SPEEDING AUTO RUNS INTO RIVER

Bethlehem Rubber Man Has Narrow Escape When Failing to Notice Turn at Ferry

Driving down Cinnaminson avenue toward the ferry at a rapid rate Tuesday evening about 10.40, Guy de Rigandier, president of the North Rubber Co., of Bethlehem, Pa., failed to turn to the right where the ferry driveway switches off and continued straight down the stub end of the avenue into the river.

Rigandier, who was driving a handsome new Wills St. Clair sport roadster, managed to check his speed before entering the river and only the front wheels went into the water. He struck the warning red light placed at the turn by the ferry.

A crowd soon gathered and pulled the car out of the river, while Officer Nelson Wallace took Rigandier in charge, but later released him.

The accident shows the need of protection for motorists from similar mishaps. The ferry company originally built a curbing and sidewalk across the end of the avenue, blocking it off but A. S. King protested to the State highway department that this closed an established highway and the ferry company had to remove the walk and curb.

The red light, which Rigandier says he did not see, was the only protection which has been provided recently.

The end of the street is very dark and motorists unacquainted with the situation are unable to see just where the road is leading them and to continue on down it is a natural mistake to make at night.

It has been suggested that it is up to the State highway or township officials to take measures to protect traffic at this point.

In addition to warning lights, additional street lights to illuminate the road would probably reduce the menace.

County Notes

Quite a number of farmers question whether the State Highway Department has power or authority to close their roadside markets, as threatened by orders abolishing them in sections where the presence of the stands is held to be a menace by causing traffic congestion. If it comes to a real showdown the farmers believe that all they will have to do will be to move back a few feet from the right of way and place the stands on their own land. There, they claim, they cannot be disturbed.

Two in Canoe Upset

The spectators at the three mile international championship swim for women, run off here Saturday afternoon, were treated to a thrill that was not on the program, when Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wisner, of Palmyra, upset their canoe off the pier, and narrowly escaped drowning. The couple had come to Riverton to see the fancy diving, and were near the diving board when a splash from one of the divers made Mrs. Wisner jump to one side. Mr. Wisner managed to grab the canoe, but Mrs. Wisner would have drowned had Giles Knight, 14, who was in a boat nearby not gone to her rescue. Mrs. Wisner had sunk below the surface when the lad grabbed her by the shirtwaist and pulled her head above water. She aided him in the rescue by keeping her head and not struggling. Miss Marie Hillegas, one of the divers, sprang overboard and helped to assist Mrs. Wisner into a boat. Mr. Wisner was also hauled aboard by Walter Armstrong and Frank Probsting, and both were taken home in an automobile.

OLD HOME DAY

How often we think of the Days of yore,
And the dear old friends we've met before,
How we long once more to see their faces,
For now alas, they sojourn in different places.

Here in Palmyra, there will be a Day,
September thirty, is the date they say,
When the old residents will be given a greeting
And come back to an Old Home Day meeting.

The Day will be spent in an enjoyable way,
For the program is so arranged for all who may,
And believe Palmyra has advanced as a town;
Her Schools, Churches, Stores—why just look around.

Citizens all—be patriotic and true, 'tis your Day;
By decorating your homes, in the most pleasing way.
Come out to the Grove and hear the band play,
Also the speeches, be social, be friendly, 'tis your Day.

BURNED IN MOTOR BOAT

Three Seriously Hurt in Explosion on Pensauken Creek

Three men who had attended the firemen's carnival at Palmyra were seriously burned in a motorboat explosion on the Pensauken creek Saturday night.

The victims are Clarence McGuckin, 23 years old, of 3464 Edgemont street, burns of the face and neck; Frank Bomgard, 30 years old, of 3424 Tilton street, burns of the face and side, and his brother, Anthony Bomgard, 24 years old, of 3428 Tilton street, burns of the face, body and legs. All are expected to recover.

The explosion was due to a leaking gas tank and occurred while the three men, with two others who were standing in the water, were trying to float the boat which had grounded at low tide.

The Palmyra police received a call for aid at 1.30 a.m., and Officers Beck, Rodgers and Wallace responded, accompanied by S. G. Snelson and Speers Kerr, with the Palmyra ambulance. The men were taken to Dr. Witte, at Riverton, for first aid treatment and then rushed to Cooper hospital, Camden, by Chief Beck and Mr. Snelson.

$24,000 SAVED ON SEWER CONTRACT

Vosbury Reports Total Cost Considerably Less Than Amount of Money Appropriated

Mr. John M. Davies,
Chairman of the Township Committee,
Palmyra, N. J.

Dear Mr. Davies:

In reply to your verbal request for a statement of the final cost of the sewerage system, I would advise you as follows:

On June 28th, 1922, we prepared a final estimate of the sanitary sewerage system, disposal plant and storm sewer, which amounted to $178,954.00. As we believed that even lower bid prices would probably be received, we suggested to the Township Committee that an ordinance appropriating the sum of $175,000.00 be introduced. Owing to the fact that the bids received were lower than anticipated and that certain difficulties which we had expected to encounter during progress of the work did not materialize, the final cost of constructing the entire work will be considerably less than the amount of the bond issue.

As the work has now reached the stage of completion where it is possible for us to prepare a reasonably accurate estimate of the final cost, we are in a position to state that the three projects enumerated above, that is, the sanitary sewers, the disposal plant and the storm sewer, will be finally completed for a sum not to exceed $155,000.00, or approximately $24,000 less than our original estimate.

Up to the present time we have prepared no figures that will show the probable charges to be made by direct and indirect assessment, based upon the final cost. The original plan of assessment, and the one which was explained in public, was based upon the sum of $178,954. If this plan was followed out, a vacant lot having a fifty foot frontage would have to pay the first year $10.58, while a lot built upon would pay $14.43, the difference between the two being due to the additional cost of the house connection from the sewer to the curb line, and also the service charge made for use of the sewerage system. In both cases, the charges made the first year is the maximum and decreases year by year until, at the end of the tenth year, there is a drop for a vacant lot from $10 to approximately $4.00. For a lot with a house upon it the charge is reduced from $13.66 at the tenth year to $6.33 for the eleventh year.

As the actual cost of constructing the sewer system will be considerably less than the amount upon which the foregoing assessment charges were calculated, it is reasonable to estimate that the charges finally made will be materially less than those stated.

In conclusion, I would advise you that if the tentative plan of assessment which your Committee has under consideration is followed out, no property owner in the Township will be assessed or will pay, by means of taxation or special charges, any part of the cost of the sewer system unless he receives a direct benefit from the same.

Very truly yours,
W. DeWITT VOSBURY.

New Hunting and Game Laws

Early migratory movements of the birds indicate there will be plenty of sport for New Jersey hunters when the reed and rail bird season opens September 1. Sportsmen report the birds are already congregating in great numbers on the river and bay meadows.

The open season for sora, mars'n hen, mud hen and all the other rails and for shore birds now in season, including the black-bellied and golden plover and the greater and lesser yellow legs, will continue until November 30. Reed bird season will close October 30. Legal hunting for ducks, geese and snipe begins October 16.

Daily bag limits established by New Jersey law fix the quantity of this class of game that may be taken by one hunter, as follows: 25 in all of rails, mud hen and marsh hen; 5 sora; 50 reed birds; 15 in all of plover and yellow legs.

Under a new game law changing the New Jersey deer season, a fortunate hunter may legally bag two bucks next winter, instead of one to which the law has heretofore limited him, according to the application of the bag limit act as interpreted by the State Fish and Game Commission.

The new season law permits hunting for deer on the last two Wednesdays in December and the first two Wednesdays in January, thus making the season bridge two years. In previous years the deer season has been five consecutive days in December and the law limited the hunter to one buck during this period. The law, however, specifies "year" and not "season" in fixing bag limits for deer.

WHAT NAILS TELL

IF YOUR stenographer, who you know takes no part in the housework at home, comes to the office with a shading of gray under her finger nails that is one thing. And it is quite another thing if your neighbor, the mother and housewife in a servantless household, has finger nails that are far from spotless. Likewise you may draw one conclusion if the young bookkeeper has grimy finger nails and quite another conclusion if the young man who has elected to work in a machine shop appears with nails very much grimier. Actually to have stained or grimy finger nails certainly does not betoken bad manners or negligence.

The proportion of men and women who are engaged in work where immaculate fingers are a possibility is now very much larger than it ever was before. Once comparatively few persons, save those who enjoyed leisure and wealth, or those who were indolent parasites, might aspire to having finger nails that were not marked indelibly by the stains of toil. So it came to be looked upon as a mark of aristocratic station in life, to have immaculate fingers. Perhaps it is a survival of this state of affairs that makes many a young man and woman, in selecting a line of work, look with special favor on work that permits the maintenance of spotless finger nails. The young locomotive engineer may possess very much higher grade of intelligence, may be better bred and very much better paid than the young man who measures out cotton goods behind a counter, yet there always are some young women who will regard the acquaintance of the latter because his work leaves no telltale traces.

It would be quite unfair to say, therefore, that the perfectly-kept finger nails are a criterion of good breeding. However, the finger nails are often looked upon as an index to these things. The real point is that it is important to keep your nails and fingers generally as clean and stainless as your work will permit. Habits of cure early acquired stick to one through life. Soap and water and a nail brush will do marvels after even the grimiest sort of work. And remember, if you are not engaged in work that stains, then there is positively no excuse for you.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

MONEY IN THE HAND

WEALTH that is gained by the subject not in trade or business, but in the pursuit of professional or artistic life, is indicated in the hand in various ways. The principal sign is a star on the mount of Apollo, which lies at the base of the finger of Apollo, the third or ring finger. This is the finger of artistic achievement. If the mount of Mercury, lying at the base of the finger of Mercury or little finger, has two deep vertical, parallel lines, it is a good sign of money acquired either in business or in some professional pursuit, especially in drugs or medicines. This is considered a very good sign in the hand of a man of medicine.

Since there can be little or no success in business without good health, offending capacity for work, the successful business man or woman must have a strong line of life, and the line of health should be either favorable or absent altogether.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 3

NEHEMIAH REBUILDS THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Neh. 2:1-7:4.

GOLDEN TEXT—Our God will fight for us.—Neh. 4:20.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—Neh. 2:3-20; I Cor. 3:9-17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God helped Nehemiah Build a Wall.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How a City Wall Was Rebuilt.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Praying, Watching, Working.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Success Through Leadership and Co-operation.

Having secured a leave of absence from the Persian court, and credentials from the king, Nehemiah journeyed to Jerusalem. After resting three days without disclosing his purpose to any one, he made a survey of the walls by night. Having thus obtained first-hand information he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem." He then made known the hand of providence in bringing him to Jerusalem with the authority to rebuild its walls. He thus showed great wisdom in finding out for himself the real conditions and what work would be required to restore the walls. The one who is qualified to lead in a great undertaking is the one who has mastered the situation and is thus able to remove objections and show how the work can be done.

I.—Preparation for the Building (ch. 3).

The division of labor in this project shows Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy.

Note some outstanding features of this great work.

1. Stress Laid Upon Indifference (3:5) In administrative tasks it is just that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action will be a warning to some and an encouragement to others by showing the integrity of the director.

2. Help Rendered by the Women (3:12). Perhaps Shallum had no sons to aid him. It is a fine thing for women to be able to take hold even in building a wall when there are no men to do it. God's word carefully notes such extraordinary acts.

3. Stress Laid Upon Earnestness of Some (3:20). If one knows that his faithfulness will be recognized he will earnestly pursue his tasks.

4. Every One Built Over Against His Own House (3:10, 23, 28). Man's chief concern is for his family. No incentive to exertion is quite so strong as that which concerns his own family.

5. Certain Guilds of Men Undertook Certain Work (ch. 3:8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and craft will usually work better together.

II. Hindrances Encountered (4:1-6:14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballot and Tobiah (4:1-6; cf. 2:19-20). The opponents of God's servants usually begin by hurling at them shafts of ridicule. They called the Jews but a feeble folk and asserted that the tread of a prowling fox would break down their stone wall.

