NEW FIRE PERIL; HOME ELECTRIC DEVICES SHOULD BE HANDLED WITH CARE

A new form of fire peril is coming into prominence as a cause of much destruction, and its fires are so directly associated with carelessness that it has been deemed necessary to issue a special warning to the people of the United States.

Because of their convenience, small electric devices, such as pressing irons, curling irons, toasters, electric pads or blankets, electric plate warmers, and electric sterilizers or heaters are now to be found almost everywhere. If these devices are used with proper care, the danger would be negligible, but, unfortunately, a proportion of their users do not realize the peril of leaving them in circuit when not in use. In such cases these devices tend to become overheated, which, upon being left in the fire, is likely to start a fire.

Various "safety" devices have been added by certain of the manufacturers of these articles, but there is one absolute precaution which should be kept in mind at all times by every user, namely, that of shutting off the current when not personally and continuously supervising the use.

ASBURY NOTES

Last Sunday witnessed one of the best services held in "Old Asbury." Both morning and evening our Pastor's sermons were inspiring and helpful. In the morning one new member was admitted by letter and two persons were baptized. Does this look as if "Old Asbury" will have to close its doors? Never. Although there are only a handful to carry on the affairs of the church, yet these faithful ones are doing the best they can and leaving the rest with the Lord. This Sunday morning the Lord's Supper will be observed, and as this is the last Sunday Rev. P. R. Pittman will be our Pastor. It is hoped that a large congregation will be present to hear his farewell message.

PLANS RUSHED FOR IMPROVING BROAD STREET

C. H. Hill Urges Use of Township's Surplus For Important Work

Effective steps to solve the long standing problem of the condition of Broad street near the station are being taken by the Township Committee and the prospects are that what has long been a source of great annoyance to all the residents of the town soon will be remedied.

On Wednesday morning Mr. Sleeper, of the Township's Engineers, inspected the street with Chairman Davies and C. H. Hill, and promised to have the specifications for the necessary repairs ready by next Tuesday. It is expected that the street will be resurfaced by the end of the month.

The method by which the improvement will be financed was developed at the special meeting of the committee Tuesday night. Mr. Hill called attention to the fact that the Township had been meeting the expenses for the current year out of the surplus from preceding years.

Instead of from the revenue for that current year, as contemplated by the laws governing township affairs. For instance, that audit of the books showed a present surplus of about $3,000 cash with about $6,000 available from delinquent taxes and franchise taxes.

Mr. Hill proposed that this $14,000 already available, should be expended to make urgent improvements about the town, chiefly in improving the streets, such as the Broad street plan, instead of hoarding the surplus and obtaining no benefit from it. Of course, with the $14,000 spent, it would be necessary to borrow funds each year until the current revenue is collected, but this, Mr. Hill pointed out, is the customary practice of townships.

The Trolley Company is bound to keep up that part of Broad street between and for 18 inches on both sides of its tracks and it is proposed to divide the remainder between the Township and the county, inasmuch as Broad street is a county road, when the improvement is undertaken. T. W. Land has been requested to get two other Freeholders to view the street this Saturday and Mr. Hill will appear at the meeting of the Freeholders Wednesday to press the plan.

It is contemplated continuing the improvement of Broad street on from year to year until it is improved its entire length.

A further town improvement outlined by chairman Davies and Committee Cook is the curbing and laying of walks on Fifth street in the neighborhood of the High School building for the benefit of the school children and residents of that vicinity.

SYNOPSIS

Roberta, an orphan, half French, half American, starting for America to stay with an uncle, meets Count de Lamoignon, a French nobleman, who is in trouble. By a mistake, Roberta's uncle believes she is a nephew. Knowing him to be a woman, he sends her to a man's attire. Her uncle, General Carruthers, informs his supposed nephew that he needs his knowledge of French to straighten out a deal for providing mules for France. The governor's honor is involved in the mule deal.

