tut! You have been an honor to the house."

"Thank you, sir."

"You have proved yourself worthy of my confidence."

"Oh, sir!"

"You have grown grey in my service."

"Yes, sir."

"Bilkins, as a slight token of my recognition of this fact I have a present for you. Pray accept this little bottle of hair-dye."

"May I ask what is going on in the village?" inquired the stranger.

"And tell me, pray, why does that little man by the old lady's side wear such a dreadfully sad countenance on such an auspicious occasion?"

"That little man, sir, is the old lady's son-in-law. He's been keeping up her life insurance for the last thirty years."

Jesus really felt the need of rest and of privacy with His friends. It must therefore have been a real disappointment to Him to find more work waiting for Him when He landed in a desert place. We are taught that Jesus was "tempted in all points alike as we are" (Heb. 4:15), and He must have been strongly tempted at this time to turn away from this new demand upon His time and energy. But He was moved with compassion for the people, and healed their sick.

MOTHER'S EFFECTIVE REBUKE

A mechanic had called at a "pub" on his way home one night, and it was half-past nine when he got home. Of course his wife asked where he had been till that time.

He replied: "Working overtime."

The next night it occurred again, and the night after, and when he got home on the next night his wife happened to be reading fairy-tales to their young son, and as usual they commenced "Once upon a time," etc.

She gave over reading to him, and commenced to get the father's tea for him. When she asked where he had been again she got the same reply: "I have been working overtime."

The little son, having nothing to do, had been thinking about the fairy-tales, and shouted to his mother:

"Do fairy tales always begin 'Once upon a time?'"

VERY LATE

Brown had come home very late one night, after a convivial evening at a smoking-concert, and had consumed more cigars and refreshments than were good for him. It was midnight when Brown reached home, but he did not know it.

"Ah," he muttered, "if the church clock would only strike, I should know the time. It's too dark to see."

But, hark! Just as he spoke the clock began to strike. Breathlessly Brown counted: "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve!"

But at that moment another clock began.

"Thirteen," counted Brown, "fourteen, fifteen (Great Scot), sixteen, seventeen, eighteen (Gracious!), nineteen, twenty (!!), twenty-one, twenty-two (!!!), twenty-three (Mercy on us!), twenty-four (!!!)."

Mopping his steaming brow, he exclaimed: "My word, I've never been out as late in my life!"

EVERLASTING LIFE—EVERLASTING LOVE

"The Truth of John Three Sixteen—Everlasting Life the Culmination of Everlasting Love!" The text was from John iii:16: "God so loved the world, that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Everlasting Life is the culmination of an Everlasting Love. Here love reaches its highest altitude; here love reaches its topmost notch; here love reaches to its sublimest heights!

Marvelous, amazing, wonderful fact! Everlasting love reaches down to sin's deepest depths, saves the sinner from his sins, transforms his life and fits him for exhibitions among the holy angels! Is it any wonder that the angels from the realms of glory should desire to look into these things? And since this is true, may the blessed Holy Spirit beget in us an appreciation for this wonderful love!

What is this everlasting life which is the culmination of everlasting love? Life of any kind cannot be analyzed and defined with a very large degree of satisfaction; but it may be described, and its effects may be blessedly known.

In the New Testament we have two Greek words for life, the one being bios, the other zoe. The first refers particularly to animal life, or to bare existence. The latter term, zoe, refers to the higher life, to the inherent principle in the life of God Himself, the sort of life of which God Himself is capable. It is in this latter sense that the term is used in our text, when our Lord says that we "should not perish, but have everlasting life." It is the same kind of life as God possesses—a life that is real, a life that is big, a life that abides.

According to Jesus, eternal life is to know God, and to know His Son. And to really know Him is to "correspond" to Him; a coming into such an intimate relationship with Him, that down in the deep depths of our spiritual natures we shall feel that we are dwelling in Him, and He in us.

Such knowledge, necessarily, is spiritual in its nature, and consequently can only be realized through the spiritual law of faith in Christ. The Apostle John was Jesus' best interpreter, and it is he who says, "He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself. And this is the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in His Son. These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life."

The relation of faith to knowledge of God and eternal life is very clearly seen in this passage from the inspired penman. And again we read "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." Now this is spiritual fact, a new birth; a new life from above, which constitutes the spiritual knowledge of which the Apostle speaks, and which, in reality, is the beginning of an eternal life.

When such is our desire, as we follow on to know Christ, as we read the four gospels and the holy epistles, we shall see the picture of God in man, treading the streets of earth, struggling with our life's problems. Through the veil of the flesh we shall see the light of Deity flash forth; we shall realize the Companionship of Heaven's sympathetic friend; and in Him we shall come to know an everlasting love which will ultimately culminate in an everlasting life!

Through a real love of Christ we shall come to realize a very real life in Him. It is the Apostle John, again, who tells us, "Love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God."

He who lives; he who continues to love continues to live; he who loves in the great eternity continues to live in the great eternity. Everlasting life is the life of love. Yes, everlasting life is but the ocean of God's limitless love in the shores of which we now may bathe our troubled souls and in the great eternity we shall bathe unremittingly, beholding the face of our Beloved!

Why everlasting love culminates in everlasting life may be seen in two great eternal facts. The first eternal fact is found in the eternal sacrifice of Christ. Previously in our consideration of this great text we have suggested that to love humanity was not an afterthought with God; that the plan of our redemption from sin was laid in the halls of eternity; that in the mind of the Father of Love, Christ was "as a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." We have been redeemed "with the precious blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot, who verily was foreordained before the foundation of the world, but was manifest in these last times for you, who by Him do believe in God, that raised Him from the dead, and gave Him glory; that your faith and hope might be in God." From such passages as these it is very clear that the sacrifice of Christ was eternal in its nature, that God, who knew the end from the beginning, lovingly planned to save man from sin. His love was everlasting.

Any person, therefore, who meets the conditions of the Gospel and believes on the Lord Jesus Christ will be saved now and saved eternally; for the promise is: "That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." And this was the reason why "God so loved the world."

In days gone by some people have been troubled as to whether or not they were included in the plan of God's love; but, in the light of His revealed Word there is no room left for doubt, "Whosoever believeth in Christ shall be saved."

Now, that is good theology, even though it may be put in a most unique way. It is absolutely true that "Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man." If any man sin we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the Righteous, and He is the propitiation for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world." "That whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Our personal salvation here and hereafter will be decided by our own wills.

And that this everlasting life is the culmination of an everlasting love is seen in the beatific vision of the Great Seer on the Isle of Patmos. The gates of Paradise stood ajar and the Apostle of Love was permitted to look in. He tells us what he saw. He beheld the blood-washed throng. He saw the vast company of the redeemed of all the ages. And then he says, "After this I beheld, and lo a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands, and cried with a loud voice, saying, "Salvation to our God who sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb!" (Rev. vii:9-10.)

The eternal plan of God can never fail. The forces of evil shall be checked and chained. Sin and crime shall be trampled out of existence by the triumphant march of King Immanuel. Death shall be swallowed up in victory. Sorrow and sighing shall flee away. The countless myriads of God's people shall throng up the steps of light and shall behold the face of Him who has loved with an everlasting love which now culminates in an everlasting life!

We have also found that no human word is sufficient to adequately express the amazing love of God. Not even the exalted dialect of an archangel from the realms of glory would be sufficient to express the glorious truth of how everlasting life is the culmination of everlasting love. Until we reach our glorious heritage around the eternal throne; until we can join with the angels, archangels, cherubim and seraphim, and all the company of heaven; until we shall behold His blessed face we can only rend the shores of that love in the great ocean of which one day we shall bathe forevermore!

DON'T ENVY OTHER FOLKS!

When obstacles confront you, 'tis no good to feel mad, mope,
Or go about with grumpy air as though you'd lost all hope.
It's better far to wrestle with one's troubles as they come,
Than whine until confronted with an overwhelming sum.

Don't think when you have troubles that your neighbor goes scot free.
Because he shows a smiling front and battles cheerfully.
No, man! he, too, has troubles, but herein the difference lies,
While you go idly moping round, the other fellow tries!

Don't envy other people, maybe if the truth you knew,
You'd find their burdens heavier far than is the case with you.
Don't think you'd have an easier time if you could take his place.

No! you must give up grousing, put your shoulder to the wheel!
And let the obstacles ahead your strength and muscles feel.
Face all rebuffs with cheerfulness, and give your talents scope,
With hope writ on your countenance, you'll have no cause to mope.

'Tis hope and cheery courage that incite one to retrieve
One's past mistakes, to start afresh, to dare and to achieve!
So smile, and if perchance you light the spark of hope anew
In some poor sad and burdened heart, all honor be to you.

NOVEL PRISON DISCIPLINE

They have a novel method of maintaining discipline in the State prison at Folsom, California, and it is proving a great success.

They have no dungeons or dark cells in the prison, corporeal punishment is unheard of, tying up by the thumbs is never permitted—in short, none of the old modes of punishment are recognized in this institution.

The system in vogue is this: When a new prisoner is received, he is informed that they have three different bills of fare in the prison, and that it is optional with each man as to how well he lives. If he is industrious, orderly, well-behaved and in all things conforming strictly to the rules of the prison, he is served with excellent food nicely cooked. He can have chops, steaks, eggs, tea and coffee, milk and white bread; if he is only fairly well behaved and does not do his allotted task properly, is inclined to grovel and grumble at the regulations of the institution, he is served with molasses, soup and corn bread; and if he is ugly and insubordinate he is permitted to feast on unlimited quantities of cold water and a rather small allowance of bread.

There is said to be an intense rivalry among the convicts to enter the first class, and once there, it is very seldom that one of them has to be sent back to a lower class.

This discipline is evidently patterned after that of prudent mothers, who send the bad boys to bed without their suppers. It is humane as well as effectual. A lion can be tamed with hunger, much less a boy or man.

BLIND REPAIR WATCHES

Blind people—those who have been born blind—are, as is well known, exceedingly clever with their fingers, but it is not often that one hears of a watchmaker who was born blind, and yet there have been instances of the kind.

A famous blind watchmaker lived at Holbeach. His name was Rippin, and although completely blind, he could take to pieces and put together again watches of most delicate construction with the greatest ease and in quicker time than most watchmakers who have the advantage of good eyesight.

On one occasion some of the tiny wheels and screws used in his trade were stolen from him, but the thief was captured with the property on his person, and Rippin identified it by his delicate sense of touch. Another watch and clockmaker brought up his blind son to his trade, and he proved so skilful that on more than one occasion he detected faults in timepieces which other tradesmen had failed to discover.