2. Conspiracy of a Sudden Attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic and thus hinder the work. When the enemy cannot succeed by scoffing then he resorts to intimidation.

3. Conspiracy With the Jews (4:10-23). They sought by means of the Jews from the outside to discourage their brethren by showing that the task was hopeless and that at any time they were subject to a sudden and secret attack.

4. Greed and Oppression of the Rulers (5:1-13). The Jews of that day, like the profiteers in the recent World war, took advantage of the poor and oppressed them so that they mortgaged their land and sold their daughters into slavery. Nehemiah boldly rebuked them for their crimes and ordered a restoration to be made, exacting an oath of them that they would fulfil their promises.

5. Scheme to Take Nehemiah's Life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every other way they sought by craft to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him.

III. The Wall Completed (6:15-7:4).

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When the enemies heard that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually completed, they were cast down, for they perceived that the work was of God.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE INEVITABLE EBB

WHEN the ebb tide comes, apparently determined to sweep you off your feet and carry you down to the waiting sea; or when the storm clouds darken the serene sky and obscure your bright, trustworthy guiding star, summon all your courage and fasten to reach the nearest friendly port.

A man naturally thinks it will go hard with him if the tide turns and sets against him.

If long accustomed to good fortune, air winds and sunny weather, a sudden burst of opposition at its first manifestation of energy appals him.

For years he has been making rapid progress, avoiding the reefs upon which many of his intimates have been wrecked.

When they sank beneath the growling waters he smiled complacently and congratulated himself on his superior skill.

His craft was seaworthy, his vision clear and his hand unerringly sure.

But now, as the ebb freths in anger, he realizes that his boasted cleverness was largely a matter of condition with which his ability had nothing to do.

He has fallen back so long on the thought that he was a superman, possessed of extraordinary prowess, the change alarms him.

The inevitable ebb fills his soul with inexpressible terror.

Though he shuts his mouth hard and says nothing to his suspecting wife, he cannot quell the sickening fear.

Danger lurks in the waves and in the wind—in the very breath of idle gossip.

The shoals are marked by fretting foam leaping high in the air, but the night is dark. His nerve is undone. His once keen perception fails him.

And yet, if he is a true man, or a man in the making, this is the one time in his life when he will show his mettle, grip the wheel with a firmer hold, bend his back and resolutely face the snarling gale panting in its effort to hurl his ship upon the rocks.

In every life there is a shipwreck somewhere buried in the sands of unforgotten years.

It tells the tale of a day that is done, of fond hopes, that were swept to sea and sucked under the waters of the inevitable ebb, from which no man can always steer clear, but against which every brave man will battle until he makes port.

Uncommon Sense

ACCURACY FIRST

FIFTY years ago a mathematical marvel mystified audiences in small towns in the United States.

He would walk up to a blackboard and ask people in the house to give him two long numbers.

Given such numbers as 3,790,402,507 and 72,875,295,830 he would place one below the other, announce that he would multiply them, and write beneath them the answer.

No one understood how he could do it. The people who beheld him gasped in amazement at his powers. And he went from town to town for several weeks exciting wonder and admiration till some skeptic in the audience took the trouble to write down the numbers and multiply them himself.

Then it was discovered that the lightning calculator never made a multiplication at all, but merely wrote an answer in the proper number of units, which of course, was invariably wrong.

A telegram to the next town and prompt action by the local authorities put an end to the calculator's career.

It is easy to work rapidly if you do not work accurately, but it is of little more use than were the labors of the faker in the story.

In this world of progress men must work both accurately and rapidly to get ahead, but they must cultivate accuracy first.

Millions are lost in industry every year through mistakes and carelessness of people who try to work faster than they can with care.

In every business accuracy is the first consideration. When, either in figuring, or in writing, or in any line of endeavor you are sure that you can be accurate it is safe to cultivate speed.

But never work so fast that you are not sure you are getting down the right answers to your problem. Better creep for a while than fall every time you attempt to run.

Facility will come with practice, but facility is worse than useless if it means blundering.

The quick men are valuable, of course, but they are never judged for their speed alone. If their work doesn't check up, they hold their positions but a little while.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE GAMES PLANNED

Will Keep Diamond Occupied When Field Club Is Away; Players' Averages Given

Arrangements have been completed with Harry Nichols, manager of the Field Club team, for a game between the champions of the Twin City Twilight League and the Field Club, which will be played at the end of the Central Burlington County League season. This game will no doubt create considerable interest among the fans, and should furnish lots of opportunity for the Royal Rooters."

Monday night, as per schedule, the Bloomer Girls of Folcroft, came to Palmyra, and a large crowd was on hand at the Field Club to see them perform. Miss Alma Stock pitched for the Baptist team, and in the three innings played shut the Bloomer Girls out. Miss Anna Calhoun, who played first base for the Baptist team, deserves honorable mention for the way she handled the initial sack. After the game with the Bloomer Girls, a team made up of practically all Twin City League players opposed the Baptists.

Plans are progressing for the double header at the Field Club on Saturday, September 9th, when the cup on display at the Quality Shop, donated by the Reach Company, and the one donated by the Field Club, will be given respectively to the Baptists and the P. O. S. of A. According to the plans, there will be two teams to oppose the league champions, and the P. O. S. of A., composed of players from other teams of the league, or one of the strong teams playing twilight ball around Philadelphia may be brought down as an added attraction.

Batting Averages

"Pat" Steelle, of the Artisans, and Joe Stack, of Post Rodgers, head the Twilight League in batting. Joe Stack, participating in but three games, hit the lofty average of .666, while Pat Steelle was the real "slugging bambino" of the league, participating in all of the seven games the Artisans played, and hit for .479. Individual batting averages of the leading hitters who took part in three or more games follows:

Political Notes

George L. Record, opposing Senator Frelinghuysen for the Republican senatorial nomination, attacks the latter for voting to uphold Newberry's right to a seat in the Senate.

Mr. Record sees nothing wrong in Gifford Pinchot's expenditure of $100,000 for the Pennsylvania governorship and has accepted the aid of Amos Pinchot who is on a speaking tour in his favor.

It is rumored that Henry Ford, whom Newberry defeated for the Michigan senatorship, is backing Record.

Edwards, for Senator, and Silzer, for Governor, are backed by the Democratic State boss, Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City.

Willian N. Runyon, who is unopposed for the Republican nomination for Governor, has resigned as Senator from Union county. His term would not have expired until January, 1924. Governor Edwards has issued a proclamation for an election, to fill the unexpired term, which will be held in connection with the general election. There seems to be little doubt that the Republicans of Union will choose Assemblyman Arthur N. Pierson as their Senatorial candidate. He is the Dean of the House and one of the ablest lesislators of the past decade.

Somebody has started the report that Sheriff Flagg is looking over the field with a view of becoming a candidate for the Board of Freeholders next year.

A fine fight is shaping up in the Democratic party over the State Committee berth for this county. James Mercer Davis is a candidate again, and William VanSciver, of Burlington, and George Lippincott, of Moorestown, are also drawn up on the starting line and the outlook is for a pretty race a little later on.

KNIGHT VS. REEVES

Big Fight for State Committeeman from Burlington County

The contest for member of the State Republican Committee has now resolved itself to two candidates, Harry L. Knight, of Medford, and William H. Reeves, of New Lisbon. Knight is treasurer of the Philadelphia office of the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation, was a member of the former Public Utility Commission, which was deposed in the trolley fare zone contest. He was for many years the political leader in Burlington County and always had the situation well in hand until a few years ago when his candidate for the office of County Clerk, from which Knight was retiring, was defeated by William H. Reeves, the present County Clerk and chairman of the Republican County Committee, who is now opposing Mr. Knight for the position of State Committeeman.

Soon after Knight announced his candidacy a few weeks ago a number of other aspirants made known their intention of contesting for the position. They were Charles H. Folwell and Robert Peacock, both of Mount Holly, and Russell Aikin, of Florence.

Realizing that in a four cornered fight, Knight would be a sure winner, his opponents decided to try to agree on one man and have the others withdraw. William H. Reeves, whose past record has inspired confidence in the minds of the rank and file of the Republican voters in the county, was selected.

During his period of leadership, Knight made many friends in the County and can be expected to make a strong run. His friends are freely predicting that the election is as good as his already. Mr. Reeves, on the other hand, represents the forces in the County which rebelled against Knight's leadership and succeeded in finally dethroning him last year when Mr. Reeves was elected chairman of the County Committee and will undoubtedly receive a large vote from those who did not always approve of Knight's methods. A strong effort is being made in all parts of the County on the part of the progressives to retain the advantage they gained last fall.

WHILE the song of the birds and the smell of the flowers appeal to two entirely distinct and different senses, they have, in reality, the same objective—the attraction of a mate. The male bird accomplishes this by charming the female with his voice; the flower by attracting bees with its scent.

The bee, in going from flower to flower in search of honey, scrapes his legs against the inside of the different blossoms and collects a considerable amount of the pollen—or fertilizing agent—which is necessary for the production of seeds in other plants. This pollen he carries with him, unconsciously, and deposits it upon the flowers which he subsequently visits. If it were not for the perfume of the flowers the bee would not be so much attracted nor would he know that honey is to be had for the taking. And, if it were not for the bee and kindred insects, the flower would have to depend upon the vagaries of the wind for the pollen necessary to its proper growth and the development of seed with which to reproduce itself.

One of the most remarkable facts about the distribution of pollen by the bee is that the pollen-powder of one kind of plant will not fertilize the flowers of another, thus relieving the bee of any responsibility of acting as an unconscious Luther Burbank and mixing up the scheme of nature by crossing a rose and a hyacinth or a honeysuckle vine with a magnolia tree.

THE DAISIES

MEN call them weeds, those daisies fair
That greet my vision everywhere.
But weeds they'll never be to me,

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

EVELINA

THE feminine names beginning with "Eve" are legion, yet each, curious is a separate name and possesses a different meaning. Eva, for instance, signifies life, while Evelyn means helmet, and Evelina or Eveline is translated "pleasant."

Eveline made its appearance among the Normans before the marriage of the earl of Pembroke, Aveline, said to be its equivalent, was the name of the sister of Gunnar, the great-grandmother of William the Conqueror. The Lady of the Lake in Tennyson's "Idylls of the Brothers" was called Eveline.

Aveline seems to have been more popular than its equivalent in early times, since old chronicles record more instances of the former name than the latter. The wife of the last earl of Lancaster was called Aveline de Lourcampo. Her daughter, Eveline, was heiress to the great county of Lancaster.

Before Miss Burney's popular novel presenting Evelina—a name which she herself invented as an abbreviation of Aveline—was published, Eveline had almost disappeared in England, but there was an immediate revival of the name. The fashion of adding a final "a" was followed, of course, and Evelina was established in popularity for many years. Unfortunately for Evelina, the tendency was to confuse her with Evelyn, especially when the cross for names containing a "Y" made its appearance.

Evelina's talismanic gem is the agate. It promises her courage, guards her from danger and cures insomnia. It is said. Thursday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. The wild rose is her flower.

THESE ARE GOOD

STEAMED Brown Betty—Mix two cupfuls of brown bread crumbs with two cupfuls of chopped apple, add two-thirds of a cupful of finely chopped suet, one-half cupful of brown sugar, one cupful of seeded raisins mixed with two tablespoonfuls of flour and one-half teaspoonful of salt; add one cupful of milk to which one beaten egg has been added and beat thoroughly. Steam in buttered molds two hours. Serve with lemon or vanilla sauce.

Sponge Cake.

Take four eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the same of flour, one-half cupful of cold water and flavoring to taste. Beat the yolks until thick, add cold water and beat again until thick; sift the sugar several times, add it to the yolks, then the flour alternately with the whites, the flour having been sifted four times, three times after it is measured. Bake very slowly at first. Use a tube pan. The cake should, when properly made and baked, be the size of an eleven-egg angel food.

Nut Loaf.

Take one cupful of chopped nuts, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one-half cupful of hot water, one-half cupful of melted butter, one egg well beaten, one teaspoonful of mushroom catsup, one teaspoonful of onion juice and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, a few dashes of pepper. Mix the ingredients in a loaf and bake in a moderate oven one-half hour. Baste occasionally with butter. Serve hot with brown sauce.