Roberta pledges her aid and is introduced to Governor Faulkner and to his private secretary, Buzz Glendinning. Mrs. Jeff Whitworth is deep in the mule scheme with her husband and endeavoring to get the governor's signature to the transaction.

The governor gives a dinner to Roberta, who has been made private secretary pro tem. She matches her wit against Mrs. Whitworth.

Roberta examines specifications of the proposed deal. Mrs. Whitworth tries to tempt Roberta and makes love to her.

Roberta accompanies the governor to the state prison, where he wishes to see a murderer. The latter attacks the governor, and Roberta defends him.

Roberta discovers that the murderer has killed his man in defending a woman. She secures a statement from the woman.

She takes the statement to the governor, who gives her a letter announcing the imminent arrival of Count de Bourdon.

The count arrives. He is in the plot with the Whitworths to defraud the French government in the mule deal.

Roberta goes with the governor to a mountain district from whence news has come that a Frenchman is detained in captivity.

"If it not that we will be occupied on the morning of tomorrow with the signing of those papers of importance, your excellency?" he asked, with a grave assumption which was under a fine control.

"The secretary of state, General Carruthers, and I think it will be best that you see the grazing lands of Harpeth and some of the mules being put into condition before the signing of the contracts," was what was "handled out to him," as my Buzz would have expressed it, by my Governor Faulkner with a great courtesy and kindness as he helped himself to some excellent chicken prepared in a fry. I could see a great start of alarm come into the eyes of that small Lieutenant the Count de Bourdon at those calm words, but he gave not a sign of it. In my heart was a great hope that something had been discovered for the protection of my soldiers of France, and I also took to myself a portion of that excellent chicken and did make the attempt to consume it as I beheld all of those great gentlemen performing. I believe that under excitement men possess a much greater calmness of appetite than do women.

"My Governor, it is not necessary that I behold those lands and those mules. The signature of the great governor of the state of Harpeth will make a mule to grow from a desert in the eyes of the French government," he said, with a smile of great charm spreading over his very small countenance.

But just at this moment, when a reply would have been of an awkwardness to make, the music, which is made by a most delightful band of black men for all eating in that club of Old Hickory, began to play the great March of the French, and with one motion all of the gentlemen in that dining room rose to their feet in respect to the distinguished guest of that Old Hickory club. Also many friendly glances were cast upon me, which I returned with a smile of great gratitude.

"Yes, the pen is mightier than the mule stick in his eyes, the sounder!" remarked my uncle, the General Robert, as I drove to the capitol with him in his car, while the Governor Faulkner took his guest with him in his.

"Is any proof been found that he shall not do this robbery to France, my Uncle Robert?" I asked with great eagerness.

"Trap is about ready to spring, but not quite. Gad, but Jeff Whitworth is a skilled thief! I know what he is up to, but I can't quite get it on the surface. Keep the French robber busy, boy, for a little longer, and I'll land him. Here we are at the office! Now you get busy keeping them busy—and I'll land 'em. If not I'll go and show France what real fighting is, and I'll take you with me into the worst trench they've got. Battles, indeed, they ought to have been at Chickamauga. Now depart!" With which words my uncle, the General Robert, got out of the car and left me to direct it to wherever I chose.

It has been my good fortune to be one of the guests at many very brilliant receptions of much state in some of the very grand and ancient palaces of the different countries of Europe, but at none of them have I seen a greater brilliancy than at the one given in his mansion by the Governor Faulkner of the state of Harpeth in America. Also I had never beheld women of a more loveliness than those of the state of Harpeth, who had come from many small cities near to Harpethville at an invitation of very careful selection for their beauty and grace.