The new vicar had succeeded in getting the village drunkard to sign the pledge. He was very anxious that all the inhabitants should know of his success. So he invited the man to give his experience at a temperance meeting. When he got up to speak he was greeted with much applause by the temperance workers.

"My dear friends," he said, "the first week that I was teetotal I bought a new suit. The second week I put five dollars in the War Loan. The third week I thought I would prepare for my last days, so I purchased a coffin. Yes, dear friends, and if I'd been teetotal another week I should have required it!" (Collapse of supporters.)

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

SUITS THAT LOOK LIKE SPRING.

Here is a group of suits for spring that even the unpracticed eye—at a glance—will perceive to be quite unlike the suits of yesterday. Their designers have wandered into green fields and pastures new, gathering ideas, and are displaying the results of their wanderings now in suits that have many interesting style features. They appear to have centered attention on coats and to have agreed that skirts shall be plain, hang straight, or show a little narrowing toward the bottom, and reach at least to the shoe top.

In coats the most noticeable innovation is the uneven line at the bottom of the coat skirt. There is only an occasional coat that is even at the bottom edge, but this variety is good style always. Another new feature in coats is the fitted-in lines at the back, which are applied in many methods of cutting and shaping, almost every with semifitted models in point of number. There are many coats that fall to close at the front, and some whose only closing point is at the waistline. These open models are worn with light waistcoats in some cases, or over blouses that are glimpsed to the waist.

At the left of the picture is a very graceful and clever coat has pointed fronts and its skirt is set on to a double-breasted body ending in a belt across the front. There is a little ripple in the skirt of the coat, which slopes upward from the front and across the back. Some models of this kind are very short at the back. The collar and cuffs are of satin with white polka dots and the skirt narrows toward the hem.

At the right of the picture the suit of serge maintains more mannish lines, but reverses the order of things shown in the other suit. Its coat slopes down in a curved line across the back, and is one of the longest models shown. It is worn over a low-cut vest of white wash satin and has a satin overcollar. The edges are bound with narrow silk braid and strips of this braid. with two bone buttons finish the cuff. The skirt is plain and hangs almost straight.

Little sketches elsewhere in the picture reveal the diversity of the new styles. Assortments are so wide in suits that every woman may have the satisfaction of satisfying her own style and preferences when she makes a selection.

The dressy, separate silk skirt has made a history for itself that insures its welcome every season, but its great day is ushered in with spring. Its rival; the sports skirt, has promoted it; success for the separate skirt of silk is sure and deserved, and there is no end to the variety in silks and color combinations that make it a thing of beauty this spring.

Two or three shades of one color in stripes and plaids, or combinations of contrasting colors, or colors with crossbars in black or white, in as many designs as we find in gingham, make the choice unlimited, but so far stripes have been developed into the most attractive.

The season is dominated by two styles, each with many variations. One is the skirt laid in plaits about the waistline and the other is the tunic skirt. The plaited skirt is not so new as the tunic, but it is too good looking, and may be fitted with too much good style for women to leave it out of their reckoning.

Tunics, like coats, are usually uneven in length. They are ingeniously draped and here the art of the designer either shines or fails. In the skirt shown above a single piece of silk is so well managed in the draping that the stripes run diagonally across the front and horizontally across the back. A feature to be noted is the disposition of most of the fulness in the tunic at the front of the skirt and the sash of silk, like the skirt, tied in a bow of two loops, at the front of the waist. The square end of the silk used for the tunic is cascaded at the left side and nicely finished with a row of small, flat buttons set close together. The underskirt is plain and narrow, merely two lengths of goods sewed together and finished with a three-inch hem.

LITTLE ECONOMIES.

It is a matter of pride with the average housewife today, because of loyalty, patriotism and a wish to take her share of the burden of war, to be as saving of all materials, of both food, clothing and fuel, as possible.

We cannot do as usual in any line of work; business does not go on as usual, we cannot buy staple foods in large quantities as we have done in the past; but we are all willing without complaint or fault-finding to bear our burden of the inconvenience of this war, because we know that even our little, multiplied by a hundred million, will supply the needs of our army and our allies. Poverty is no disgrace 'and, if poor, all the more need to mix brains with all of the household processes.

The loyal woman who has signed the food pledge with the conference and help of her family will be glad and willing to study to make those meals substantial and satisfying if she is encouraged by them to do her best. The constant fault-finding in the home will make a woman a real martyr if she is conscientious and determined to keep her pledge.

Frosted cake should be unseen on our tables while our people across the water are starving for sugar. Cake or candy is too great a luxury these days to be indulged in at all often. A teaspoonful of sugar a day saved of each person's supply would furnish plenty of sugar to keep our soldier boys happy and well fed. We are prone to forget that our little, multiplied by one hundred million, makes an amazing amount. We are not accustomed to think in millions.

Bread Crumb Biscuit.—Soak a quart of bread crumbs in a quart of milk three hours. Add a half cupful of melted shortening and enough flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder to make a drop batter; add a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of sugar and two well-beaten eggs. Drop in well-greased gem pans and bake in a hot oven.

MORE CORN COMBINATIONS.

Corn flour makes very palatable griddle cakes using the usual proportions with an egg or two as needed.

Steamed Barley and Cornmeal Pudding. — Take one cupful each of molasses, sour milk raisins and barley. Three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one egg, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a spoonful of water. Beat the egg, add the molasses, milk, and soda. Sift corn meal, salt and barley together and combine with the first mixture. Add the raisins chopped and pour into well greased shallow pudder dish. Steam two hours. Serve with any good sauce.

Popcorn Balls.—Use perfect kernels removing all the hard ones. Prepare a syrup by boiling two cupfuls of corn syrup and a tablespoonful of sweet fat until it threads. Pour slowly over the corn stirring to get it well mixed. Chill the hands and form the balls quickly before the syrup gets too hard.

Chocolate Pudding.—Mix four tablespoonfuls of cornstarch with a half cupful of sugar and a half teaspoonful of salt. Combine with a little cold milk, to which a square of grated chocolate has been added, add a pint of milk, and cook until thick, then add a half cupful each of raisins and nuts with a teaspoonful of vanilla. Mold and chill and serve with cream or top milk.

Wisconsin Scrapple.—Take one cupful of headcheese, pork scraps left from trying out lard or one cupful of headcheese, two teaspoonfuls of salt, a teaspoonful of powdered sage. Cook the meat two hours, then stir in the meat and seasonings, then turn into a mold wet with cold water. Slice when cold, and fry.

Corn Flour Cake.—Scald one and one-fourth cupfuls of milk, and two cupfuls of corn flour, slowly, stirring constantly. Cream a third of a cupful of fat with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, add two well beaten eggs, then the corn flour and milk mixture. Beat well, add three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, beat again and put into layer tins. Use fig filling.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

That Old Guy.

Mrs. Carico, a middle-aged and talkative ruralist, was appearing in a suit brought by her husband. She insisted in fondly commenting on the answer given by the first witness. Repeatedly the judge requested her to be quiet, but she persisted in audibly disputing the words of the witness. Finally the judge said:

"Mrs. Carico, the court demands that you remain quiet. Unless you do so you will be held in contempt."

Giving the judge a savage look, the woman turned to her attorney and inquired:

BOY SCOUTS

THE BOY SCOUT OF AMERICA

(Dedicated to Troop No. 44, Detroit.)

Where'er I hear their healthy shouts, somehow deep down within
The soul of me I feel a thrill of honest joy and pride,
For these are boys that will be men ere many years have died.

There in the making are the men on whom the land must lean,
Prepared for all the day's commands and self-reliant there.

They shall have learned the ways of life, the fields and running brooks,
And come to manhood and its cares equipped and qualified.

When I behold a troop of scouts I fancy I can see
There will be less of selfishness and more of kindness when

How many boy scouts have looked up the meaning of the word "scout?" Probably but few know that a hidden meaning is the one most appropriate to the organization.

The word is not a newly coined one. In the old French, it was "esconter or escolter" and was used only in the military sense of the word.

The Portuguese, Spanish and Italian forms are somewhat similar to the old French, both in form and meaning, but the Latin "auscultare" is used in the broader sense—"to hear with attention, to listen to."

In present-day English, the military meaning "to reconnoiter" is that most often applied, yet the broader meaning which has come down from the Latin is the one underlying the constructive principles of the great society of boys.

SCOUTS RESPOND IN HURRY.

At 3:20 o'clock in the afternoon six blasts of the fire alarm at Foxboro, Mass., sounded. This is the mobilization call in Foxboro for the boy scouts.

The scouts were widely scattered about town at the time. They were in ignorance as to the cause of the emergency call, but knew it was their duty to make all speed for home, don their scout uniform and report at headquarters.

In about 20 minutes 40 members were ready for duty. At the Scout hall the boys were asked to make a house-to-house canvass for funds for the Halifax sufferers. The boys worked from 4 to 8 p. m., and the amount of their collections was $123.40.

WHAT SCOUTS ARE DOING.

Scouts in Peoria, Ill., are helping in the movement to collect funds for the Red Star society, which is for the care of horses and mules used in the war.

A campaign is on in historic Lexington, Mass., to have all old wornout American flags removed and have them replaced with new flags. The boy scouts are the ones that are doing this.

Swift & Company Publicity

At a recent hearing of the Federal Trade Commission there was introduced correspondence taken from the private files of Swift & Company, which showed that the Company had been considering for some time an educational advertising campaign.

The need for this publicity has been apparent to us for several years. The gross misrepresentation to which we have recently been subjected has convinced us that we should no longer delay in putting before the public the basic facts of our business, relying on the fair-mindedness of the American people.

The feeling against the American packer is based largely on the belief that the income and well-being of the producer and consumer are adversely affected by the packers' operations, resulting in unreasonably large profits.

Sales

Profits
$34,650,000.

This is equivalent to a $3,465. profit on a business of $87,500.

If Swift & Company had made no profit at all, the cattle raiser would have received only one-eighth of a cent per pound more for his cattle, or the consumer would have saved only one-quarter of a cent per pound on dressed beef.

CO-OPERATIVE FARMING IN MAN POWER NECESSARY TO WIN THE BATTLE FOR LIBERTY

Every Available Tillable Acre Must Contribute, Every Available Farmer and Farm Hand Must Assist

Western Canada has an enormous acreage to be seeded, but man power is short, and an appeal to the United States allies is for more men for seeding operation.