Eggs in Peppers.

Use large green peppers of regular shape, wash them and cut with a sharp knife cut in halves. Remove the white membrane and seeds and place in boiling water to cook ten minutes. Remove and invert to drain. Sprinkle each pepper with a layer of buttered crumbs and minced ham moistened with cream. Break an egg in each, season lightly and place in the oven to bake until the egg is set. Serve on rounds of bread lightly browned in butter.

Spanish Potatoes.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender, drain and shake over the heat until dry. To a pint of potatoes dish place two to three tablespoonfuls of butter and two tablespoonfuls of minced onion; this amount will be sufficient for six potatoes. Chop and stir the hot potatoes, covering with the butter and onion, then sprinkle thickly with paprika and serve very hot. This is a good dish to serve with cold meats.

Madagascar Gold.

The island of Madagascar, according to reports received in Washington, promises to assume some importance as a producer of gold. On the eastern slope of the island are some auriferous districts said to be very rich. Nuggets and dust are found in the streams' beds, but the principal lode has not, it appears, yet been discovered. Mining engineers have not helpsted such discoveries, but the methods of recovering the gold have been very crude, and only native workmen have proved capable of withstanding the climate.

The death occurred on Wednesday afternoon of Winifred Constance, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Green. The funeral services were held from the residence of Mrs. Green's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Day, 200 Cinnaminson avenue, Palmyra, on Thursday afternoon, at three o'clock, Rev. D. A. Parce officiating. Interment was made in Morgan cemetery. Undertaker F. A. Snover in charge.

Suspicious Character Arrested

About half-past three Thursday afternoon, Officer Quigley picked up a suspicious looking character on Broad street, who had been wandering about town most of the day. When questioned he said he had been waiting a "hop" to Bordentown. When searched the man was found to be carrying a pair of pliers, a screw driver and several candles, and not being satisfied with the man's replies Officer Quigley held him for a hearing before Recorder Cook in the evening. He gave his name as Charles Johnson and said he lived in Camden.

ARTISANS' MEETING

Four New Members Installed at Meeting Held Last Tuesday Evening

The regular meeting of Palmyra Assembly No. 65, A. O. M. P., was held in Society Hall last Tuesday evening, with an attendance of approximately 100 members.

Four new members were added to the Assembly, bringing the total membership up to 322, those initiated at this meeting being Messrs. Ralph S. Rivers, Harold L. Eastman, Harry A. McKinney, and Loday W. Orcutt. After the initiation these new members were presented with Artisan buttons by Brother McCracken, of Philadelphia, who so ably conducted the Artisans' beach frolic at Wildwood on Saturday, August 19th, when approximately 6,000 Artisans and their families visited this popular beach resort.

Plans are now being formulated for the reopening of Palmyra Assembly's bowling league. It is thought the season will begin on Monday, September 18th, at Fehrle's Riverside Alleys, and the prospects look very bright for an eight-team league. Those members of Palmyra Assembly (and other Assemblies living in this) vicinity) who did not bowl on these teams last year, but who are desirous of participating this season, should send their names to the recorder as soon as possible.

On Monday evening, September 11, a delegation of members of Palmyra Assembly will visit Camden Assembly. It is expected that sufficient automobiles will be available to take care of the entire party and all members will receive notice of the definite and final arrangements.

The October meeting of Palmyra Assembly is expected to eclipse all records in the history of the Assembly, both as to attendance and new members initiated, as the entire staff of Most Excellent officers, from Philadelphia, will be in attendance.

The Artisans' Bal Masque will be held at the Academy of Music on Monday evening, October 30th.

"Doc" Craig's quoit team has played five league matches, two of which have been chalked up in the won column, and three have been lost.

The entertainment at the meeting last Tuesday evening consisted of three high-class vaudeville acts, one of which was an exceptionally well known number from the Keith's Circuit, and the truest-to-life interpretation by one of the artists of the characteristics of a cow was especially pleasing to the assemblage.

Thomas H. Rogers

After suffering two strokes within a week, Thomas H. Rogers, passed away at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. J. Tryon, at Burlington, on Tuesday night. The funeral services will be held on Friday afternoon from his late residence in Burlington at two o'clock and interment will be made in Mansfield Cemetery, Columbus, N. J. The deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Walton Taylor, of Palmyra, and Mrs. J. J. Tryon, of Burlington. Mr. Rogers had made his home in Palmyra with his daughter for the past two years and had only been in Burlington for about two weeks.

ROMANCE OF FANEUIL HALL

"Cradle of American Liberty" Was Built by Son of French Huguenot Refugee.

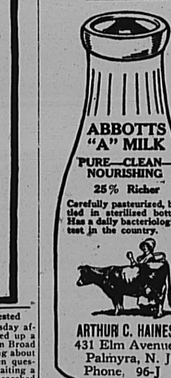

An interesting romance is woven around old Faneuil hall in Boston, often referred to as "the cradle of American liberty." Andrew Faneuil, a French Huguenot, was driven from home by the revocation of the edict of Nantes. He fled to Holland, and thence to America, and was admitted by the governor and council of Massachusetts Bay colony Feb. 1, 1691. He was an able business man, and became the richest man in the colony through trade in a general store. His fortune passed to his son, Peter, and Peter proved both a practical and public-spirited man. He offered to erect a public market building at his own expense if the town would provide proper regulation. The farmers, accustomed to peddle from house to house, opposed this plan, but it passed by a majority of the 727 votes cast.

Peter Faneuil did more than he had promised, for in addition to the market he built a second story with a hall for town meetings and other public functions. On August 27, 1765, the first mass meeting or protest against the stamp act took place in the hall. The meeting to protest against the tea tax were held in the hall in 1773, and the result was the Boston Tea Party of December 16. When Lafayette visited the building in 1824, he said: "May Faneuil Hall stand forever, a monument to teach the world the importance to oppression is a duty, and will under true republican institutions become a blessing."

Corn California Style.

Take two cupfuls of corn, one cupful of milk, one cupful of bread crumbs, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of green pepper, three slices of bacon, two tablespoonfuls of fat and three of flour. Cut the bacon in half-inch pieces, cook until beginning to color. Add flour to the bacon, stir in milk and cook until thick, seasoning with salt and pepper, mix corn (fresh may be used), crumbs, pepper and sauce. Put in a baking dish, sprinkle bacon over the top and bake in a moderate oven until the bacon is crisp and brown.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE
Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.
"The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.
But brewing at home is musy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.
A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.
Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK HOT TEA!
Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold.
Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB RHEUMATISM FROM STIFF ACHING JOINTS
Rub Soreness from joints and muscles with a small trial bottle of old St. Jacobs Oil
Stop "closing" Rheumatism.
It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia.
Limber up! Get a 35 cent bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itchy eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.
It seldom fails to relieve torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS
Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.
If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or side, headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three time during the night.
To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's refuse, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

RED PEPPER FOR COLDS IN CHEST
Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.
"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.
Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers, and when heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints relief comes at once.
The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering from a cold, rheumatism, backache, stiff neck or sore muscles, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.

CREAM CLEARS A STUFFED-UP HEAD
Instantly Opens Every Air Passage—Clears Throat
If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed because of nasty catarrh or a cold, apply a little pure, antiseptic cream into your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage, soothing and healing swollen, inflamed membranes and you get instant relief.
Try this. Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Your clogged nostrils open right up; your head is clear; no more hawking or snuffling. Count fifty. All the stuffiness, dryness, struggling for breath is gone. You feel fine.

THRILLS AND NOVEL EVENTS FEATURE 1922 TRENTON FAIR

Congress of World, With Its Wild West Sensations; Conway's Band, Auto Polo, Automobile Races, Horse Races and Colossal Diaplays Assembled for Six-Day Exposition to Open Sept. 25.

TRENTON, N. J.—From the point of thrills and novel features, the Great Trenton Fair for 1922, beginning Monday, Sept. 25 and ending Saturday, Sept. 30, is certain to shatter all past records, according to Colonel Marion R. Margerum, secretary, who has announced the completion of all preparations for the mammoth event.

This year's Fair will be a contrast from previous Trenton exhibitions since it will be a six-day affair instead of five, as in the past, and it will present for the first time a program of new building construction which represents an outlay of more than a half million dollars expended during the last year. The new structures, embracing a gigantic building for the annual Automotive Show and a home for the display of art and domestic science work, are the last word in modern structural features and help to make the Trenton Fair the greatest venture of its kind in the East.

CONGRESS OF WORLD

Perhaps the most decided novelty will be "The Congress of the World," in which the intrepid horseman, Tommy Kirnan, is the resplendent star. Here is a feature that embodies six distinctly separate acts in one—in fact, a complete show by itself performed by a company of 20 people and 40 livestock. It is a typical Western Rodeo, something thousands have read about, but have never seen. The performance will be given on the race track in front of the grandstand and will be a free daily attraction.

Kirnan gives a man's sized thrill in his act of bulldogging Mexican steers while astride a bucking "Bronco Buster." His careless disregard for personal safety makes the heart flutter more than once during the course of this sensational exhibition. Kirnan's wife and partner, the famous Iva Kirnan, will be seen as a spectacular and daring rider. One of her favorite stunts is to ride with her head hanging within six inches of the ground while her horse is racing along at top speed; also standing on her horse, running wild, with both hands above her head and free.

TOMMY KIRNAN

Other stars of the rodeo and the range, Ruth and Bryan Roach, Slim Caskey, Chet Myers, Bobby Calem, etc., participate in a program of riding, bulldogging, standing races, lariat throwing, daring tricks and reckless stunts.

PAT CONWAY'S BAND

"There will be music in the air all during Fair Week. Pat Conway and his famous band of 60 pieces is to be an added attraction. Melody is always a gratifying feature of an outdoor exhibition, and since Pat Conway's organization ranks with the foremost bands of the world, there will be no lack of this form of diversion.

The Automotive Show is going to prove a revelation from the standpoint of quantity as well as quality. Staged in a building which measures 200x200 feet, a mammoth structure equaling the size of the average state armory, the show will present scores of pleasure and commercial vehicles, amid the most picturesque decorations. W. A. Sellon, who directed the now famous Automobile Show at the Brooklyn armory last year, has been engaged as show manager, assuring an epochal exhibition.

Thrilling Auto Polo Contests, to be played daily in front of the stand, will be another attraction not to be overlooked. The speed program, comprised of trotting, pacing and running horse races, will offer the fastest horses ever seen on the Trenton Fair track, increased purses attracting the speedier steels from all sections of the country. The Automobile Races are also promised as outdoing all past exhibitions of this kind, Horse racing will be a feature the first four days of the Fair, and Automobile racing the closing two days, Friday and Saturday. Sig Haugdahl, holder of the world's record on a dirt track, will be an extra added attraction in the motor classic.

EDUCATIONAL ATTRACTIONS

There will be a free vaudeville bill of unsurpassed excellence. The bulk of the program will be made up of circus acts, including aerialists, comedians, clowns, musicians, acrobats, equilibrists, tumblers, wire-walkers and, above all, Robinson's Elephants, those almost human animals whose ability to doing everything except talk is the marvel of the age, will comprise the free outdoor show.

The educational features of the Fair have been advanced to a point which will not fail of commendation. An exceptional exhibit will be that of the New Jersey Boys' and Girls' Club Work program, participated in by hundreds of young folks from all parts of the state. This will be staged in the New Jersey State exhibition building.

The Poultry Show, presented in an enlarged building; live-stock exhibit, with its unprecedented display of Jerseys, Holsteins, Herefords, Durocs, Berkshires, etc., and the display in the agricultural, horticultural, domestic science and home and dairy products and the manufacturers' and merchants' departments will be offered to greater advantage than ever.

It is assured that the midway will be busier, brighter and more amusing than ever. Attractions which cannot be transported in less than 50 railroad cars will be erected in charge of the T. A. Wolfe Superior Shows, with all sorts of freaks, thrills and laughmaking devices. There will be a daily balloon ascension with a half dozen parachute drops. Nothing has been left undone to make for the greatest Fair in all the 33 years' history of the exposition.