"And most beautiful of all those beautiful grande dames was that Madame Patricia Whitworth, who with her husband stood at the side of his excellency the great Governor Faulkner for the receiving of his guests. Her eyes of the blue flowers set in the snow of crystals were in a gleaming, and the costume that she wore was but a few wisps of gossamer used for the revealing of her radiant body. In my black and stiff attire of the raven I stood near to the other hand of the Governor Faulkner, and there was such an anger for her in my heart that it was difficult that I made a return of the smile she cast upon me at every few minutes. Was there a mockery in that smile, that she had discovered my woman's estate and was using her own beauty for a challenge to me? I could not tell nor could I judge exactly what the smile of boldness which the Lieutenant Count de Bourdon cast upon me might mean. And in doubt and anxiety I stood there in that great salon for many hours to make conversation with the guest of honor as well as those who came to him for presentation, until at last I was so weary that I could not make even a good night to my uncle, the General Robert, when we entered, long after midnight, the doors of Twin Oaks.

When in my own apartment, alone with the beautiful grandmamma I cast myself upon the bed upon which my father had had birth and wept with all my woman's heart, which beat so hard under that attire of the raven.

And then suddenly the telephone upon the table beside my bed gave a loud ringing in the darkness that was long after midnight. Very quickly from fear I covered my head with my pillow and waited with a great fluttering of heart.

Then a second time it rang with a great fury, and I perceived that I must make a response to it.

I arose and took that receiver into my hand, and spoke with a fine though husky calmness.

"What is it?" I asked.

"Is that you, Robert?" came the voice of my beloved governor, which made the heart of that anguished Roberta, marquise of Gresham and By, beat into a sudden great happiness, though also alarm.

"Yes, your excellency."

"Can you dress very quietly, get your car and come up here to the mansion without letting anybody know of it?"

"I will do what you command."

"I need you, boy, and I need you quick."

"I come."

"Get the car at the street beyond the side door and come in that way. Cato will let you in. Come to my bedroom quietly so as not to wake Jenkins. Can you find your way?"

"Immediately I come to you."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Tall Timbers of Old Harpeth.

AT the door of the mansion I was admitted by my good Cato, who was attired in a very long red flannel sleeping garment with a red cap, also of the flannel, tied down upon the white wool of his head.

"De governor is up in his room, and you kin go right up. I never heard of no such doings as is going on in his house dis night with that there wild man with a gun five feet long coming and going like de wind."

With which information Good Cato started me up the stairs. "First door to the right, front, and don't knock," he called in a whisper that might have come from his tomb in death as he slowly retired into the darkness below with his candle.

"Is that you, Robert?" came a question in Governor Faulkner's voice from a large table over by the window. The room was entirely in shadow except for the shaded light upon the table, under whose rays I remarked the head and shoulders of that Governor Faulkner at whose bidding I had come out into the dead of the night.

"Come over here, and walk softly, so as not to stir up Jenkins," he commanded me, and I went immediately to his side, even as I did experience a difficulty in the breath of Roberta, marquise of Gresham and By.

"What is it that you wish, my Governor Faulkner?" I asked as I looked down upon him as he sat with a paper in his hand regarding it intently.

"Sit down here under the light beside me," was his next command to me, and he reached out one of his slender and powerful hands and drew me down into a chair very close beside him.

"What is it?" I asked as my head came so close to his that I felt the warmth of his breath on my cold cheek.

"Hold these two fragments of paper together and translate the French written upon them literally," he said to me as he handed me two small pieces of paper upon which there was writing.

And this is what I discovered to be written:

Honored Madam—The one at the head of all has sent me to this place to inspect grazing lands and make report. I send in a report of what is not here and the signing of the papers by your Governor Faulkner must be done quickly in blindness before a discovery of what is not—

"It is written to a woman," I said very quietly as I made a finish of reading.

"Yes, boy, to a woman. I have made my last fight to—to hold an old belief, which in some way seemed to be one of my foundation stones. The general is right, they are all alike, the soft, beautiful, lying things. The truth is not in them, and their own or a man's honor is a plaything. That piece of paper was sent me by a man up in the mountains of Old Harpeth, who loves me with the same blood bond that I love you, boy, all on account of a gun struck up in the hands of his enemy. Here's the note he sent with it:

Bill, we caught a furen man for a revenue up by the still at Turkey gulch, and this was in his pocket. I made out to read 'em name. I send it. The man is kept tied. What is mules worth? Send price and what to do with this man critter by son Jim. Believe me, they ain't no grasing fer 5000 mules on Paradise ridge, but I know Jim Todd.