Canada's Wheat Production Last Year was 225,000,000 Bushels; the Demand From Canada Alone for 1918 is 400,000,000 Bushels

To secure this she must have assistance. She has the land but needs the men. The Government of the United States wants every man who can effectively help, to do farm work this year. It wants the land in the United States developed first of course; but it also wants to help Canada. Whenever we find a man we can spare to Canada's fields after ours are supplied, we want to direct him there.

Apply to our Employment Service, and we will tell you where you can best serve the combined interests.

Western Canada's help will be required not later than April 5th. Wages to competent help, $50.00 a month and up, board and lodging.

Those who respond to this appeal will get a warm welcome, good wages, good board and find comfortable homes. They will get a rate of one cent a mile from Canadian boundary points to destination and return.

TEACHING CHILDREN TO OBEY

The situations in which obedience is indicated as necessary and right are doubtless not nearly so many as tradition has led us to believe. If an occupation is allowing a natural outlet for a child's activities, we should hesitate to interfere. Furthermore, disobedience, in our adult view, always involves intention.

Look at it from the children's point of view. Curiosity, interest, attention and motor expression are not easily checked or diverted on a child's part, so his obedience may be delayed, but Henry Stanhope's hand was shaking. Abruptly he turned to his low desk, and bent over it, studying the ring again.

"You say you had it valued by a Chicago jeweler?" he asked shakily. "Who was it?"

"Castle, on State street. He isn't there now. His place burned down the very day I had gotten the ruby back from him. If I had left it a few hours longer, it would have been ruined. If it had been—oh! what should I have done now?"

"No doubt Castle's estimate was correct," he said. "If you like, I will send it to Chicago and try to sell it for you. But, if you don't insist on having the money all at once, I shall be glad to buy it for a thousand dollars myself as a—a speculation."

A tinge of color flooded Jessie's face. "I never thought——" she began. "But of course—of course I'll be glad to let you have it, and I hope you will make a lot of money out of it."

Henry Stanhope nodded. "I hope so," he said gently. "I can pay you five hundred dollars cash and one hundred dollars a month. Will that do?"

"Yes. We owe nearly five hundred dollars, but I can make it stretch till next month."

"I'll give you a check." Henry Stanhope took a check-book from a drawer, and filled in one of the slips. He handed it to Jessie, and with a rush of thanks she took it and hurried out. Henry Stanhope stood staring after her. His thoughts could not have been very pleasant, for his face was tense and the look in his eyes was not unlike that which he had seen in the girl's as she came in. So absorbed was he that he did not notice the prosperous-looking gentleman had advanced from the back, nor did he see him pick up the ring, study it for a moment, and then lay it down with a curious pucker of the lips. Not till two whole days later did Henry Stanhope remember his presence.

"Oh!" he exclaimed. "I beg your pardon, Mr. Marston. I had forgotten."

"That's all right," heartily. "The lady seemed to be an old friend of yours. I've got your order made out. If you'll just sign——" He held out an order-blank and a fountain pen.

But Stanhope waved them back. "I'm sorry," he said. "But I'll have to cancel my order. I find I shan't have as much money as I expected. I'm sorry. Perhaps on your next trip——"

The other stared for a moment. "About this order," he said. "Your credit's good. We'll give you at the time you want. Better let me send it."

But Henry shook his head. "No," he said. "I can't take the risk. I can't! I can't!" fiercely.

The other held out his hand. "I'm a Scotsman," he said. He did not understand, more than Stanhope guessed. "I won't urge you if you feel that way about it. Good-by."

Henry Stanhope put the ring away, and set himself doggedly to getting the money to meet the deferred payments. He found it hard, harder even than he had expected. Sedgeville had recently experienced a spasm of growth, and the demand for his wares had quickened. He had realized it, and had been about to lay out his savings and to pledge his credit in erecting in a fresh stock to meet the growing needs of the neighborhood. He knew he was taking a risk, but he had felt sure that he could at least meet his obligations. But the purchase of Jessie's ring had wiped out his savings, and the necessity for taking an equal sum out of his business in the next few months crippled him badly. He did not add to his stock, and in consequence his trade fell off. Fortunately, no local competition appeared, but the big mail-order houses made rapid headway in his territory. Two payments he made; the third he met in part; when the fourth fell due, he could not make up even the unpaid balance of the third.

Meanwhile Jessie's husband clung to life. Even at his best William Sprague had never been a good-natured man, and his illness and the dread that he saw creeping upon him drove him nearly mad.

Barring his irritability he was not unkind to Jessie. In fact, he had been a good husband, as husbands go, before the breakdown. He had always striven for her, and the fact that he had suddenly become dependent on her cut him to the quick, and made him a terror to every man with whom he came in contact. He had objected to the sale of Jessie's engagement ring, and to her making of its sacrifice was unavoidable. Later, Henry Stanhope's inability—or unwillingness, for such it seemed to him—to complete the purchase price supplied him with a grievance which grew and grew as the days went by. "Why doesn't he sell it and pay you up!" he said to Jessie again and again.

The culmination came when, in lieu of the fifth payment Stanhope sent a note of apology, tendering less than one-third of the fourth. Sprague received the note in Jessie's absence, got up raging, and tramped down to Stanhope's shop. He burst in, denounced Henry as a thief and a liar, attempted to strike him with his cane, and fell dead in the act.

It was the day after the funeral, and at first she refused to see him, but finally, at his insistence, consented to do so.

He rose as she entered the parlor. "I have brought you the money, Jessie," e said without preliminaries.

Jessie looked at him steadfastly. She was really very young; and the fact of her widowhood had shaken her, as it will even when love is dead or has long been dying.

"Thank you," she said coldly. "Put it on the table, please, Mr. Stanhope."

In spite of himself, Henry flushed. Never before in all their lives had Jessie called him "Mister." He laid the money down.

"I suppose there is no use for me to say how bitterly I regret——" he began.

Jessie held up her hand. "Please!" she begged. "Spare me apologies at least. I have no right to judge you. No doubt you did your best. But you ought not to have undertaken to buy the stone unless you knew you could pay for it promptly. However," hopelessly, "it's all over now."

Stanhope bowed. His lips trembled. "Yes! it's all over," he muttered. "All over!" It was indeed all over for him. "I did my best. Forgive me that it was not better."

Jessie shook her head. "I have nothing to forgive," she said. "If I had, I should be glad to forgive it, to make up for the wrong I did you years ago. But I have nothing to forgive. Yes, you did your best. I know it. You made a mistake. We all make mistakes. No one knows that better than I. But I cannot forget that but for you my husband would be with me today."

Stanhope picked up his hat. "I came to ask you to good-by," he stammered. "I'm going away—to Chicago."

Stanhope flinched. "No," he said slowly. "I'm not going for that. I've sold the shop, and I'm going to work for Brown and Brown, the wholesale jewelers I have been buying from for several years."

"Indeed! I trust you will be successful!"

"I hope so. I think so. I just wanted to say that, if at any time I can be of service to you in any way, a letter in care of Brown and Brown will reach me. You won't hesitate to call on me."

"It is scarcely likely that there will be need, Mr. Stanhope. However, I thank you."

Stanhope left his shop,—his no more,—Marston looked after him curiously. Then he turned to the new owner, and put aside further considerations. Half an hour later he called on Jessie Sprague.

Jessie was not sold, when Jessie much against her will, had received him, "I am about to say a very impertinent thing. I am going to mix dealings that are absolutely in no way connected. Will you please explain to me why the rate from here to Greenburg is thirty-nine cents, when the rate from Greenburg here is but one?"

This was a question that the agent really could not answer, but the woman looked so determined over the unexpected cent received in change that he felt sorry for her.

"Oh, it's funny, but it's going that way, you know," he explained, in a businesslike way.

"Oh is it!" she said, in a tone of enlightenment. Her face cleared at once. She put the change into her purse and in great content sat down to wait for her train.

A new maid from the country had been engaged, and her mistress, who lived in a fine house, was showing Mary Ellen round the various rooms and explaining her in her duties. At last they reached the best room, where the valuable pictures were kept.

"Now," said the lady to the servant, as they passed before an extensive set of masculine portraits, "you see all these gentlemen? Well, these are all old masters."

THE RUBY

THE SNOW was still falling, hesitatingly, as if in two minds whether to increase or stop altogether. The trees along the streets were laden with clinging masses; every limb, branch, and twig was piled with delicate ridges, ready to start an avalanche at an incautious touch. In the white freshness Sedgeville seemed born anew, cleansed and purified.

On the outskirts few people were abroad; almost the only living things were a couple of bright-eyed sparrows scolding over the crumbs that Jessie Sprague had thrown out for them when the storm had lulled half an hour before.

Jessie herself had just come out of the house, and was heading downtown, walking in the middle of the road, where the chance of putting her foot into a concealed hole was less than on the defective sidewalk. Sedgeville was the centre of a farming community, and the people were more careful of their horses than they were of themselves.

Slowly as she went, however, she soon found herself nearing her destination, the establishment of Henry Stanhope, Sedgeville's only watchmaker and optician, who eked out a precarious livelihood by supplying the neighborhood swains with stickpins and engagement-rings and the neighborhood damsels with mesh purses, gilded chains, and silver combs.

If Jessie hesitated at the door, the delay was not perceptible. Yet she might very well have done so. It had been over seven years since she entered its threshold, though in earlier years she had passed and repassed it continually.

It had been two years since she plighted Henry Stanhope, running away on the eve of her projected marriage to him with a man she had met only two weeks before. And it had been six months since she had brought her husband home, dying from some obscure disease of the heart that might end him at any moment or might let him drag on indefinitely.

She had brought him home because she had nowhere else to take him. At Sedgeville she at least had her house, mortgaged though it was; and at Sedgeville she could make her slender means stretch farther than she could hope to do elsewhere. She had hoped not to meet Henry Stanhope, and she had her wish. Even now she was going to see him, not because she wished to, but because she must.

The shop bell tinkled somewhere at the back as Jessie pushed through the door, and a long-suffering customer rose from a seat at the dim back, muttered an apology to a prosperous-looking gentleman with whom he had been smoking and chatting, and went blinking in the white reflection from the outer world.

Jessie caught her breath. "Yes!" she breathed. "Yes! I want to tell you something, Henry. I wish you to——"

"But shake hands first, Jessie!" Henry was holding out his hand. He was a little man, meek, with great showing at his temples; but his face was luminous. "Shake hands first, Jessie!" he insisted.

Jessie's eyes brightened with a sudden incredulous thankfulness; brow and cheek flushed, making her face for a moment almost beautiful, despite the marks of pain and trouble that seamed it. Hesitatingly she gave Henry her hand.

"You—you knew I was back, Henry," she said.