Excursion rates will be announced by the Pennsylvania Railroad and Philadelphia and Reading Railway, running from all points of the East to the Fair Grounds, which is the most accessible grounds of any Fair in America.

CARRYING PACKAGES
"IT IS one of the wholesome signs of the age," says a member of the Department of Agriculture, "that people are breaking away from the idea that a perfect body or gentleman never carried a package."
It is really hard to remember that such an opinion ever was held, and you may be sure if you know anyone who still clings to the notion that it is beneath his dignity to carry a bundle of any sort that the sooner it is quite behind the times and has not kept pace with the times.
The only time when it is bad form to carry packages or bundles is when by doing so you might cause others annoyance or inconvenience. A woman should bear in mind that if she is going to be accompanied by a man, good breeding will demand that he carry any bundles or packages she may have. Sometimes a married woman on going out with her husband carries an unnecessary number of bundles feeling that she may carry these herself if she chooses. To insist on doing this will put her husband in a bad light, for he will appear to have neglected to offer to carry them.
Again when you are going to be conveyed to your destination in a friend's automobile you should not burden yourself with a lot of unwelldy packages unless you have been assured beforehand that your friend wishes to do so. If you have to travel in a crowded car or train it is inconsiderate to carry bulky luggage that will add to the discomfort of the other travelers.

GIRL SWIMMERS IN CLOSE RACE
Lillian Stoddart Wins Riverton Event Against Twelve Other Star Mermaids
Once more were the eyes of the swimming world on Riverton last Saturday afternoon when the women's three-mile race was run off. The field this time was not as large as usual, neither did as many famed stars compete as has been the custom in these races, but it is doubtful if ever a better or more thrilling girls' race was ever run, not only in our own Delaware but in the entire country. Only thirteen girls dove from the Sloop "Enterprise" of the Keystone fleet, anchored off Bridesburg from Pier, when Referee Stevens fired the starting gun, but what was missing in numbers was made up by the desperateness of the race.
The thirteen girls competing hailed from New York, Philadelphia, and Atlantic City. Soon as the girls reached the surface after their dive overboard, little Catherine Brown, daughter of Al Brown, the world's professional long distance champion agitated into the lead and for nearly a mile the little marvel from the New York Women's Swimming Association, held the lead. Catherine is only 12 years old and this is the third of our marvelous she has swam in and each time she has made good. She was the youngest child to qualify for the American Olympic team, and while she made the team the officials ruled she was too young to go abroad. Catherine found the pace too hot and after a mile sprint she was overhauled and passed by Lillian Stoddart of the same Club. Lillian is considered by many to be the best distance swimmer New York has, even better than her famed Club sisters, Helen Wainwright, Eileen Riggin and Gertrude Ederle. Only two weeks ago she won the two and a half mile marathon at New Brunswick, defeating a most classy field, and by her great victory over Catherine in the Delaware, is doubtful if any girl in America can dispute her claim to supreme honors in the distance field.
When Miss Stoddart passed Catherine and went into the lead she was never headed and swam across the finish line the winner in the fastest time ever made over the distance, which shows how hard she was pushed as the times were not at all good. By winning in the truly remarkable time of almost thirty-nine minutes flat, she clipped over four minutes from the previous record made by Eleanor Uhl, the Philadelphia girl, in 1920. Eleanor was in this race and she strove to hold her championship and her record, but Saturday was not her day to win. Miss Uhl, an Olympic champion, and the best performer in the Delaware marathons, swam a game and magnificent race. Miss Uhl swam 66th in the 1918 marathon, was second in the 1919 one, losing by an eye-lash to Ethelda Bleibtrey, and won the 1920, breaking the record. Naturally Philadelphia pinned her hopes on the Ladenburg girl. Miss Uhl swam in the third position for the first mile and then, as Miss Stoddart went into the lead, she, too, swam past the fast tiring little New Yorker, Catherine Brown, who had been setting the pace. Miss Uhl, urged on by the yells of the crowd, the pleadings of her brother, Raymond, who was piloting her, and the entreaties of her Club mates started a desperate sprint and at the two-mile mark she had all but overhauled the flying New Yorker. Neck and neck they swam and the crowd settled back to see the Philadelphian repeat her 1920 victory. But Eleanor was sadly lacking in form and Miss Stoddart ideally guided by Walter Armstrong, to whom the owes much of the credit for her remarkable swim, started to slowly pull away and every yard she bore increasing her lead. Amid a din of applause Miss Stoddart crossed the line a full hundred yards in the lead. Miss Uhl managed to retain second position, but collapsed as she swam by the judge's boat, and was kept from sinking by her pilot holding her up and dragging her half unconscious into the boat.
Right after her and gaining on every stroke came another Philadelphia girl—Margaret Weber. Miss Ravior has all the earmarks of a coming distance star, and a great swimming future for this little girl is practically assured.
The next two places went to New York aggs. Ethel Baker and Helen Cathcart Smith, Jr., who took the reins with Mr. Burleson and ran it so ideally. Mr. Burleson, who attended to the entries and the swim itself, again thanks the boys who rowed for him and the men who loaned their power craft and dories. The Riverton fleet consisted of the power craft of former Commodore Hollingshead, who came home expressly to be host and to help, Vice Commodore H. McIlvain Biddle, J. H. Moll, Maurice G. Belknap and George W. Smith, Jr. The Keystone Yacht Club matched the Riverton Yacht Club by sending over 8 dozen of five power boats under Commodore Jordan. The Keystone fleet carried reporters and a music mare, and the girls used the "Enterprise" to dive from.
On every swimming occasion the Keystone has given as much assistance to us in handling the swims as has our own club. They have not only put their fleet at our service but supplied us with duties and help of every description.
Directly after the marathon race, the sprint races and diving was run off. Miss Hilda James, champion of England and Europe, was the main attraction, but Miss James who was entered in the National 220 yards day and the National 440 a few days later was afraid to swim in the long race. She as an enthusiastic spectator from Commodore Hollingshead's launch and later swam in the 200 and 100 yards back stroke. She simply toyed with the field in the 200 yard race winning by a huge margin, and in the 100 yard back stroke she was second, first honors going to Philadelphia's sprint marvel, Frances Clarke, of the Philadelphia Turners. Miss James showed she has a wonderful stroke and only the pick of American mermaids can make her bow in homage.
The 100-yard race was the event of the day. Miss Frances Clark, of Philadelphia, and Miss Ethel Baker swimming almost a dead heat. The judges finally ruled the New Yorker had lost by an eye-lash and the Philadelphia girl carried away two firsts, the 100-yard free-style and the 100-yard back stroke in which she defeated Miss James.
Miss Hilda James was down for an exhibition of 20 minutes in the water but was forced to abandon it as she claimed she could not do it in strong running water. All her exhibitions have been in closed pools either inside or outside.
But from the way Miss James toyed with the speedy New York and Philadelphia mermaids in the 200-yard race it plainly showed Riverton why she is the English and European champion. Outside of Ethel Bleibtrey and Helen Wainwright it is doubtful if any other girl swimmer in America can defeat her.
The fancy diving contest was a thing of beauty and grace and after a wonderful exhibition honors at last went to Miss Mary Hillegas, of Philadelphia.
This brings to a close another season of remarkable swimming feats staged by the Riverton Yacht Club. In the five years the Club has been interested in swimming every swimmer of any renown has been seen in competition here. Not only all the American champions have been in action here but the best from England, Germany, Brazil, Canada, the Hawaiian Islands, etc.
For five years the ten-mile national championship has been held here and in that and the other events stared has been the very cream of the swimming world.
Among a few of the world's best that have swum here are Norman Ross, Duke Kahanamoku, Harold Kruezer, Eugene Baldan, Tom Blake, Max Ritter, champion of Germany; Kerry, champion of Canada, etc.

CHAPTER XV

Dawned 1781.

The war was coming into Virginia at last. Virginia falling would thrust a great wedge through the center of the confederacy, feed the British armies and end the fight. Cornwallis was to drive the wedge, and never had the opening seemed easier. Virginia was drained of her fighting men, and south of the mountains was protected only by a militia for the most part, of old men and boys. North and south ran despair. The soldiers had no pay, little food, and only old wornout coats fluttered lines overalls, and one blanket between three men, to protect them from drifting snow and icy wind. Even the great Washington was near despair, and in foreign help his sole hope lay. Already the traitor, Arnold, had taken Richmond, burned warehouses, and retreated but little harassed, to Portsmouth.

Cornwallis was coming on. Tarleton's white rangers were bedevilling the land, and it was at this time that Erskine Dale once more rode Firefly to the river James.

The boy had been two years in the wilds. When he left the Shawnee camp winter was setting in, that terrible winter of '79—of deep snow and hunger and cold. When he reached Kaskaskia, Captain Clark had gone to Kentucky, and Erskine found bad news. Hamilton and Hay had taken Vincennes. There Captain Helm's Creoles, as soon as they saw the red-coats, slipped away from him to surrender their arms to the British, and thus deserted by all, he and the two or three Americans with him had to give up the fort. The French resource allegiance to Britain. Hamilton confiscated their liquor and broke up their billiard tables. He let his Indians scatter to their villages, and with his regulars, volunteers, white Indian leaders and red auxiliaries went into winter quarters. One band of Shawnees he sent to Ohio to scout and take scalps in the settlements. In the spring he would sweep Kentucky and destroy all the settlements west of the Alleghanies. So Erskine and Dave went for Clark; and that trip neither ever forgot. Storms had followed each other since late November and the snow lay deep. Cattle and horses perished, deer and elk were found dead in the woods, and buffalo came at nightfall to old Jerome Sanders' fort for food and companionship with his starving herd. There was no salt or vegetable food; nothing but the flesh of lean wild game. Yet, while the frontiersmen remained crowded in the stockades and the men hunted and the women made clothes of tanned deer hides, buffalo-wool cloth, and nettle-bark linen, and both followed "mogadha" out of the knot of a tree, Clark made his amazing march to Vincennes, recaptured it by the end of February, and sent Hamilton to Williamsburg a prisoner. Erskine pleaded to be allowed to take him there, but Clark would not let him go. Permanent garrisons were placed at Vincennes and Cahokia, and at Kaskaskia. Erskine stayed to help make peace with the Indians, punish marauders and hunting bands, so that by the end of the year Clark might sail on the falls of the Ohio as a shield for the West and a sure guarantee that the whites would never be forced to abandon wild Kentucky.

The two years in the wilderness had left their mark on Erskine. He was tall, lean, swarthy, gaunt, and yet he was not all woodsman, for his born inheritance as gentleman had been more than emphasized by his association with Clark and certain Creole officers in the Northwest, who had improved his French and gratified one pet wish of his life since his last visit to the James—they had taught him to fence. His mother he had not seen again, but he had learned that she was alive and not yet blind. Of Barty Morn he had heard nothing at all. Once a traveler had brought word of Dane Grey. Grey was in Philadelphia and prominent in the gay doings of that city. He had taken part in a brilliant pageant called the "Mischianza," which was staged by Andre, and was reported a close friend of that ill-fated young gentleman.

After the fight at Piqua, with Clark, Erskine put forth for old Jerome Sanders' fort. He found the hard days of want over. There was not only corn in plenty but wheat, potatoes, pumpkins, turnips, melons. Game was plentiful, and cattle, horses and hogs had multiplied on cane and buffalo clover. Indeed, it was a conservative, peaceful fall, and though Clark traveled with him, Erskine stubbornly set his face for Virginia.

At Williamsburg Erskine learned many things. Colonel Dale, now a general, was still with Washington and Harry was with him. Hugh was with the Virginia militia and Dave with Lafayette.

Tarleton's legion of rangers in their white uniforms were scourging Virginia as they had scourged the Carolinas. Through the James River country they had gone with fire and sword, burning houses, carrying off horses, destroying crops, burning grain in the mills, laying plantations in waste. Barbara's mother was dead. Her neighbors had moved to safety, but Barbara, he heard, still lived with old Mammy and Ephraim at Red Oaks, unless that, too, had been recently put to the torch. Where, then, would he find her?