"What is the significance of this paper, my Governor Faulkner?" I asked after I had made the attempt to translate to myself the very peculiar writing he had given to me.

"I do not know just exactly myself, Robert," answered my Governor Faulkner as he dropped his head upon his hands while he rested his elbows on the polished table among its scattered papers. "I am convinced now that this mule contract business is the plot against my honor that the general believes it to be and has been trying to get to a legal surface. In some way Jim Todd has got hold of one end of the conspiracy. It has been hard for me to believe that a woman would sell me out. If I take it to her in the morning I'll perhaps get an explanation that will satisfy me. The men who are in with Jeff Whitworth are the best financiers in the state, and it is impossible to believe that."

Very suddenly it happened in my heart to know what to compel that very large man beside me to do for the rescue of his honor. He must see the matter not through the lies of that beautiful Madame Whitworth, the instrument of that very ugly husband, but he must look into the matter with his blood friend, that Mr. Jim Todd.

"You must go immediately to that Mr. Jim Todd and his prisoner to discover truth, your excellency," I said, with a very firm determination, as I looked straight into his red eyes that had in them almost the look of shame for dishonor.

"It's twenty-four hours on horseback across old Harpeth from Springtown, boy. The trip would take three days. I can't do it with these guests here, even if they are robbers. I'll have to stay and dig down to the root of the matter here. I may find it in the hearts of my friends," he answered me, with a look of great despair.

"The root of the matter is that man who is a prisoner, my Governor Faulkner. I say that you go; that you start while yet it is night and while no man can advise you not to take that journey. It can be done while this entertainment to the farm of the Brices is made for the inspection of mules and also the running of horses. It is necessary." As I spoke to him in that manner a great force rose in me that I poured out to him through my eyes.

PLEDGES AID IN NATIONAL CRISIS

TRENTON, Mar. 28—Governor Edge forwarded a communication to Congress yesterday conveying the information that he had signed the bill, introduced by Senator McCran, authorizing him to employ all the resources of the State to aid the Federal Government in meeting the present national crisis. In his letter the Governor said:

"I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of an act passed by the Legislature of New Jersey and approved by me as Governor. As will be seen, this law offers the resources of New Jersey, without limitation, to the Government of the United States in the impending crisis."

The Governor signed yesterday the Florence bill making a conditional appropriation of $1,000,000 for the purchase of the proposed route for a sea-level canal between Bordentown, in the Delaware river, and Raritan bay, at Morgan. The appropriation will become available when Congress has officially ratified the report of the engineers of the War Department recommending the construction of the canal and has given the necessary assurances that it will be built when the State has acquired the route.

The Governor spent the entire day disposing of bills, about 200 of which reached him immediately following the close of the session last Friday. He signed nearly fifty measures and disapproved a half dozen others.

TRENTON, Mar. 29—The will of the late Ferdinand W. Roebbling has been filed for probate with the Surrogate and it is estimated that the estate is approximately $25,000,000. Under the will all of it with the exception of $3000 remains in the immediate family. The $3000 is for distribution among the Roebbling servants, as the executor, Karl G. Roebbling, Jr., sees fit. No charitable bequests were made, but Mr. Roebbling expressed a desire that his executors continue the support to a number of local charities in which he showed great interest during his life.

All his interests in the John A. Roebbling's Sons' Company is divided equally between his sons, Karl G. and F. W. Roebbling, Jr. It is understood that Karl will be elected treasurer and general manager of the company, positions held by his father.

Bohner, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, this city, has been called to the pastorate of the First Church, Ashland, O., and is holding the call under consideration.