Henry nodded. "Yes, I know," he answered gravely, gently hesitant. Naturally he knew. All the town knew. Sedgeville was a gossiping place, and Jessie Sprague's story had not been forgotten—nor forgiven.

"I'm in great trouble, Henry."

"I was afraid so, Jessie."

"He's dying!" The girl stifled a sob. "He's dying! The doctor says it probably won't be long now. We—we hadn't much money when he broke down, and what we had didn't last long; and since then we've been selling things until we've sold everything—everything but this."

She thrust out her hand, palm upward. In its middle lay a heavy gold ring, a serpent's head, holding in its distended jaws a single blood-red ruby.

"You remember it, Henry?" she went on desperately. "You've seen it—before. You know how grandfather and father prized it, and said it would bring luck, and how I promised never to part with it. But—but now it must go, too. I thought perhaps you could tell me where to sell it. You know about jewels, and I'm afraid I'll be cheated if I take a thousand dollars, and a Chicago jeweler told me last summer that it was more than a thousand." Henry Stanhope took the ring. "Yes," he said. "It's worth rather more than a thousand, as I remember." As he spoke, he mechanically adjusted a black-circled magnifier to his eye. "Must you really sell it, Jessie?" he asked.

"Yes. We haven't any money, and we owe a good deal. I've run up bills, knowing that I had this in reserve. And now they must be paid. I'm a good stenographer, and I thought I could go out to work; but John can't be left alone. And I don't seem to be able to get anything to do at home. And the interest on the mortgage is due. So I must sell grandfather's ruby."

Henry Stanhope's hand was shaking. Abruptly he turned to his low desk, and bent over it, studying the ring again.

"You say you had it valued by a Chicago jeweler?" he asked shakily. "Who was it?"

"Castle, on State street. He isn't there now. His place burned down the very day I had gotten the ruby back from him. If I had left it a few hours longer, it would have been ruined. If it had been—oh! what should I have done now?"

"No doubt Castle's estimate was correct," he said. "If you like, I will send it to Chicago and try to sell it for you. But, if you don't insist on having the money all at once, I shall be glad to buy it for a thousand dollars myself as a—a speculation."

A tinge of color flooded Jessie's face. "I never thought——" she began. "But of course—of course I'll be glad to let you have it, and I hope you will make a lot of money out of it."

Henry Stanhope nodded. "I hope so," he said gently. "I can pay you five hundred dollars cash and one hundred dollars a month. Will that do?"

"Yes. We owe nearly five hundred dollars, but I can make it stretch till next month."

"I'll give you a check." Henry Stanhope took a check-book from a drawer, and filled in one of the slips. He handed it to Jessie, and with a rush of thanks she took it and hurried out. Henry Stanhope stood staring after her. His thoughts could not have been very pleasant, for his face was tense and the look in his eyes was not unlike that which he had seen in the girl's as she came in. So absorbed was he that he did not notice the prosperous-looking gentleman had advanced from the back, nor did he see him pick up the ring, study it for a moment, and then lay it down with a curious pucker of the lips. Not till two whole days later did Henry Stanhope remember his presence.

"Oh!" he exclaimed. "I beg your pardon, Mr. Marston. I had forgotten."

"That's all right," heartily. "The lady seemed to be an old friend of yours. I've got your order made out. If you'll just sign——" He held out an order-blank and a fountain pen.

But Stanhope waved them back. "I'm sorry," he said. "But I'll have to cancel my order. I find I shan't have as much money as I expected. I'm sorry. Perhaps on your next trip——"

The other stared for a moment. "About this order," he said. "Your credit's good. We'll give you at the time you want. Better let me send it."

But Henry shook his head. "No," he said. "I can't take the risk. I can't! I can't!" fiercely.

The other held out his hand. "I'm a Scotsman," he said. He did not understand, more than Stanhope guessed. "I won't urge you if you feel that way about it. Good-by."

Henry Stanhope put the ring away, and set himself doggedly to getting the money to meet the deferred payments. He found it hard, harder even than he had expected. Sedgeville had recently experienced a spasm of growth, and the demand for his wares had quickened. He had realized it, and had been about to lay out his savings and to pledge his credit in erecting in a fresh stock to meet the growing needs of the neighborhood. He knew he was taking a risk, but he had felt sure that he could at least meet his obligations. But the purchase of Jessie's ring had wiped out his savings, and the necessity for taking an equal sum out of his business in the next few months crippled him badly. He did not add to his stock, and in consequence his trade fell off. Fortunately, no local competition appeared, but the big mail-order houses made rapid headway in his territory. Two payments he made; the third he met in part; when the fourth fell due, he could not make up even the unpaid balance of the third.

Meanwhile Jessie's husband clung to life. Even at his best William Sprague had never been a good-natured man, and his illness and the dread that he saw creeping upon him drove him nearly mad.

Barring his irritability he was not unkind to Jessie. In fact, he had been a good husband, as husbands go, before the breakdown. He had always striven for her, and the fact that he had suddenly become dependent on her cut him to the quick, and made him a terror to every man with whom he came in contact. He had objected to the sale of Jessie's engagement ring, and to her making of its sacrifice was unavoidable. Later, Henry Stanhope's inability—or unwillingness, for such it seemed to him—to complete the purchase price supplied him with a grievance which grew and grew as the days went by. "Why doesn't he sell it and pay you up!" he said to Jessie again and again.

The culmination came when, in lieu of the fifth payment Stanhope sent a note of apology, tendering less than one-third of the fourth. Sprague received the note in Jessie's absence, got up raging, and tramped down to Stanhope's shop. He burst in, denounced Henry as a thief and a liar, attempted to strike him with his cane, and fell dead in the act.

It was the day after the funeral, and at first she refused to see him, but finally, at his insistence, consented to do so.

He rose as she entered the parlor. "I have brought you the money, Jessie," e said without preliminaries.

Jessie looked at him steadfastly. She was really very young; and the fact of her widowhood had shaken her, as it will even when love is dead or has long been dying.

"Thank you," she said coldly. "Put it on the table, please, Mr. Stanhope."

In spite of himself, Henry flushed. Never before in all their lives had Jessie called him "Mister." He laid the money down.

"I suppose there is no use for me to say how bitterly I regret——" he began.

Jessie held up her hand. "Please!" she begged. "Spare me apologies at least. I have no right to judge you. No doubt you did your best. But you ought not to have undertaken to buy the stone unless you knew you could pay for it promptly. However," hopelessly, "it's all over now."

Stanhope bowed. His lips trembled. "Yes! it's all over," he muttered. "All over!" It was indeed all over for him. "I did my best. Forgive me that it was not better."

Jessie shook her head. "I have nothing to forgive," she said. "If I had, I should be glad to forgive it, to make up for the wrong I did you years ago. But I have nothing to forgive. Yes, you did your best. I know it. You made a mistake. We all make mistakes. No one knows that better than I. But I cannot forget that but for you my husband would be with me today."

Stanhope picked up his hat. "I came to ask you to good-by," he stammered. "I'm going away—to Chicago."

Stanhope flinched. "No," he said slowly. "I'm not going for that. I've sold the shop, and I'm going to work for Brown and Brown, the wholesale jewelers I have been buying from for several years."

"Indeed! I trust you will be successful!"

"I hope so. I think so. I just wanted to say that, if at any time I can be of service to you in any way, a letter in care of Brown and Brown will reach me. You won't hesitate to call on me."

"It is scarcely likely that there will be need, Mr. Stanhope. However, I thank you."

Stanhope left his shop,—his no more,—Marston looked after him curiously. Then he turned to the new owner, and put aside further considerations. Half an hour later he called on Jessie Sprague.

Jessie was not sold, when Jessie much against her will, had received him, "I am about to say a very impertinent thing. I am going to mix dealings that are absolutely in no way connected. Will you please explain to me why the rate from here to Greenburg is thirty-nine cents, when the rate from Greenburg here is but one?"

This was a question that the agent really could not answer, but the woman looked so determined over the unexpected cent received in change that he felt sorry for her.

"Oh, it's funny, but it's going that way, you know," he explained, in a businesslike way.

"Oh is it!" she said, in a tone of enlightenment. Her face cleared at once. She put the change into her purse and in great content sat down to wait for her train.

A new maid from the country had been engaged, and her mistress, who lived in a fine house, was showing Mary Ellen round the various rooms and explaining her in her duties. At last they reached the best room, where the valuable pictures were kept.

"Now," said the lady to the servant, as they passed before an extensive set of masculine portraits, "you see all these gentlemen? Well, these are all old masters."

"Lor' mum," she gasped, "who'd ever have thought that you'd been married all these times?"

A man must have a powerful clutch in his high speed lever if he would refrain from starting anything he can't finish.

WORK? Yes! Yes! I want work!

At once."

I will be in Chicago in two or three days. If you will come on, say on Monday next, I can promise you a place with Brown and Brown at a fair salary. Stanhope will be there. You cannot tell about the ring, but you can make it up to him. Will you come?"

That was how it happened that Stanhope, coming to work a week later, met Jessie going to her desk, and received from her a greeting that made him forget the sorrows of the past in the dawning hope of the future.—Christian Endeavor World.

A MIND RELIEVED

"Thirty-nine cents," said the agent, as he got the ticket.

"Thirty-nine!" exclaimed the woman. "Why, I thought it was forty!"

"No," said the man, as he gave her the change, "it is just thirty-nine."

The woman took the change and the ticket and sat down, but she did not put either—neither the ticket nor the purse. She held them in her hand, and looked quite troubled. Finally she went to the agent again.

"I am sure there's some mistake," she said. "I came from Greenburg yesterday, and I paid forty cents."

"Our regular rate to Greenburg is thirty-nine cents," said the agent. "It's all right, madam," he added, in a reassuring way.

Again she took her seat, but not for long. Again she came to the window and spoke to the agent.

"Will you please explain to me why the rate from here to Greenburg is thirty-nine cents, when the rate from Greenburg here is but one?"

This was a question that the agent really could not answer, but the woman looked so determined over the unexpected cent received in change that he felt sorry for her.

THE FOREST FRONTIER

Timber line in the high mountains of the West arouses the interest of the most indifferent visitor, writes Mr. A. Mills in The Rocky Mountain Wonderland. It is the forest frontier, the line of battle between the woods and the weather. The elements are insistent with their "thus far and no farther," but the trees do not heed, and the relentless elements assault and batter them in a never-ending battle along the timber line.