Down the river Erskine rode with a sad heart. At the place where he had fought with Grey to pulled Firefly to a sudden halt. There was the boundary of Red Oaks and there started a desolation that ran as far as his eye could reach. Red oaks had not been spared, and he put Firefly to a fast gallop, with eyes straining far ahead and his heart beating with agonized foreboding and new rage. Soon over a distant clump of trees he could see the chimneys of Barbara's home—his home, he thought helplessly—and perhaps those chimneys were all that was left. And then he saw the roof and the upper windows and the cap of the big colums unharmed, untouched, and he pulled Firefly into a gallop, with overwhelming relief, and wondered at the miracle. Again he started and again pulled in when he came within three horses hitched near the stiles. Turning quickly from the road he bid Firefly in the underbrush, and quietly he slipped along the path to the river, and, pushing aside through the rose bushes, lay down where unseen he could peer through the closely matted hedge. He had not long to wait, and the white uniform leaned from the great hall door and another and another—and after them Barbara—smiling. The boy's blood ran hot—smiling at her enemies. As officers bowed, Barbara courtesied, and they wheeled on their heels and descended the steps. The third and last halted a moment, bowed over her hand and kissed it. The watcher's blood turned then to liquid fire. Great God, if what price was that noble old house left standing? Grimly, swiftly Erskine turned, sliding through the rose bushes like a snake to the edge of the road along which they must pass. He would kill them, for all life was worth nothing now. He heard them laughing, talking at the stiles. He heard them mount and Barbara's name, and two seemed to be bantering the third, whose answering laugh seemed strangely out and triumphant. They were coming now. The boy had his pistols out, primed and cocked. He was rising on one knee, ready to turn to his feet and out into the road when he fell back into a startled, paralyzed, inactive heap. Glimpsed through an opening in the bushes, the leading trooper in the uniform of Tarleton's legion—and no other than Dane Grey, and Erskine's brain had worked quicker than his heart. This was a mystery that must be solved before his pistols spoke. He rose crouching as the troopers rode away. If Barbara's men were around he would better leave Firefly where he was in the woods for a while. A startled gasp behind him made him wheel, pistol once more in hand, to find a negro, mouth wide open and staring at him from the road.

"Marse Erskine!" he gasped. It was Ephraim, the boy who had led Barbara's white ponies out long, long ago, now a tall, muscular lad with an ebony face and dazzling teeth. "What you doin' here, suh? Whar's ol' hoss? Gawd, I'se sutin'y glad to see yuh," Erskine pointed to an oak. "Right by that tree. Put him in the stable and feed him."

The negro shook his head.

"I'll take de hoss an' feed down to him. Too many redcoats meanin' round heah. You bettah go in de back way—for I reckon see yuh."

"Wasn't one of those soldiers who just rode away Mr. Dane Grey?"

The negro hesitated.

"Yassuh."

"What's he doing in a British uniform?"

The boy shifted his great shoulders uneasily and looked aside.

"I don' know, suh—I don't know nuttin'."

Erskine knew he was lying, but respected his loyalty.

"Go tell Miss Barbara I'm here and then feed my horse."

"Yassuh."

Ephraim went swiftly and Erskine followed along the ledge and through the rose bushes to the kitchen door.

Barbara, standing in the hall doorway, heard his step.

"Erskine!" she cried softly, and she came to meet him, with both hands outstretched, and raised her lovely face to be kissed. "What are you doing here?"

"I am on my way to join General Lafayette."

"But you will be captured. It is dangerous. The country is full of British soldiers."

"I know," Erskine said dryly.

"When did you get here?"

"Twenty minutes ago. I would not have been welcome just then, I waited in the brake. I saw you had company."

"Did you see them?" she faltered.

"I even recognized one of them." Barbara sank into a chair, her elbow on one arm, her chin in her hand, her face turned, her eyes looking outdoors. She said nothing, but the toe of her slipper began to tap the floor gently. There was no further use for indirection or concealment.

"Barbara," Erskine said with some sternness, and his tone quickened the tapping of the slipper and made her little mouth tighten, "what does all this mean?"

"Did you see," she answered, without looking at him, "that the crops were all destroyed and, the cattle and horses were all gone?"

"Why did they spare the house?" The girl's bosom rose with one quick, silent intake of breath, and for a moment she held it.

"Dane Grey saved our home."

"How?"

"He had known Colonel Tarleton in London and had done something to him over there."

"How did he get in communication with Colonel Tarleton when he was an officer in the American army?"

The girl would not answer.

"Was he taken prisoner?" Still she was silent, for the sarcasm in Erskine's voice was angering her.

"He fought once under Benedict Arnold—Perhaps He is Fighting With Him Now."

Arnold—perhaps he is fighting with him now."

"No!" she cried hotly.

"Then he must be a—"

She did not allow him to utter the word.

"Why Mr. Grey is in British uniform is his secret—not mine."

"And why he is here is—yours."

"Exactly!" she flamed. "For me a soldier. Learn what you want to know from him. You are my cousin, but you are going beyond the rights of blood. I won't stand it—I won't stand it—from anybody."

"I don't understand you, Barbara—I don't know you. That last time it was Grey, you—and now—"

She paused and, in spite of herself, her eyes flashed toward the door. Erskine saw it, drew himself erect, bowed and strode straight out. Now did the irony of the situation so much as cross his mind—that he should be turned from his own home by the woman he loved and to whom he had given that home. Nor did he look back—else he might have seen her sink, sobbing, to the floor.

When he turned the corner of the house Barbara's old mammy and Ephraim were waiting for him at the kitchen door.

"Ephraim," he said as he swung upon Firefly, "you and mammy keep a close watch, and if I'm needed here, come for me yourself and come fast."

"Yassuh. Marse Grey is sutin'y up to some devilmint no which side he fightin' for. I got a gal over on the edge o' de Grey plantation an' she tell me dat Marse Dane Grey don't want dat white uniform all de time."

"What's that—what's that?" asked Erskine.

"No, suh. She say she got an udder uniform, sumf in pink, an' he change it at her uncle Sam's cabin an' she's reed him go dar in white an' come out in our uniform, an' alway at night. Marse Erskine—a'ys at night."

The negro cocked his ear suddenly.

"Take to de woods quick, Marse Erskine. Horses comin' down de road."

But the sound of coming hoofbeats had reached the woodsman's ears some seconds before the black had heard them, and already Erskine had wheeled away. And Ephraim and Firefly sank along the edge of a blackened meadow behind the hedge of low trees.

"Gawd!" said the black boy, and he stood watching the road. A band of white-coated troopers was coming in a cloud of dust, and at the head of them rode Dane Grey.

"Has Capt. Erskine Dale been here?" he demanded.

Ephraim had his own reason for being on the good side of the questioner, and did not even hesitate.

"Yassuh—he jes' left! Dar he goes now!" With a curse Grey wheeled his troopers. At that moment Firefly, with something like the waving flight of a bluebird, was leaping the meadow fence into the woods. The black boy looked after the troopers' dust.

"Gawd!" he said again, with a grin that showed every magnificent tooth in his head. "Jest as well try to ketch a streak o' lightning." And quite undisturbed he turned to tell the news to old mammy.

CHAPTER XVI

Up the James rode Erskine, hiding in the woods by day and slipping cautiously along the sandy road by night, circling about the plantations empty or dashing at full speed past some careless sentinel. Often he was fired at, often chased, but with a clear road in front of him he had no fear of capture. On the third morning he came upon a ragged sentinel—an American. Ten minutes later he got his first glimpse of Lafayette, and then he was hailed joyfully by none other than Dave Yandell, Capt. Dave Yandell, shorn of his woodsman's dress and pauoplied in the trappings of war.

Cornwallis was coming on. The boy, he wrote, cannot escape me. But the boy—Lafayette—did, and in that pursued and forced the Englishman into a cul-de-sac. "I have given his lordship all degrees of a retreat," said Lafayette. And so—Yorktown.

Late in August came the message that put Washington's great "soul in arms." Rochambeau had landed six thousand soldiers in Connecticut, and now Count de Grasse and a French fleet had sailed for the Chesapeake. General Washington at once resorted to camouflage. He laid out camps ostentatiously opposite New York and in plain sight of the enemy. He made a feigned attack on their posts. Rochambeau moved south and reached the Delaware before the British grasped the Yankee trick. Then it was too late. The windows of Philadelphia were filled with ladies waving handkerchiefs and crying heroines when the Continentals, their clothes thick with dust but hats plumed with sprigs of green, marched through and their long line of baths and rumbling cannon. Behind followed the French in "gay white uniforms faced with green," and martial music throbbed the air. Down the Chesapeake they went in transports and were concentrated at Williamsburg before the close of September. Cornwallis had erected works against the bay, for he knew nothing of Washington and Count de Grasse, nor Mad Anthony and General Nelson, who were south of the James to prevent escape into North Carolina.

"To your goodness," the boy wrote to Barbara, "I am owing the most beautiful prospect I may ever behold."

Then came De Grasse, who drove off the British fleet, and the mouth of the net was closed.

Cornwallis heard the cannon and sent Clinton to appeal for help. But the answer was Washington himself at the head of his army. And then the game was up.

"'Tis our first campaign!" cried the French gayly, and the Continentals fully answered:

"'Tis our last!"

At Williamsburg the allies gathered and with Washington's arrival came news that Colonel Dale, now a general, and young Capt. Harry Dale, who had brought news from Philadelphia that was of great interest to Erskine Dale, in that town Dane Grey had been a close intimate of Arnold, and that intimacy had been the cause of much speculation since. He had told Dave of Barbara and Harry Morn, and Dave had told him gravely that he must go get them after the campaign was over and bring them to the fort in Kentucky. If Barty Morn still refused to come, then he must bring Barbara, and he reckoned gravely that no mouth would open in a word that could offend her. Erskine also knew the temper of Red Oaks and Dane Grey, but Dave must tell nothing to the Daleses yet, if ever.

They marched next morning at day break. At sunset of the second day Dave bivouacked within two miles of Yorktown and the siege began. The allied line was a crescent with each end resting on the water—Lafayette, commanding the Americans on the right, the French on the left under Rochambeau. De Grasse, with his fleet, was in the bay to cut off an assault by water. Washington himself put the match to the first gun and the mutual cannonade of three or four days began. The scene was sublime and stupendous."

"What's that—what's that?" asked Erskine.

Two British men-of-war lying in the river were struck with hot shot and set on fire, and the result was full of terrible grandeur. The guns caught and the flames ran to the upper grindmasts, resembling immense torches. One fled like a mountain of fire toward the bay and was burned to the water's edge.

"Lord Cornwallis was sick. General O'Hara bore my lord's sword. As he approached, Washington rose in his stirrup and pointed to General Lincoln, who had been received with indignity at Charleston. Lincoln, hearing the sword in front, turned to Lincoln. Lincoln at once passed it back and the surrender was over. Between the lines the British grounded arms and stacked arms in a nearby field. Some of them threw their muskets on the ground in disgust, and in defiant colonel hit the hilt of his sword from his hand. As Tarleton's legion went by, three times or even watched eagerly for one face, but neither Harry Dale nor Dave Yandell saw Dane Grey—nor did Erskine Dale.

CHAPTER XVII

To Harry and Dave, Dane Grey's absence was merely a mystery—to Erskine it brought foreboding and dismay. Barbara Dale's name was on the lips of the American Legion and this order will be strictly enforced. Dane Grey had been a close friend of Arnold, and that intimacy had been the cause of much speculation since. He had told Dave of Barbara and Harry Morn, and Dave had told him gravely that he must go get them after the campaign was over and bring them to the fort in Kentucky. Two British Men-of-War Lying in the River Were Struck With Hot Shot and Set on Fire.

The day was the turn of events. The victors were drawn up in two lines a mile long on the right and left of a road that ran through the ruined fields south of Yorktown. Washington stood at the head of his army on the right, Rochambeau at the head of the French on the left. Behind on both sides was a great crowd of people to watch the ceremony. Slowly out of Yorktown marched the British colors, cased drums beating a significant English air:

"The world turned topsyturvy."

HARD WORK

If you are in need and wish others to work for you, show of pocket. Those who will pay you wages for doing it, unless you know how to do the work yourself, and safe working methods for supervising it.

It is easy to think about this world as a gigantic, still poorer "pay" week in which the man with an investing mind can

Now that is a vacation occupation. But unless you have earned the money to do it by hard work, you will get little out of it.

The easiest of all to feel sorry for yourself, and to think that you haven't had a chance in life and that you wouldn't be a success if you didn't happen to get treatment.

Those are easy things in life that don't amount to doing; but none of them are easy.

Every person prefers softer jobs, higher pay, and more leisure, but the man who works about six or seven hours a day at it now which, earlier in life, earned ten or twelve hours receiving far less pay per hour, is the good master.

Lloyd John were to go back to the same employing people who had all that all of them and the thirteen kids of to the things to do, and the same pain and worry and sweat, he would not accomplish without getting worry and sweat.

The people are doing it right along, and you seldom hear of them complaining because it is hard.

If you have made up your mind to something unusual or to do some work of importance, learn how to work twice as hard as you ever did before. That is only a first step. You must learn to think hard. If you can do both, and keep them up long enough, you may land, not necessarily you will have a lot of competition. Even hard work finds plenty of men to belong in and practice it, and most of them get what they are after.

THE FRIENDLY BOW

This truly gracious woman is never niggardly with friendly bows. She does not save such form of recognition for persons she meets socially or for persons whom she has met formally. Especially in a fairly small community she makes a point always to say good morning to the sales people she deals with and if she meets in the street a salesman or saleswoman with whom she has had frequent business dealings she greets with a bow. This she does whether she is alone or with others.

Some people I know of think that this is a lowering of dignity. The fact is that it is just the opposite. If you pass frequently by the stand of a certain traffic policeman you should make it a habit to bow to him in a friendly manner. In a very small town where the street railway system consists of a few cars and a handful of conductors and motormen it is customary to bow to the conductors whom you have encountered day after day. Men and women with gracious manner always speak or bow to the elevator attendant who daily takes them to the floor of their place of business.

The fact is that right through your day as you go about your own town be it small or large there are dozens of occasions when you should bow in a friendly manner. There is the little woman huddled on the corner from whom you buy your evening paper, the ice man who brings the ice, the vegetable peddler. These people you do not know socially. You may even feel quite superior to them. But it does not mean that you should fail to speak to them or to greet them with a sincere bow of friendliness when you see them.

ONCE IS ENOUGH

YOUR HAND How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies as the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

ILLNESS SHOWN IN THE HAND

A NERVOUS complaint, left as the aftermath of an illness, is indicated in the hand by a branch rising from a black spot on the line of life. Inspect the mount of the moon for a spot that is marked clearly, and note whether the skin of the hand is dry and covered with a network of lines. In that case, disease of the nervous system, of varying degrees of seriousness, may be suspected. If the nails are moderately long, but wide and bluish in tint, there is danger of nervous prostration.

An island on the line of the head, with the third angle of the triangle (the intersection of the line of health and the line of life) badly formed, and with small lines cutting the line of life, is an indication of neuralgia.

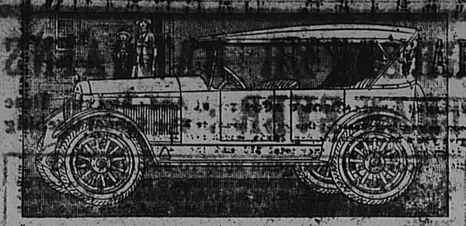

If the nails are short, flat and thin, and of triangular shape, and if all the principal lines of the palm are poorly marked, a disposition to paralysis is to be feared. And if there is a star at the end of the line of fate, with a star also at the end of the line of life in both hands, we may prognosticate death by paralysis.

Auto Hemic Therapy Treatments Make New Women of Her
"Before starting myself under the care of Dr. Green I was completely run down, suffered from nervousness, had no appetite, could not sleep, suffered pain and misery. After my second treatment I felt like a new woman, my appetite returned, I suffered intense pain. These pains drove my best friends away from me, but after my first treatment I felt like a new woman, my appetite is excellent. Before taking the treatments I was a nervous wreck, but now I am well and happy. I am glad to make this statement with a feeling of utmost gratitude to Dr. Green and Auto Hemic Therapy Treatments."

It Has Set A New Standard

6 Cylinder—50 Horsepower—$995
The Jewett weighs more than 2800 pounds ready for the road. That at once proves that it cannot be compared with any "light" six on the market.
It is equipped with a fifty horsepower motor of 3¼ inch bore and 5 inch stroke. To find a motor of equal power you must look to cars that sell for a much higher price.
It is important to remember, these facts. For they prove that the Jewett is built with excess strength in every detail of its frame, transmission, clutch, drive shaft and special Timken axles.
And they prove most conclusively that the new reduced price of $995 f. o. b. Detroit is the standard of value by which all five passenger sixes must be judged.
It is sold and serviced by Paige dealers everywhere

MORE WAILING AND GNASHING

Field Club Chucks Another Ball Game and Hap Thinks It's About Enough

By Hap Mathews

Running true to form we slipped under the wire with the also rans last Saturday. This time it was Delango that administered the drubbing. The final returns were 5 to 3.

Bugs Johnson, the invincible, was on the mound for the Buffalo Nichols and pitched a whale of a ball game, fanning twelve of the opposition during the hectic period of the battle. But the strenuous efforts of this lefthanded marvel were repeatedly gummed up by the more successful results of his teammates in casting the fuss to the fences.

Palmyra plays the most consistent ball of any club we have ever seen in action. They are always rotten. You can depend on it, like the rising and setting of the sun, or the popularity of Billy Sunday's three ring circus.

We are seriously considering having a stock form set up for the recording of these ball games. An arrangement whereby one could insert the names of the offender in the various spaces left in the post mortem for that particular purpose. There is only one satisfaction in hatching a word of dope about these brilliant fiascoes, and that is the fact that each one written means just one more less to labor over.

Practicing Charity

The same old tiresome wail applies to this game as it has to many of its predecessors. The thing should have been Palmyra's by a city block.

Once upon a time some bird made a statement about charity beginning at home. It seems as tho the local outfit have been visibly impressed by this wise counsel if one is to judge by the big hearted manner in which they present ball games to their adversaries. The only thing lacking in the gift giving was the usual lollypop chatter at the home plate by some lightbreded member of local progress propagaders, and a brass band to properly illuminate the mush.

Delanco grabbed off a good lead in the first ten minutes of the thing, when two free tickets, a passed ball and a wierd heave presented them with two runs. All this in spite of the fact that Johnson fanned three batters before a run had been scored.

Pat Steele's passed ball on Greenwald's bad strikes in the first put Joe's fan counter for the run

Mothers Cook Book

As the crazy beams of morning break
And childhood's happy days,
And the shimmering shades of moontide
Guard its youth from folly's ways;
So the grander shade of evening, with their lights and shades sublime,
Speak a broader, deeper knowledge, like a Shadrach's sabbar prime;
Then the twilight of life's seasons calmly
come and calmly go;
Happy they for whom its storm clouds ran a silver lining show.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

THIS is the time to prepare relishes, preserve, jellies and conserves.

White Relish.

Chop four quarts of cabbage, a quart of celery, one quart of white stringless beans cut in bits, one quart of silver-skinned onions chopped. Sprinkle all the vegetables with salt, except the onions, using a cupful of cold water to cover. Let stand overnight. In the morning drain, add the onions and put over the fire; add one cupful of fresh-grated horseradish, one ounce each of mustard seed and celery seed, three cupfuls of sugar and a piece of white ginger root. Cover with good vinegar and cook until the vegetables are tender, then put into jars.

Green Relish.

Take two quarts each of green tomatoes and cabbage chopped, one quart of green cucumbers, one quart of green peppers and a few white radishes, all chopped. Place the vegetables in a stone jar and pour over them enough cold water to cover; add a cupful of salt. Let stand overnight and drain off the water. Put three quarts of vinegar in a kettle, add three cupfuls of sugar, three small bags of spice containing one ounce each of allspice, pepper, cloves, mace, celery and mustard seed. Cover with vinegar and cook until the vegetables are tender. Add more salt if needed and can in jars.

Pickled Mushrooms.

Gather the small-sized button mushrooms, peel and cook, adding one cupful of vinegar to a quart of mushrooms, salt and spices to taste. Simmer until the mushrooms are tender, then can boiling hot.

Sweet Cider.

Any surplus apples may be put through the meat grinder, the juice squeezed out through a bag, then if boiled and bottled hot will never ferment. This is especially good for nincement, adding a little to the pies when they are being made.

GARBAGE AND ASHES

We notice in glancing through The Weekly News of the last issue that there is an item regarding cards being distributed by the Boosters Club to all citizens to find out what the attitude of the public toward having municipal collection of garbage and ashes. This is not a new thing by any means, for the writer and Mr. John M. Davies spoke about this some time ago, and there are many things against it, while we will grant that there are some for it.

Let us take garbage as a first issue. There are over 17 miles of streets in Palmyra, all of which are built up more or less. It can readily be seen that if we were to have only one wagon and a team of horses it would keep the driver pretty busy getting over this territory. We can see that the expense in connection with this will run around $50 per week which will include driver's wages, etc. Further Palmyra has no incinerator in which to dispose this garbage, this would mean the erection of one which will mean a few dollars. Further, there is a section of this town where people raise chickens, and these people use the garbage to feed to the chickens. But we can see that if there was municipal collection this would have to be paid for by the property owners of the town which would be passed along to those who rent, in this way adding to the already heavy burden under which we are at the present time straining.

We all have wells in our yards, and Mr. Davies has advocated for a long time past that these wells be filled up as soon as connection was made with the sewer. Mr. Davies thinks that this is an ideal place to use the ashes, for at least two years. Again he mentioned that parts of the town need filling in and the people who live in these sections are using the ashes from their own fires to fill in their lots, which seems very logical indeed. Why should these people pay for taking away ashes when they need them.

It is useless for us to try and have all of those things which are so common in the cities. We are not a city. We are overloaded with taxes, and if we are going to hop at everything which we see that someone else has, when will we stop?

If we have any surplus money why not spend it on the streets, where it is urgently needed, and let us pay our own bills to have our ashes hauled away and our garbage collected.

BOOSTER.

PALMYRA NOTES

The Baptists, winner of the Twilight League crown, will journey to Lan-caster Saturday to play the winners of the League there. On the 16th the double header between the Baptists and a picked team and between the P. O. S. of A. and the Moorestown camp is scheduled at the local ground.

The marriage of Miss Martha Stack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Stack, to Mr. Joseph W. Craven, of Philadelphia, took place at Elkton, Md., on Labor Day. A large reception was held at the home of the bride's mother, William Stack, Jr., 609 Sixth street. Music was furnished by Theodore L. Johnson's band. Mr. and Mrs. Craven are residing in Tacony.

Palmyra Lodge No. 67, Knights of Pythias, was treated to quite a surprise Thursday night of last week, when they entertained a large delegation from Oriental Lodge, Philadelphia, and the lodge at Paulsboro. The Paulsboro delegation brought with them a real-sure-enough-live-billy-goat, called Damon. Damon is well known in Knights of Pythias circles, having traveled pretty much all over the country and visited more than eighty lodges.

Local candidates drew for positions on the ballot last Saturday. In the Township Committee race on the Republican ballot, Horace Finney obtained first place and John M. Davies second, and in the assessorship contest John W. Shade got first and William H. Coles second.

Chief of Police Beck requests all persons who are going away for a trip to notify the police so that the police will be able to look after their house during their absence. Word should also be sent when the family returns. The police department has a supply of printed blanks for such notices and is always pleased to furnish them. It will do much to help protect property.

Miss Helen Kraus, the visiting nurse, is home after a month's vacation at Conneaut Lake, Pa.

Alfonso Taglianetti announces the engagement of his sister, Miss Antoinette, to Mr. Pete Di Bella.

Rev. Harry L. Saul, pastor of the Lutheran Church, has returned from a vacation spent at Gettysburg, Pa.

The nine-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gerlach, of Philadelphia, formerly of Palmyra, died last week and was buried on Saturday.