The trees of the timber line are stunted by cold, crushed by snow and distorted by prolonged and terrific winds. In many stretches they appear like growths of coarse bushes and uncouth vines. They maintain a perpetual battle, and, although crippled, bent, dwarfed and deformed, they are stocky and strong old warriors, determined, no weaklings, no cowards. They are crowded together and tangled, and they present a united front. Few trees rise to a greater height than twelve feet. The average height is about eight feet, but the length of some of the prostrate ones is not far from the normal height.

Wind and other hard conditions give a few trees the uncouth shapes of prehistoric animals. I measured an individual spruce vine that was crawling to leeward, flat upon the earth. It was sixty-seven feet long and close to the roots the body was thirty-eight inches in diameter. One cone-shaped spruce had a base diameter of four feet and came to a point two hundred feet and four feet above the earth. Here and there a tough, tall tree manages to stand erect. Some, no doubt, are the survivors and pressed into shape. Profiles of others, with long, streaming limbs, give a fine picture of the persons entombed in unconquerable appearance, like tattered pennants or torn, triumphant battle flags of the victorious forest!

A few timber-line trees live a thousand years, but half this time is a ripe old age for most timber-line trees. Two hundred is the age of these trees by their size or by their appearance. There may be centuries of difference in the ages of two arm-in-arm trees of similar size. I examined two that were growing together. One was a foot taller than the other, and had 327 annual rings. The other was seven feet high and five inches in diameter and had lived 492 years.

While Chopin probably did not title his "Minute Waltz" to exactly sixty seconds, some auditors insist that it does run by Ryder-time. Some time ago I played the "Minute Waltz" on a phonograph, first telling her audience what it was. Thereupon a huge man in a large riding suit took out an immense silver watch, held it open almost under her nose, and gravely proceeded to time her. The pianist's fingers flew along the keys, and her anxiety was rewarded when the man closed the watch with a loud slap, and said in a booming voice: "Gosh! she's done it."

CAMP NO. 23 PLANS FOR 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Eliminates Usual Festivities and Will Honor Those in the Service of Their Country

The twenty-fifth anniversary of Washington Camp, No. 23, P. O. S. of A., has been looked forward to by its members for a number of years past with views of the most jubilant time in their history.

While this was only natural, yet the conditions of our country and of the world would hardly permit or justify such a celebration. The camp has, therefore, planned a fitting celebration and will honor their sixty-four members who are now in the service of their country and have formulated the following letter, which will be mailed to them:

Camp 23, P. O. S. of A.,

Dear Sir and Brother:

We have looked forward for several years to the time when we should celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Camp No. 23. In this year we have planned that this celebration should be the greatest thing that had ever happened in the section of the country. Truly has the poet said, "Man proposes—God disposes." In view of the present world conditions and the so many of our boys in the service of the flag, we feel that this is no time for jollification. We feel that it is more of a time to commune together, think of the brothers at the front and reconsecrate ourselves to the principles of our order, which mean sacrifice to the utmost in behalf of our country.

We have decided on a reunion of our members with no feed, no entertainment and no jollification. We want to think particularly of our absent ones. We would therefore ask you as a member of the camp, giving all you have to your country, to write a letter to some one of the boys. We thought at that time and we want you to think for a few minutes on the evening of the camp room, the altar and your brothers who cherish your memory. May God protect and prosper you, keep you and bring you back safe to us is the prayer of all our brothers of the camp.

Yours for God, Country and Order,

Next Tuesday will be the regular business meeting. These Tuesday afternoon meetings are very interesting; every lady invited to attend. The prohibition States are largely populated these days with men who are working for nation-wide prohibition because they know from experience in their own States that prohibition more than any other one thing is what the United States needs. Prohibition will solve the help problem for the farmer. It is good for any plan, and will render Giorza's Mass in F.

The offertory selection will be the Regina Coeli Lactare from M. Lambar. The Benedictus hymn will comprise the following: The "O Salutaris Hostia," from L. Bordese; the "Tantum Ergo Sacramentum," from Mozart, and the "Holy God We Praise Thy Name." Miss Helen M. Walters will preside at the organ.

Special Easter Services Epworth M. E. Church

Song Story to Be Feature in the Evening

An elaborate program has been planned for the Easter services at Epworth M. E. Church this year.

In the morning at the usual time by the clock and in accordance with the new Government time regulation, the services will be held. The choir has prepared a special musical program which they will render in connection with an inspiring sermon, which will be preached by Rev. E. R. Robinson. His subject will be, "Raised from the Tomb."

At the Sunday school services at 2.30 by the clock, Mrs. William Rudy, one of Palmyra's excellent soprenos will sing, "Jesus of Nazareth" (King.)

A special feature has been arranged for the evening service in the nature of a song-story entitled, "A Morning in the Orient." This will be rendered by the choir under the direction of Mr. Thomas Griffenberg, assisted by Miss Jennie Wearr, reader. It is expected we have planned that this celebration should be the greatest thing that had ever happened in the section of the country. Truly has the poet said, "Man proposes—God disposes." In view of the present world conditions and the so many of our boys in the service of the flag, we feel that this is no time for jollification. FIRST OF SECOND ARMY GO TO DIX MONDAY

Will Report at Beverly at Nine o'Clock

In this district thirty-four men will report at Beverly at 9 o'clock in the morning and will be addressed by Lieutenant Percy McMahon, while guarding the Palmyra High School.

Owing to the recent robbery of the school building and the various robberies of those in nearby towns, it was deemed advisable by the authorities that both the grammar and high school buildings be guarded. Consequently Lieutenant McMahon, of the Palmyra Home Guards, was requested to furnish armed guards at each school.

Joseph Seel was assigned to go on at midnight and was joined by Mc-Mahon at one o'clock. Mr. Monaco was to have relieved Seel at three o'clock and to be on duty until five. Not appearing at this time he was given up.

Shortly after 4.15 the guards were attracted by strange noises and footsteps outside of the building. Mc-Mahon not finding any one at the front of the high school building proceeded to the Fifth street entrance, stationing himself at the storm door, while Seel was watching from door proper of the building.

Watching a few moments, McMahon offered a challenge and not receiving a reply fired the automatic revolver which he carried, thinking to scare off the intruders. After firing several shots McMahon commanded Seel to shoot. Coming out of the doorway of the building where he had been standing he fired a shot in the air.

Supposing that the intruders had fled, McMahon walked toward the rear of the building and stumbled over the body, which he discovered be his comrade.

Beside himself with grief at the loss of his comrade, McMahon walked to the scene of the accident. Coroner Edmonds was then summoned, who took charge of the body. McMahon was held under bail.

WOMEN TO PARTICIPATE IN "FIRST LIBERTY LOAN AGAINST KAISER

Beginning with April 6 there will be given to every man and woman in Palmyra an opportunity to prove their patriotism by subscribing to the third Liberty Loan. "A bond in every home" is the slogan of the Women's Committee. The man who is receiving 6 per cent., or perhaps, much more than that on his capital in his business, may complain that he is only to receive 4 per cent. from the Government on his investment in Liberty Bonds. This is just where his good will, or patriotism, comes in, otherwise there would be no sacrifice. He should remember, too, that if the United States does not succeed in this war he may not have any business to conduct, and may be forced as a bond servant to labor at the point of a bayonet, as is the case in many sections of Europe. Some of us may say: "O, I've done my bit; I subscribed to the first and second Liberty Loans."

What if our soldiers, who are fighting our battles in France, would stop in the midst of a battle and cry; "Well, I guess we've done our bit"? They can't stop; they have to keep on, and just in the measure they have to fight, so we must be patriots here at home and do as our Government urges and requests us to do. Every dollar we save and invest in Liberty Bond will bring us that much nearer to victory.

COULDN'T CATCH THE PROFESSOR

The typical college professor of books is, as he is credited with being, highly pedagogical. But also, as his prowess be it said, nine times out of ten he has a sense of humor which makes him love a joke just as much as his unpedagogical brethren. One such jocular pedagogue on one day asked by a student if he would like a good recipe for catching rabbits.

"Why, yes," replied the professor. "What is it?"

"Well, you crouch down behind a stone wall and make a noise like a turnip."

"That may be," responded the professor, with a twinkle in his eye, "but a better way than that that would be for you to go and sit quietly in a bed of cabbage heads and look natural."

"Typographical errors," said William Dean Howells, "are always amusing. When I was a boy in my father's printing-office in New York I once made a good typographical error. My father had written, "The showers last week, though copious, were not sufficient for the millmen.' I set it up 'milkmen.'"

"UNITED IN THE SERVICE OF OUR COUNTRY"

CAUSE FOR SUSPICION

When the train, with a tremendous crash, came to a full stop between stations, a worried-looking man stopped a brakeman who was rushing down the track and demanded to know the worst.

"What is it? An accident?"

"Some one pulled the communication cord," was the reply. "The engineer put on the brakes too quickly, and one of the cars left the rails. It will take us four hours to clear the line."

"Four hours!" exclaimed the passenger. "But I'm to be married today!"

The brakeman turned on him with instant suspicion. "Look 'ere," he demanded, "you aren't the man who pulled that cord, are you?"

GOOD FOR THE EYES

It strengthens the eyes to bathe them either in very hot water or in very cold. Better yet is to take pieces of absorbent cotton, rounded and made into little pads to fit the eyes, dip them in ice water and place them on the lids, changing them as they become hot. After a few minutes of such treatment the eyes will feel comforted and relieved to a great degree. This is specially grateful to the eyes after riding in the wind or after having been subjected to the dust and cinders of a railway or the glare of bright reflection on the water when on a boat. Those who have a tendency to weak eyes should daily use an eye cup in which is placed a boracic acid solution. The saturated solution diluted one-half is generally the best and should be made fresh for each eye. The eye should be opened and shut in the solution half a dozen times or more, so that it will thoroughly bathe the eyeballs as well as the lids.—Park Press.

Back of the Firing Line

Every war activity in the entire Nation is linked with the Capital—and each with every other—by the toll and long distance lines of the Bell System.

Thousands of miles of special wire systems have been provided for the exclusive use of the Government. Every way is given to Government business over all commercial lines, and the War and Navy Departments lack no facility for keeping in constant touch with every phase of the Nation's great task.

The men on the firing line are looking to us here at home to back them up with every ounce of force. The men and women of the Bell System are pledged to count no undertaking too great in this great emergency.

SOME USES FOR CORNSTALKS.

Cornstalks, formerly almost a waste product, have been turned to account during recent years, and the farmer is flabbied to get quite a profit per ton for them. They are utilized for big cofferdams and in the manufacture of smokeless powder. Paper pulp can also be made from them. They furnish pyroxylene varnish, are useful as a packing material and, altogether with the leaves and tassels, enter into the composition of various prepared fodders and foodstuffs.—Harper's Weekly.