Camp 23, P. O. S. of A., at its meeting Monday evening decided to hold open house all day on Old Home Day and to invite all members to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Liming, of Germantown, are now comfortably situated in their home 314 Wishing-ton avenue, which they purchased through Raymond Warner.

M. J. McDermott left Thursday to attend a three-day National convention of the Customs Inspectors at the Hotel Plaza, New York. He represents the Philadelphia Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Gaus and family left Thursday morning in their auto taking Mary Smithfield to her home at East Smithfield, Pa. The Craves will be home early next week.

Mrs. George E. Reber will accompany her daughter, Mrs. Marion B. Gillow, to her home at Atlantic City for a couple of weeks. She will also visit Mrs. Wilbur Rapp, of Pleasantville, N. J.

Pauline Fridsen, who has made many friends during her stay here with her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. McAllister, expects to return to her home at Richmond, L. I., next Tuesday.

Palmyrians should remember that the fine new road through town, Cisaminson avenue, was largely the result of the efforts of Freeholder Rogers. Mr. Rogers is up for renomination on the 26th.

David Pratt and Mr. and Mrs. V. Sanderson, of Narbeth, members of the choir of All Souls' Church, Wynnewood, were entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Elvin I. Powell on Friday evening.

The monthly social of the King's Daughter's Bible class will be held Tuesday evening, September 12th, at the home of Miss Emma Hoff, 319 Parry avenue. All members please be present to discuss fall and winter work.

Miss Ruth Craft, a former resident of Palmyra, but now residing in Philadelphia, sailed from Vancouver, B.C., for China, where she will teach school for five years in the True Light Seminary, Canton. Miss Craft is a graduate of Ursinus College and has received a degree from the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Atkinson, of Allentown, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. William Rawlings.

Vasser's Delight.

Soak one-fourth of a pound of prunes over night in cold water, cook until tender and cut the flesh in small pieces, discarding the stones. Add half as much coconut per measure as prunes, a little of the coconut milk, and one or two tablespoonfuls of orange marmalade. Boil and stir in three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream, and two egg yolks, one after another and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; stir and cook in the hot prune mixture until the egg is set. Have ready flaky crust baked over small fluted tins. Fill the shells with the pastry mixture and cover with a meringue made of the whites of the eggs piled over the filling. Dredge with sugar and bake ten minutes to brown the meringue. Sprinkle with chopped browned almonds or coconut shreds.

ROMANCE OF WORDS

"PECUNIARY"

IF, AFTER being promised a "pecuniary reward" for the performance of a certain service, a person were to receive a sheep, he would probably feel that he had been deceived or that the one who had made the promise had gone back on his word. But, in its primary meaning, "pecuniary" has nothing "relating to sheep," being taken verbatim from the Latin pecunia which, in turn, is derived from pecus, sheep.

The transformation grew out of the custom of the Romans of measuring a man's wealth by the number of sheep which cruised over his pastures. A "man of many sheep" was the equivalent of a wealthy citizen for sheep were valuable not only for their wool but also as an article of diet. Gradually, the root-word pecus was lengthened to pecunia, the equivalent of "money" or "worldly possessions," and its pastoral origin was almost completely obscured when transplanted into English. Should a restaurant, therefore, advertise a "pecuniary stew" it would not necessarily mean that dollar bills and gold pieces appear in the dish, but it would merely be an etymologically allowable synonym for the old standby, "mutton stew."

THE FRIENDLY PATH

By WALTER L. ROBINSON

TURN the world's thoughts to peaceful pursuits and there is little danger of war.

With the wider recognition of the importance of anti-war intelligence, the happiness of the world is measurably increased, for warfare or dangers of warfare and happiness cannot exist at the same time.

There are some who loudly wail because of the invention of a new super-gun which, if news reports are correct, would make the great German gun of St. Gobain appear like a toy. It is held in some quarters that the invention or perfection of the invention of this mammoth weapon indicates too much thought of warfare and does not augur well for continued peace. But, on the other hand, quite a number of clear-thinking individuals contend that this new gun is a good thing, because it is likely to prevent future wars.

However, the most encouraging news in connection with the new invention is that telling that the gun is to be employed as an industrial instrument. Trading through the thickest armor-plate with the greatest ease and rapidity, it would be admirably adapted to doing tunnel work for mankind. If this gun is what it is said to be it would be impossible to estimate the value of the invention British and French statesmen have given to the world.

But, be this as it may, is it not a fine thing to be willing to know that the St. Gobain "super-gun" is in existence, to insure wellwater and use or two are attributed to the victims swallowing water while swimming in creeks where sewage empties.

The Board of Freeholders last week received a complaint from the Palmyra Chamber of Commerce about the dust from West Broad street, just improved by the county. Freeholder Stout explained that the road would be oiled as soon as the surface was in proper condition.

As guests of the Hill Construction Company, members of the Burlington County Board of Freeholders and others made a tour of inspection of improved roads in Delaware and Maryland last week, some of which had been built by the Mount Holly Company. The tour covered a distance of about 500 miles and was made in automobiles on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The county road from Riverton to Moorestown, including Main street from the Riverton pier to the Borough line, has been oiled and the top dressed with fine stone this week. Tuesday afternoon a car containing eight passengers attempted to use the portion of the oiled road in front of the Hewlings Place residence and slid off into the ditch. The car was overturned and badly damaged but the passengers escaped without serious injury. The car was taken to Clinton B. Weatherby's for repairs.

OLD HOME DAY

Collectors at Work and Size of Celebration Depends on Returns

The Old Home Day collectors have started their work of taking contributions and about $200 already has been turned in.

The collectors plan to give everybody plenty of time and it is being impressed on citizens that the magnitude of the celebration will depend entirely on the amount of funds collected.

The committee hopes to have a number of added features this year, but it can't be done without the necessary finances.

Everybody is urged to give the matter their best consideration and help show our visitors on that day something worth while.

RACE RESULTS

Last Saturday was the annual Labor Day regatta of the Palmyra Canoe Club and the weather was ideal for the occasion. The water was smooth as glass and the sun shone brightly. The first and final events were the two canoe races, the Canoe Club Cup and the Old Home Day cup. Both were won by Capt. Kid, a Sea Scout boat from across the river and sailed by John Dungan. Edgar Miller's Yankee got second place, with Vincent Bush's Meva third and Malcolm Dickinson's Adnama fourth. Nine Bells, another Sea Scout boat, sailed by Charlie Seeber, finished last.

But he who laughs last laughs best, for on Labor Day the Nine Bells pealed in victory when Skipper Seeber beat a field of six entries over the finishing line.

The other boats finished as follows: Edgar Miller, second; John Dungan, third; the Deep Sea, another Scout boat, fourth. Bush and Dickinson did not finish.

Owing to the light wind on Labor Day, the L. I. boats, which were to have raced for a special cup, postponed the contest.

The sixteen-footers, which will sail but two series of races, have two more races to sail in their second series.

By virtue of this race Monday the standing of members' series will be points, with Robertsen showing 7 points, Farrell 5, and Shewell 4. Points were awarded one each for the boats taken and one for finishing.

The club championship of 1922 will be decided in the fall series of races which will be started on Saturday of this week.

In the race the Saturday before, Robertsen came in first, Mattis second, Crowell third and Shewell fourth.

Papal Hat Worn in 800.

Originally the tiara or triple crown of the pope was a plain linen cap, much like those in which dukes of Venice are so often represented in old pictures. It was first introduced by Pope Felix IV. in 800. Just when the first coronet was added is a matter of conjecture. Evelyn hesitated a few moments and then gave this as rather the awakening of the original German: "Hope climb."

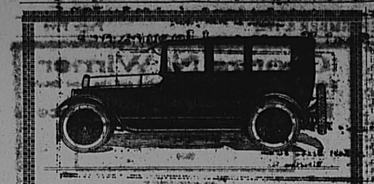

'Morse' is Preferable Anyway.

Evelyn is only four but her parents admit she is "real smart." Recently her grandmother tried to teach her to say "dance school." Evelyn made a good effort with her American tongue and managed this: "Dance skool." A few days later an occasion arose to use the expression. Evelyn hesitated a few moments and then gave this rather free rendering of the original German: "Horse chum."

SPECIAL-SIX TOURING

A NEW LOW PRICE

WHEREVER you look, you will find protected worthiness built into the Studebaker Special-Six and this quality of construction is just as exacting down under the surface as it is where you can see every detail.

The skilful workmanship and the fine materials of these hidden values will prove a source of satisfaction and dependable service for many years.

Two important elements that make the Special-Six a gem for fine performance and comparative freedom from repair are the fully floating crankshaft and the 7-bearing motor with its extra large main bearings.

Because the Special-Six is a necessary adjunct of "sight," it follows that the absence of light—or darkness—will nullify the sight and take away the things which surround us totally invisible. Without light, our eyes are useless, and even the light itself is scarcely more necessary than reflection, as may be proved by looking into a mirror and then into a sheet of white paper. The latter reflects only a portion of it from its polished surface and the image which we see is in the nature of a vision, lacking the depth and the perspective attainable in the mirror. If anyone could invent a scientifically perfect black paint which would absorb all light and reflect none, he would solve the riddle of invisibility, for it would be impossible to see such objects even in the brightest of sunlight.

"Stop!" Erskine cried, but the negro came thundering on, as though he had not heard. Then the white man threw up his arm, and, leaning over, fired. Shoot, you coward!" shouted Erskine, and Grey straightened and fired again.

"Come on, Marse Stephen!" he cried. "Come to yo' home. Come on, suh!"

With a groan the master of Blue Meadows sat back and spat; they met, and again they parted, and Erskine, with the darkey's every shot in him, turned and looked down the road for his brother when Grey fell dead.

"Forward, Grey! Sidney gone ahead—all of you! Forward, men! Don't stop for any sight."

Boarding House Blossoms

By RUBY DOUGLAS

©, 1922, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

She was slim and pale and she occupied the table beside the window in the boarding house. Sometimes the sun slanting in shone on the dull auburn of her hair and turned it into fiery copper.

Drake's table was far back in the shadow of the second dining room. He sat where he was quite unobserved, but from his vantage point he was most observing. He studied each of Mrs. Dren's paying guests while he mechanically fed himself with her indifferently cooked food.

Most often he found himself watching the girl whom he had named Violet. He had given her this name because of her slim, modest shyness, and somehow she seemed to exude a fragrance that was reminiscent of the English violet itself.

Drake never made friends in boarding houses, nor apparently did the girl. Otherwise theirs might have been before this an ordinary speaking acquaintance.

The days had long since gone when landladies could buy a bunch of wall-flowers or jonquils for a dime, and in consequence the tables were seldom served with anything more decorative than a salt and pepper shaker and the mustard pot.

One day when Drake opened his mail and found a check larger than he had expected from a story inspired by folks in that dining room he decided to buy some flowers for the landlady. He bought an armful of tawny chrysanthemums and every table in both dining rooms was made beautiful by them.

Drake happened to glance at Violet and his heart gave a bound. She had cupped one of the great blossoms in her lovely hands and was burying her face in it. Then she raised her eyes and looked into its golden depths with an unmistakable love of flowers in her expression. She inhaled the bitter sweetness of it for a moment, sighed as if in reminiscence and then went on with her soup. Drake, too, continued his prosaic task of eating.

"Jolly good thing I didn't get roses," he said to himself. "She might have kissed them right here before this cold audience." He wondered how it would feel to have Violet look deep into his soul as she had looked into the heart of this flower.

That night he brought home six hyacinths and took them to his room under cover of his coat.

Violet usually went for a short walk after her day in business, and it was while she was gone that he slipped the bunch of blossoms through the balcony railing and on her window sill, so that they might greet her when she pulled up her curtains the next morning. Drake's room was next to hers and he could hear her moving about when the windows were up.

He slept well and he believed he dreamed of a slim, auburn-haired girl in a garden of flowers.

The tinkling of the brass rings on the long curtains in the next room brought him to consciousness in the morning. He sat up and listened. He heard a soft little exclamation and was repaid for his gift. She had found the flowers and they had given her delight.