STRUCTURE OF CHRISTIAN FAITH

The text was from II Kings 11:2: "And Elijah said unto Elisha, Tarry here, I pray Thee; for the Lord hath sent me to Bethel. And Elisha said unto him, As the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they went down to Bethel."

It was not that Elijah no longer needed the comradeship of Elisha that he urged him to remain behind. As a pioneer who has to face an unknown future needs the encouragement of a friend, so Elijah desired the presence of Elisha. Perhaps Elijah wished his companion to remain behind because there was work for Elisha to do at Gilgal. It may be that remaining at Gilgal he might be the head of the school of the prophets in place of Elijah. But Elisha would not be persuaded from following his companion and declared with an oath: "As the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee." It was loyalty to the man he honored and loved and served. He was inspired by the elder prophet's leadership, a feeling of duty that the master needed his services, a heartfelt devotion for the work of Elijah.

But Elisha also needed the friendship and training and spirit of his friend, as will be seen from his request, "Let a double portion of thy spirit fall upon him." His devotion was one of the marked traits of Elisha. Loyalty to the cause for which Elijah stood in Israel and for the truth shown in the elder prophet's spirit and work is the spirit here manifest in Elisha.

Loyalty is the keystone in the arch of Christian faith without which the whole superstructure falls away and decays. It is important that we keep in mind this fact of our religion. The foundation of loyalty rests upon hope that He who speaks "in the still small voice" has a place for each in His plan of work. God is working out your lives according to the divine pattern, and the great end is the salvation of every individual soul. The appeal of the gospel is the appeal of every one to be loyal to God and our Leader, Jesus Christ. All who are faithful to the Divine Leader are faithful to the cause of divine truth. This spirit and appeal of the gospel are intensified by the fact that the loyalty which we are called to uphold is loyalty to a Person, and He the Great Leader of a cause in the world. Elisha's loyalty was a loyalty to his God, and was the whole of his religion. So the Christian is called to express his loyalty to a great cause which is embodied in the Great Leader, Jesus Christ. He is a worthy leader because He never leaves us nor forsakes us. He is the leader of a new kingdom, a new humanity, a spiritual kingdom which knows no end.

God is the one source of victory over the principalities and powers of evil. The Leader, Jesus Christ, and the ever-living and transforming power of the gospel—these are the source of salvation from sin and shame.

As Elisha was determined to remain loyal to his master, Elisha declaring with an oath "as the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee," so the Christian who is a devoted disciple of Christ will not leave his place of duty nor the field of service. Like Ruth, this decision of Elisha is the most striking evidence of the love and devotion of a younger person to an elder, of a disciple to his master. It was loyalty to the man and his cause. We have therein a good illustration of the spirit that should prompt the congregation to be loyal to the leaders of the Church. As the Church is loyal to our great Leader, Jesus Christ, so should they follow the leaders, their pastors and teachers and their friends. The pastor, who is Christ's ambassador, is the appointed leader of the flock over which Christ has ordained him. Of course Christian leadership should be inspiring, helpful and uplifting. Like Timothy to Paul, or like the disciples of Bernard of Clairvaux to their leader, so should the faithful Christians of our churches hearken to the voice of their spiritual leaders.

The deeper the affection, the more exalted view that we hold of the Person and work of Christ, the more loyal shall we be to our Leader. "He must increase but I must decrease," said John the Baptist concerning Jesus. The spirit of John is the most touching and real picture of the Forerunner of the Christ. So when the disciple has discovered Jesus Christ to be his Lord and Master he will be loyal to the teachings of Jesus and the teachings of those who knew and understood Him such as the apostles. When Naaman the Syrian could not see why Elisha should not bid him wash in the rivers of his own country rather than the Jordan, he was in the position of many who to-day would find salvation otherwise than the gospel teaches.

It is not what we get but what we do, what we seek first, that tests what we are. No man can serve two masters. Neither can we choose Christ and give Him our whole-hearted service we shall receive His spirit. So Elisha asked of Elijah that "a double portion of his spirit" might come to him. He did not ask that he be another Elijah but that he might have the same spirit of God that Elijah had. He desired that he might possess the same glorious characteristics of devotion to duty, courage in danger, loyalty to God such as Elijah his friend and master had manifested. Such a pledge of loyalty should be given by every believer in Christ and by every worker of the Church.

We are to do our work for making the world wherever and whenever opportunity comes, but first of all in the place where we are living. If any lesson is well known it is this, that whoever tries simply to help mankind as a whole, loses his labor so long as he does not undertake to help those nearest him. If you notice in our text you will read, "So they went down to Bethel." You will see that after the decision of Elisha to be loyal to his Leader and Master he was permitted to go on to the place where duty called him. Now Bethel for us means the place where God has permitted us to set up our tabernacle and display our banner for the time during which we are journeying to the promised land. Our Bethel is our Church, where God calls us to be faithful to our covenants and vows. The Church is the place where we have confessed one Lord and one Master. In the Church we own but one Leader. Our loyalty to Christ demands a deeper consecration to the work of the Church, the body of Christ. We stand in the community as witnesses of the Lord Jesus Christ and His divine truth. The work that He calls you to do is the advancement of His kingdom in the city and in this community. When so many agencies of the Church are actively engaged in the world such as you should be doing, the fear is that the tabernacle of the Lord shall be displaced by other institutions. The time has now come for an appeal to the Christian heart and conscience to rebuild the altar of Jehovah and God, to revive again the spirit of the Church on the foundation of Jesus Christ. We must carry out the spirit of our religion in every activity of the Church. While we have expressed our faith in the formulae which the Church has adopted as her standards, we have not exalted our Christ in our Church life. The great object of our devotion is the Person of Jesus Christ, and the loyalty that we owe Him should inspire us in our active service for His Church. When we exalt the Church of the living God, we are adoring, glorifying and exalting Jesus Christ our Head and our Leader. Everything done in His Spirit and in obedience to His command is done in loyalty to the great cause of His kingdom in the world. When Elisha was loyal to Elijah and so proved his loyalty to God so we likewise, when we are loyal to our Church covenant, loyal in church attendance, loyal to the standards of divine truth, so far are we lifting up Christ before the world.

If this loyalty is our keynote we should emphasize it by being first loyal to ourselves, then to our friends and our neighbors, and then give all time that we can for making the world better because we have lived here. We should be loyal citizens of the country, loyal to our President. Above all, we, as Christians, must be loyal to Jesus Christ, and being loyal to Him we are loyal to God. This is the great cause for which we stand. It is the name cause for which Christ gave Himself.

LESSONS FROM OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION

See last chapters of the Gospels and 1 Cor. 15

Perhaps the most striking fact brought out in the records of our Lord's resurrection is the unreadiness of His disciples to believe in it. He had warned them that He would be put to death and had promised that He would rise again on the third day. (See Mark 8:31; Luke 24:7, 21; John 10:17, 18), yet in spite of this warning and promise the crucifixion of their Master was evidently a great disappointment to them, and it perplexed their minds so greatly that they did not know what to think. They had some hope, apparently, that He would come to them again according to His promise. (John 14:18, 28), but the hope was so faint and vague that when He did come to them, they were taken by surprise and found it difficult to believe that it was He. They were even frightened. (Luke 24:37.)

And one reason for this unreadiness of the disciples to believe in the resurrection of Jesus was that He appeared to them in unexpected ways. He proved to them that He was, really, there in the body, and not as an apparition, by eating and drinking with them (see Acts 10:41) and by inviting the doubter among them to put his finger into the print of the nails in His hands and to thrust his hand into His wounded side. But He did not live with them as He had done before His crucifixion. He appeared among them or to some of them as individuals, repeatedly, but in a mysterious way, coming, as it seemed, from nowhere, and disappearing in the same way, and that gave an air of mystery to His appearance which perplexed them greatly.

No authoritative answer can be given to this question, but we know that our Lord had a definite purpose in everything that He did and we know that every act of His was intended to teach us something. It is our duty therefore to try and learn some helpful lessons from our Lord's appearances after His resurrection.

One thought which Jesus seems to have desired to present to the minds of His disciples is that although not to live with them as always before, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." He said before finally disappearing from them that He would be with them.

Another lesson we can learn is that we must not expect the Lord to do things in the way that may seem to us best or most likely.

There is one very tender and suggestive detail in connection with our Lord's resurrection. It is that before any of the disciples had seen Him, He sent through an angel a special message to Peter—to Peter who had denied Him with curses, and who must have been feeling almost like an outcast. "He is risen. Go tell His disciples and Peter," said the angel (Mark 16:7).

How Peter's heart must have jumped for joy when he heard that message, and knew that he was forgiven!

Then again, at the Sea of Galilee Jesus gave special attention to Peter's case; not this time for the purpose of reassuring him, but for the purpose of reminding him very forcefully of the fact that his beautiful, self-confident disposition had led him astray, and teaching him that he must prove his love by actions. Twice Jesus asked Peter if he loved Him, using both times the word for love which expresses the kind of love that God has for man. But Peter did not dare to face that challenge. He could only claim that he loved Jesus as a man loves his friend and he used the word which expresses that kind of love. Then Jesus came down to Peter's level, and accepted the sort of love that Peter could give. He asked a third time "Lovest thou Me?" but that time He used the same word for love that Peter used. Jesus knew well that Peter would rise from the lower to the higher kind of love when he received the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. No one can have the love of God in his heart until it is put there by the Holy Spirit. (Rom. 5:5.)

THE KNOWING HOGS

The New York Times says that a certain Lije Williams had been haled into court to answer a complaint that rose out of a broken bargain. Among the witnesses called to give evidence was one Steve Collins.

"Mr. Collins," said the examining lawyer, "you know the defendant in this case, do you not?"

"Oh yes," answered Mr. Collins.

"What is his reputation for veracity?" continued the lawyer. "Is he regarded as a man who never tells the truth?"

"Wal, I can't say that he don't never tell the truth," replied Steve, "but I know that, if he wanted his hogs to come to dinner, he'd have to git somebody else to call 'em."

EASILY SATISFIED

A northern man, traveling in the mountains of North Carolina, contracted an intense fondness for the corn pone indigenous to that section of the South. He pulled up his horse one day before a mountain cabin. A tall woman came to the door and invited him to alight and stay for dinner.

"Madam," he said, "I thank you for your hospitality; but all I want is some corn bread."

"Come right on in," she said. "If cawn bread is what you wants, you've come to the right place. We ain't got nothin' else."

MEXICO'S CRATER LAKE

The mere words "crater lake" carry with them a charm and mystery that are akin to romance. But Mexico, with all her romance, has never given abroad any description of some of the most beautiful lakes in the world. Valle de Santiago, a little town of the state of Guanajuato, boasts of four of the most perfect and beautiful of such lakes.

The village nestles among eleven craters, all formed in some past age by sudden explosions from the interior of the earth, explosions that blew out a great amount of earth, formed low cones and subsided without a flow of lava or other demonstration than the single explosion. They are what are known to science as "explosion craters."

Just how many years ago it all the craters, and on one side a portion of the crater wall has fallen away. A short climb, and as one rises over the edge one of the most beautiful views in Mexico is spread out. Half a mile across is the low line of the crater wall, and down below it is the greatest of lakes, calm as a plate of glass, and perhaps the tiny boat which plies the lake to the opposite side, close below the walls of basalt which run it. These walls, which rise from one hundred feet above the surface of the lake, are of the native rock which was blown off like the cork of a bottle when the crater was formed. It rises sheer and erect above the lake on every side. The columns of basalt give a truly mountainous, almost Alpine, touch to the scene.

Climbing down the steep road to the level of the lake, the visitor has opportunities to drink in real beauty, which here is more dignified and more like the Old World than almost anything in Mexico. The tropics are far distant and here in the higher lands, verdure is calm and beauty a thing of gentle touch.

The calm, restfulness of the crater lake is unlike anything in the world. One finds lakes and solitary pools in the forests or mountain fastnesses, and the calm there is akin to witchery, but they are stirred sometimes by passing breezes, and the trees will wave about in the wind. But in a crater lake there is not a breath that will stir it, and even a stone cast into its bosom creates ripples that seem as though they would be swallowed ere they are born. Peace is a word without a meaning until one lies silent on the slope of such a crater, with such a lake at his feet.—Mexican Herald.

HOW HATS ARE MADE

It is an interesting matter to follow stage by stage the evolution of a little pile of soft, fluffy rabbit fur into the finished hat—whether a light-colored crush or a raven-black hard hat of the derby shape. The general idea about such a hat is that it is cut and made, or molded, out of a sheet of felt, so that amazement comes when one is shown bales and heaps of rabbit fur and told that it is out of this that hats are made. Felt, indeed, is not so much a primary material, but, being the process by which wool, fur or hair is matted together and formed into a close fabric. For hats, rabbit fur is the material used. The first step in its treatment is the thorough cleansing of the close-clipped fur in a machine which winnows it of all dirt or foreign matter, and leaves it in a soft, fluffy condition resembling the finest and lightest down.

Anything less resembling a hat is impossible to imagine. But the marvelous ingenuity of the next process accomplishes an almost magical change. In the central box of a hopper-like machine, a big copper cone revolves. From above, the soft, fluffy fur is fed down in a shower, which clings like gray snow on the revolving cone, while jets of water and steam spray on the fur mat and plaster it into a complete covering. In a minute or two the cone is covered to the depth of one-eighth of an inch with this matted and saturated fur, which is now become felt. The machine is stopped, the cone taken out, and the workman dexterously peels off the felt covering. Being built up on the cone, it is also cone-shaped, and looks like a gigantic sugar-loaf bag. It is the embryo hat.

In this first state it is a soft, wet felt cone, measuring twenty-four inches by thirty. Rolled up, it enters upon a series of processes and shrunk together so that it measures 10 1-2 by 14 inches.

The hat, now a browny-gray felt cone, like a clown's cap, is smoothed by being placed against rapidly revolving sandpaper. It is stiffened by being dipped in shellac, dyed black by immersion in a vat, and then passes on to be shaped. Warm water gives the felt pliability again, and the man pulling out or "easing" the apex of the cone draws and smooths it down on to a wooden block, of the exact shape and size the hat is required to be. As it driest it takes its desired shape and firmness as regards the crown, while the brim is still flat and untrimmed.

The body of the hat is now practically finished. Then comes the shaping of the brim, which is worked down and bent over a wooden frame of the exact curl and line of the ordained design. Each size and style of hat has its own frame, as it has also its iron mold, wood block, etc., and every alteration in a season's style and shapes calls for an entirely new set of molds.—News Tribune.

BREAKING THEM IN

"Yer boots, sir, just come," said Private Jones.

"Thanks," sair Lieutenant Snigsby. "Oh, Jones, you know, I loathe new boots, and as your feet are, if anything, a trifle larger than mine, I should be glad if you would wear the boots for a day or two to stretch them."

"Yes, sir," said Jones.

About a month later those boots suddenly flashed through Lieutenant Snigsby's mind.

"By the way, Jones," he said, "I s'pose you've stretched those boots?"

"Let me have them, please."

"Yessir," said Jones.

And, to his officer's surprise, he unlaced the footgear he was wearing.

"I expect they'll want soling and heeling, sir," he said, as he handed them over to the astonished officer.

USELESS ARGUMENT

Girlie was fond of playing with her dolls, and always called herself "little mother." One day when her mother wished to put her in her little crib for her nap Girlie objected, saying she wanted to be in bed. When her mother refused, Girlie started crying.

"Oh," said her mother, "Girlie mustn't cry like that. Don't you know little mothers don't cry?"

"HIS BRIDAL NIGHT" AT THE WALNUT

"His Bridal Night," which comes to the Walnut, will open with the matinee on Saturday, March 30, and remains for the week following and there will be an extra Easter Monday matinee, April 1, as well as the regular Tuesday and Thursday popular price matinees.

The story is based on the fact that two young gentlemen of wealth are in love with two young ladies who are twins and so much alike that their own relatives have difficulty in telling them apart. One of the girls, who is to be married, has been flirting with her sister's sweetheart, and the sister in revenge impersonates her immediately after the wedding and leaves with the young husband. The sister and the young man follow them and the complications that ensue are many and tremendously funny.

In the company that will present "His Bridal Night" here are: Frederick V. Bowers, who has been the star in many of the leading musical comedy successes; Alma Youlin, a prima donna well-known to theatre-goers; the Sheridan Sisters, vaudeville features of several seasons, who have been selected for the twins of the play because of their remarkable likeness to each other; Sue Talmadge, Harry Lilford, as the butler, the part he created last season; Billy Wayne, Milton Dawson and others. Mr. Bowers has composed several melodies to be introduced that are said to be real hits such as: "When I Settle Down With You," "Good-Bye Joe," "I Need a Change of Diet Now and Then," "A Woman is a Puzzle," "Pajama Girls," "I Want Some Love." Scenically it will be one of the best productions ever seen at the Walnut.

There are lots of good people on earth and there are lots more about six feet below the crust.

THE AIR SHAFT

THE Red Cross coal mine consisted of two drifts that entered the hill about one hundred yards apart, and that ran for a mile and a half. Inside only an air course connected them. The coal occurred in an uneven vein, full of rolls and dips.

The drift at the left ran along a steep pitch to the side track; it was called the level heading, to distinguish it from the dip heading, which branched off from it at the farther end of the side track. Beyond the side track the level heading turned up grade. As the heading neared the top of the vein the coal became more level, but when the men had driven the heading only a short distance farther they ran into a "squeeze out." So they turned the heading to the left, over the top of the vein, and back in the direction of the drift mouth. They drove another road parallel with the heading and below it to serve as a room and an air course. That manner of carrying an air course is known as a "double entry."

Owing to the pitchy nature of the vein, however, the air became so bad in the "double entry" that the engineer in charge decided to sink a shaft from the surface to the lower entry. In his calculations he made a slight mistake, and as a consequence the shaft struck the vein some distance ahead of the face.

In addition to bad air, the Red Cross had to contend with another trouble. Above the dip heading in the upper part of the hill was the old Barnet vein; the workings there were abandoned and filled with water, which of late had been leaking through in greater and greater amount.

All day the old pump had chugged and gasped as it spouted dirty, oily sulphur water from the dip. A week before the water had come in a stream no larger than your thumb, but now it poured in so fast through a spider's web of spreading cracks that the old pump was unable to keep pace with it.

Everyone was working hard to get the last car of loose coal from the dip heading before the water should come in too deep. The drivers urged the tired mules up the slope with the loaded cars and down with the empties. The miners in the dip worked feverishly.

At half past three Dode Bratishaw drove his panting team out of the dip to the side track, unhooked the empty cars, and started them on to an empty car. He filled an oil can and replenished his lamp.

At the bottom of the vein three headings branched toward higher levels. When Dode reached the bottom he found the water already up to the bellies of the mules. He sat on the edge of the car and held his feet up while the mules floundered through and started up the branch heading at the right, which soon terminated in a pool of the water. Presently Dode came to the place where the men were waiting for him. Turning the mules, he hooked to the other end and waited for the men to load their tools.

Quickly picking up their dinner pails, oil cans and the picks and shovels, the miners hurried up the heading with the intention of escaping by way of the air course that connected the heading with the right drift, and that would be in no danger from the water. They had gone only a little distance when the mules turned to the right and dipped slightly.

"We're likely to run into a little water down here," said Dode. "I found water last time I came through."

The words were scarcely out of his mouth when a roar came up from the dip, and following it came a rush of air that made the lights dance.

A pickman named Brannigan, who was ahead, splashed into water and stopped.

"It's no use to go any farther," he said. "The heading dips still sharper a little way farther, and we'd be in water over our heads inside of two hundred yards."

While he spoke the water rose to his knees, and they knew that their had no time to lose. So they hurried back the way they had come.

"Now," said Dode, "there is just once chance for us to get above the water. We'll turn into the 'gob' at the curve and make for the level heading. It won't do any good to go back where we left the car, because that's already under water."

When they reached the curve they entered a room in the upper side, and from that crawled through the dog-hole in the wall into the next room. Thus they crawled from room to room They could stand erect only in the roads that they crossed.

Presently they came to the second branch heading and, after following it for a short distance, again turned into the rooms. Sometimes the dog-hole was near the face, but sometimes they had to crawl for fifty feet and more along the rib, over the "gobbed" rock before they found the dog-hole At last, with bruised hands and knees, they came to the third branch heading.

"Down here," said Brannigan, pausing for breath, "is an air course up to the new mine and push it out our way."

Dode divided the men into shifts, and sent the men in the reserve shifts up the return air course to work out of the way. Then Brannigan, who was the most experienced pickman in the crowd, started a cut two feet below the roof. The coal cut easily, and in half an hour he had undercut it to a depth of three feet. He came back to Dode to rest, while two men cut the coal down and shifted it to the road, where others loaded it on the cars.

Then another miner undercut a strip, which was cut down and loaded. When the car was full, they pushed it up the road and unloaded it on the side. Hour after hour the work went on. The shifts were shortened as the day progressed afternoon, but none could not work many minutes in that stagnant air. Twice during the long night from the water. They had gone only a little distance when it began to rain, but at last, at last!

Joyfully Donohue answered the signal. The word was carried back to the almost exhausted men that help was at hand. The tapping came a little to the right; and they turned their course in that direction.

The food and drink was gone by this time, and the men were forced to drink some of the lard oil to strengthen them for their work.

The air had become so bad that the miners breathed with difficulty. Dode ordered all the lights put out except two—one that the man with the pick used and another at the car. The rest of the men worked in the dark.

The hours passed slowly. It was nearly three o'clock when Dode, who was digging, broke through. The rush of cold air made him so dizzy that he had to lie down and wait for the rescuers to enlarge the opening wide enough for him to crawl through.

One by one the men were taken out and hoisted to the surface. Some of them were so weak from the effects of the bad air that they had to be assisted; but they revived rapidly when they reached the top and found their friends and families waiting for them.

The rescued men now learned that everyone had given them up for lost until the boss had suggested that morning the possibility that they might have reached the higher points of the mine. He at once organized a rescue party, which had set to work to dig through the bottom of the new air shaft.

"Did my mules get out?" asked Dode, as soon as he came to the surface.

"Yes," answered the boss. "They are down there in the valley, eating grass. The only place they didn't get wet was their ears."

"I knew they'd get through all right if they kept their ears dry," said Dode, grinning.—Youth's Companion.

MILLIONS IN SUNKEN SHIPS

There are fortunes lying under the sea in the holds of torpedoed ships, and many ndnds are busy on the problem of recovering this wealth.

"Salvage companies are laying plans for raising both ships and cargoes on a big scale," said Mr. R. H. Davis, managing director of Siebe, Gorman and Co., submarine engineers. "Cargoes to the value of millions of dollars are awaiting recovery.

"In many cases, where ships cannot be raised, cargoes can be saved. We recovered $350,000 in Spanish gold coins some years ago from the Alphonso XII, 165 feet under the sea, off Point Gando, Grand Canary."

PEOPLE URGED TO OBSERVE ARBOR DAY

The attention of the people of New Jersey to the proper observance of Arbor Day, Friday, April 12, was called on Friday in a statement issued jointly by Commissioner of Education Calvin N. Kendall, of the State Department of Public Instruction, and Alfred Gaskill, Director of the State Department of Conservation and Development. They said Arbor Day has a special significance, because the nation's forest resources are proving to be so large a factor in winning the war.

In a statement issued by the Department of Conservation and Development to all the shade tree commissions, highway and park officials and owners of shade trees a warning was given out that with the coming of the warm weather the shade trees in parts of New Jersey are in danger of being defoliated by a caterpillar pest. The pest is the "gipsock moth," and eggs from which the caterpillar will hatch are on the trees, or adjacent structures, in flat white or grayish masses, each about one-half an inch wide by three-quarters of an inch long.

JURY EXONERATES LIEUT. McMAHON

Evidence Brought Out Proves Accidental Death

The Coroner's inquest into the death of Fred Monach was held in the fire house on Monday morning at 10.30 o'clock, when the evidence furnished by the witnesses, Dr. H. W. Bauer, James T. Weart, C. Morris Beck, Joseph G. Seel and Cordi Stokley, led the jury to arrive at the verdict of accidental death, thus exonerating Perez G. McMahon, by whose gun Monach came to his death.

The jury rendered the following decision, which will be held for the grand jury the later part of April:

Palmyra, N. J., April 4, 1918.

We, the Coroner's jury, do find that F. W. Monach came to his death at the High School building, Fifth street and Delaware avenue, Palmyra, N. J., about 4.20 A. M. on the morning of March 23, 1918, from a gunshot wound accidentally fired at the hands of Perez G. McMahon while on guard duty at the Palmyra High School.

We, the Coroner's jury exonerate Perez Grant McMahon from all blame.

A SPECIAL EASTER CHURCH SERVICE

All churches at Easter tide have special features for this day, but such an innovation as given at the Epworth M. E. Church at the evening service merits special mention.

"An Evening in the Orient" as given last Sunday evening at the M. E. Church, was appropriate to the occasion, impressive in effect and, we believe, inspirational in its achievement.

Miss Jennie Weart read in narrative form the ever-beautiful story of "The Resurrection," as associated with its oriental atmosphere. At appropriate intervals choir give ... The choir under the able leadership of Mr. Thomas Griffonberg is now a well-balanced, capable organization and their work was more than commendable.

The Greeks in their ceremonials of a religious character gave prominence to "The Vestal Virgins." Miss Weart with her beautiful voice has that elusive quality of purity so appropriate for this part. Her reading was distinct and so "toned" as to but add to the impressiveness and grandeur of the "greatest story ever told."

The choir, Mr. Griffenberg and Miss Weart are indeed doing God's good work when they so beautifully present him to us this story that is indeed "an ever-present help in times of trouble."

Next Tuesday will be the regular mothers' meeting. Every lady welcome. Quite a war is being fought in Philadelphia about making the city safe for the marines and sailors who visit the city. The Baptists ministers' meeting suggested not only a five-mile dry zone, but a ten-mile safe-ty zone. The clergymen pledged the Government their support in every effort to safeguard our men in the national service. Secretary Daniels is certainly interested in surrounding the boys with healthful influences.

Mr. Smith—I see that Mrs. McQue has just passed without speaking. I thought you were great friends.

Mr. Brown—No, we are not on the best of terms just now.

Smith—How's that?

Brown—Well, you see, it's like this. You remember the fire that took place at their house about a fortnight ago. Well, I ran for a long plank to put up at the window, so that she might slide down before the fire brigade arrived. But how was I to know there was a nail in it?

EYES NEEDED FOR THE NAVY—HERE'S YOUR OPPORTUNITY—TO HELP

Eyes for the navy—field glasses, lenses, sextants and other instruments possessing lenses of strong magnifying power—that is the crying need of the navy. Photographic lenses, too, are needed. If you possess such, you will be performing a patriotic duty by forwarding them to the navy recruiting office at 86 Park Place, Newark, N. J., or any of its branches throughout the State. Branch offices are located at 202 Market street, Paterson, N. J.; 323 Grove street, Jersey City, N. J., and 2 North Broad street, Trenton, N. J., or you may send them direct to Assistant Secretary Franklin D. Roosevelt, care of Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C.

Pack glasses so as to prevent breakage in transit and attach your name to them. The Navy Department will pay for each glass accepted the sum of $1, and will return them to their owners at the termination of the war, if that be possible.

It is possible to manufacture sufficient glasses of this nature to meet the demand. There will be no need for schools to navigate the seas with an under supply, however, if the patriotically inclined will give to the Government instruments of this kind which they possess and perhaps never use.

The need for glasses to search out the lurking submarine is actual and imperative. Many have given their glasses to the Government. You are be-ing asked only to give those instruments. Will you?

MR. PORTER'S FARM IMPLEMENT FACTORY AGAIN ON FIRE

Fire broke out in the paint room of Mr. Newhorge's Farm Implement Factory in East Riverton on Monday afternoon last, but, through the prompt action of the Riverton Fire Company, the flames were soon extinguished with but little damage.

The Independence Fire Company of Palmyra also responded, but their services were not needed.

BOYS ENTERTAINED BEFORE LEAVING

Field Club Rooms Scene of Merriment as Boys Play and Sing

The boys who left for Camp Dix on Monday were very nicely entertained on Monday evening as the guests of the Field Club in the club rooms, where, with readings by Miss Ellen Griffenberg and piano selections by Miss Carol Becker, together with an informal party, they enjoyed the hospitality shown them.

During the festivities they were served with refreshments and presented with half-dozen silk khaki handkerchiefs by the Home Guards, the usual box of stationery and fountain pen, by the township of Palmyra. The Palmyra Branch A. R. C., in connection with the customary knitted outfit, presented each man with a comfort kit, fully equipped.

OUTWITTING THE SHARK

Persons who know the coastal aboriginal of Australia say that he is not greatly afraid of a shark—that he is indeed a match for the big sabre-toothed fish when he is not taken unawares. He may lose a leg or an arm, or he may be carried off bodily; but, in any event, writes Mr. Norman Duncan in the Australian Byways, the damage will be owing rather to the cunning approach of the shark than to the limitations of the diver. Fairly warned, he will dive to the bottom, roll the water, and thus elude the attack; and if he is pugnaciously disposed at the moment, he will fight.

One young diver, who was taking a crawfish to the surface, all at once found himself in a furious engagement. It was incautious of the diver to have a crawfish in his possession, for the sharks are inordinately fond of crawfish; and this indiscreet diver came out of the encounter with a lacerated thigh and one arm missing.

Another story, of more credible ... the reef in search of ... ings, awoke all at once to an amazing situation. It was not that the shark was near, not that it had turned and was darting, but that his body was actually in the shark's wide-open mouth. The black boy acted sharply: he withdrew his head in a flash, having at the same time punched the shark to distract its attention; after a brisk tussle he rejoined himself, and lived to prove the adventure with a scarred cheek.—Youth's Companion.

HELPS

An important help is to keep a pencil and pad in the kitchen, hanging where convenient reach, and on it to list everything that is to be remembered be written, so that no one will have to open the refrigerator the stretch to get the groceries, or lock the store room door, or buy nails or to do some important work about the house. We have found this an invaluable help for years. All of us know that we look there for the things to be remembered.

A pair of shears in the kitchen is a blessing. We have two pairs, because we have to keep one pair for the lamps alone. But we use them after every meal about the cooking. They cut meats, strings, lettuce, celery, all things for salad and for more things than we can mention, and they do all of these things better than the best knife, and I keep the knives sharp, too.

Corn meal mush, or any of the fine grained cereals, makes a very good breakfast food by itself or fried after cooling and eaten with syrup. To make it pretty as well as good, pack such mush in pound baking-powder cans. When it is turned out, the round slices look very attractive, browned and overlapping each other on the platter.

Quick relief for a cough is to wring a thickly folded flannel from real hot water and sprinkle lightly with turpentine. This applied to the chest or well up on the throat will stop most coughs.—Grist.

A man named Dodgin had recently been appointed foreman in a brickyard, but his name was not known to all the employes. One day while on his round he came across two men sitting in a corner smoking, and stopped near them.

"I'm Dodgin, the new foreman," he replied.

"So are we," replied the other workers. "Sit down and have a smoke."