Later, in the dining room, he heard her questioning Mrs. Drew, but that astonished person was as much mystified as was the girl.

Romance had drifted into the boarding house, and Mrs. Drew was as pleased and excited as a cat with her first batch of kittens. But she could not put two and two together. She could not find the happy man.

Easy-going David Drake, the serious, quiet author of so many short stories, was the last person she would have suspected.

And Violet? She was only half conscious of having stepped into the world of romance. But she had found a new interest in life. Her eyes took on a warmer glow, her steps became more buoyant and a faint rose flush appeared in her pale cheeks when she entered the boarding house dining room.

Exquisite orange-tulips had followed the hyacinths and then happy yellow jonquils. Then, one morning, a great cluster of fragrant, dewy roses of deepest, warmest red greeted her eyes when she pulled aside her curtain. After that she knew that she was truly loved.

Violet had kept all the bulbs and was caring for them until the following spring, when she hoped to be able to plant them in the far-away garden in the South. She had been miserably homesick since she came to the big city to make her living and she longed for the family, the flowers, the birds and all that meant life to her. No one knew just how much this gift of flowers had meant to her nor how wonderfully her soul had responded.

It was getting well into spring and the long, light evenings made it difficult for Drake to get his offerings unseen to her window. His own awnings were up and the partition between the balconies was canvased so as to insure privacy. The girl had planted flowers on her railings and he could see her tending them.

When he sent the two tubs of crimson ramblers to her after this he decided to write a note to accompany them. He was fearful lest the girl might worry about the material side of it— the expenditure. He fabricated successfully as if he were writing fiction and explained that the overpriced greenhouses of his home in the country made it nothing at all for him to keep her in the flowers she so obviously loved.

Violet pondered over the note, and more than ever her eyes were dreamy with the wonder of her secret romance. Would it be so wonderful when she met him face to face?

She knew her moment of awakening had come when she entered the dining room one morning and her eyes fell on a drooping head of heliotrope in the lapel of David Drake's coat. She blushed brilliantly. He caught her eyes, and as she found her way to her own table she realized how wonderfully woven was the web of her romance. No man, of all whom she had known, could have fitted so adequately into the dream as this quiet writer of short stories.

When she returned to her room she buried her face in the big begonia plant and wrote a note. "I want a way to thank you for all the joy you have brought into my life with your gifts of flowers. The begonia bud must have been broken off to carry a message to you. I am glad it is you who have been so good to me."

Fortunately that night when Violet passed his table Drake was not in his place, and she dropped the scribbled note near his knife.

When he read it he, too, turned a rosy red. He spoke at once with the ratlemaid, who, with a broad grin that showed that her sympathetic Irish soul had been touched, carried the tray of food over to the little table by the window. Drake himself followed.

The tablemaid told Mrs. Drew afterward that she had never seen such a look in any one's eyes as had come into the girl's when Mr. Drake sat down at the table opposite her.

After that the petals of the flower of the boarding house romance unfolded one by one until a blushing bride bloomed in all her loveliness.

ECCENTRIC IN ALL THINGS

Poet Shelley a Good Example of "Great Minds to Madness Closely Are Allied."

In Shelley, politics, atheism, love and poetry were all mixed up together. A touch of neurasthenia added to the confusion. In so far, he was only one of the more interesting specimens of humanity. Nevertheless, his eccentricity is a tale that grows in the telling, granted he never could swim, he was a good shot and loved pistol practice all his life, somewhat to the discomfort of those who watched him handle firearms. Hogg says he could fairly glide through a crowd but would trip over his own feet, once he was alone. His absurd dread of disease has been dwelt on again and again; as, for instance, his catching elephantiasis by rubbing knees all day with an absurdly fat woman who sat opposite to him in a stage coach. Not till he had been examined and reassured by a physician did he recover. Members of his entourage write vaguely of "spasms"—Trelawny blames laudanum, and implies that he was too constantly haunted by his own thoughts, in spite of incessant reading and writing. Peacock cites the vegetarian diet and concludes with his famous cure—"two mutton chops, well peppered." Hogg thinks he should have been a lawyer, "for he had the most acute intellect of any man I ever knew"—poetry was the evil genius of his life.—Stewart Mitchell in the Dial

East India Turbans.

In India the turban is worn to protect the head from excessive heat, the thickness varying according to the climate in each locality. These turbans are made of cloth of from 20 to 40 feet long and from 12 to 18 inches wide, and are wrapped around the head in endless variety, according to rank and taste.

There are a number of accessories worn in combination with the turban. One beautiful ornament, limited to the use of kings, princes and nobles, is a beautifully embroidered velvet band about six inches long and two broad into the middle of which is inserted a gold plate set with precious stones. This is worn obliquely in front of the turban and the band is tied behind by means of a silk thread fastened to each end.

Auto Hemic Therapy Treatments Make Young Women of Her
"Before placing myself under the care of Dr. Greise I was completely run down, nervous and despondent. My appetite was absolutely gone and I could not sleep. My condition was so advanced that I was unable to do housework. I submitted to his scientific blood treatments and after a few weeks I noticed a decided change for the better. My appetite is splendid. Before taking the treatments I did not weigh more than 100 pounds. Now I weigh 125 pounds. I am perfectly well and strong and can do my housework without any trouble. Treatments. I feel like a new born girl. Dr. Greise has established a new woman in me. All my pains have disappeared and my appetite is splendid. Before taking the treatments I did not weigh more than 100 pounds. Now I weigh 125 pounds. I am perfectly well and strong and can do my housework without any trouble. Treatments."

FRELINGHUYSEN SELF MADE MAN

Hard Work and His Own Efforts Won Business Success and Political Advancement.

BEGAN AS AN OFFICE BOY

Career of United States Senator Typical of Sturdy American Who Is Architect of His Own Fortunes.

(Special Correspondence.)

Washington, D. C. — Poverty has never been a bar to political advancement in the United States. Indeed, so many have been the instances of the rise of poor boys to places of great power in the Republic that early poverty has almost come to be considered as an essential to political success. On the other hand, inherited wealth has been considered a positive handicap to such success, even though there have been many exceptions to this, the most notable of which perhaps was Roosevelt.

Senator Frelinghuysen, who in all likelihood will be chosen by the people of New Jersey to succeed himself in the United States Senate, knew from his earliest youth what it was to have to win his way, to make every penny count, and by his own persistent efforts to win his way to his present success in business and politics.

Joseph Sherman Frelinghuysen is not an accidental product either in politics or in business. He climbed the ladder in both instances from the bottom rung. When he was eighteen he had rb quit school and go to work at four dollars a week as office boy for a firm of wholesale vinegar dealers in New York.

The wholesale vinegar business did not offer glowing promise to the office boy, and he sought other opportunities. One day he saw this newspaper advertisement:

WANTED—An office boy of good character; cigarette smokers need not apply. Address Box 3023, City Post Office.

Gets His First Job

With characteristic directness, he did not answer this advertisement by letter, but inquired at the delivery window and obtained the name of the firm which rented Box 3023—the Continental Insurance Company. So he went to the company offices and in time was ushered into the presence of the president, Mr. Moore.

But he did not propose to wait for a decision regarding the job. He visited a cousin who was personally acquainted with the secretary of the Continental Insurance Company. With a letter of introduction, he returned to the charge. The secretary took him without delay to Mr. Moore who for the second time in which two hours beheld a ruddy faced, eager-youth in front of him demanding that job. This time he got it.

The office boy quickly qualified himself to appraise risks and solicit business. His salary was soon advanced to $40 a month, and not long afterward a rival company offered him $65 and he accepted.

It was not long until Mr. Frelinghuysen formed the Manufacturers Lloyds. It consisted of twenty-one underwriters, each of whom contributed $1,000 to the capital. Mr. Frelinghuysen borrowed his thousand. The Manufacturers Lloyds prospered.

In politics Mr. Frelinghuysen began as chairman of the Somerset County (New Jersey) Republican Executive Committee, later becoming a member of the Republican State Committee. In 1902 he ran for the state senate. It was not until 1905 that his ambition to enter the upper branch of the state legislative body was granted, and he served continuously until 1911. He was president of the state senate in 1910, and has acted as governor of New Jersey ad interim.

Reforms State School System

New Jersey school laws and the school system were in a jumble of confusion and the state ranked twenty-sixth educationally in the Union. Largely through Mr. Frelinghuysen's efforts as a legislator and as president of the State Board of Education, New Jersey now ranks fourth. The senator is now, and for a considerable time has been, president of the Department of Agriculture of New Jersey. He is a trustee of Rutgers College and has the degree of A. B. from that institution.

When Mr. Frelinghuysen decided to make the race for the United States senate he did not have what is known as "organization" support. Nevertheless he sent letters to 2,500 Republican city and county committeemen informing them of his decision to run. One hundred and nineteen replied in a way which the prospective candidate regarded as satisfactory, but the organization nevertheless opposed him.

"Let the people decide," was Mr. Frelinghuysen's slogan. On posters, on fences, on barns and on billboards, accompanied by Mr. Frelinghuysen's portrait, it confronted the Jersey voters. The people decided. Mr. Frelinghuysen won in the primaries and was elected by a plurality of 74,096.

Nor have they had any occasion to regret their judgment. His record in the senate has fully justified it. As a member during the war of the important Committee on Military Affairs, as a member of the Banking and Currency Committee, and chief of the Finance Committee which framed the bill drafting the income, excess profits and other taxes necessary to finance the war, he showed himself eminently alert and courageous in his convictions. His fearless work as chairman of the subcommittee which investigated the coal situation and his far-seeing bill to take the tariff out of politics, stamp him as having the qualities of a statesman.

Experience had qualified Senator Frelinghuysen specially for his duties on the Committee on Military Affairs. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he went to the front as a second lieutenant. For special services in Cuba and Porto Rico he was recommended by the President for promotion to the rank of Brevet First Lieutenant.

As a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, Senator Frelinghuysen aided in framing and assisted in the passage of the Transportation Act, whereunder the railroads have been operating since their return to private control. His bill demanding regulation of the coal industry forms the basis of the coal regulatory legislation now pending in Congress. He has been active since the war, too, in presenting hundreds of cases from his state in which there had been delay in procuring allotments or compensation. He is, indeed, one of the busiest men in Washington, for, in addition to his duties on behalf of his constituents, he prolonged hearings on the tariff, and the active work he did in the coal investigation, he manages to give part of his time to the committees on claims, and public buildings and grounds.

LAUDS FRELINGHUYSEN

Farmers and Manufacturers Say His Tariff Attitude Proves Him Labor's Friend.

Raritan, N. J.—Additional evidences that agriculturists and industrialists everywhere appreciate the importance of the scientific tariff revision which has been written into the senate tariff bill through the efforts of Senator Frelinghuysen, are seen in the letters that are being sent him. Among the most recent expressions signifying an appreciation of his effort to take the tariff out of politics and substitute instead a scientific measure based on findings of fact are the Johnson-Cowdin-Emerich Company of Paterson and the Wright Aeronautical Company also of Paterson. Others have come from the American Farm Bureau Federation and important New Jersey industrial leaders.

H. R. Walker, vice president of the Johnson-Cowdin-Emerich Company, declares in his letter that Senator Frelinghuysen's establishment of the principle that conversion costs are the primary bases for a tariff is a great forward step for which labor everywhere throughout the country owes him a debt of gratitude.

Mr. Walker's letter is as follows:

"My dear Senator Frelinghuysen:

"As manufacturers in the State of New Jersey depending almost entirely upon an American market which must necessarily be governed by the general economic stability of the country, we wish to express our appreciation for the wise and courageous stand you have taken in reference to the pending tariff bill.

"We believe that your amendment to the tariff bill which empowers the Tariff Commission to investigate the differences between production costs here and abroad and on those differences to recommend rates which will be proclaimed by the President, will go far toward assuring business throughout the country freedom from the very serious disturbances to which it has hitherto been subject owing to our methods of tariff making.

"We believe that the flexibility of the tariff that is permitted under your amendment giving the commission power to hold hearings constantly and to recommend changes of rates whenever they are proven necessary will add materially to the stability of enterprises everywhere.

"The recognition by the senate at your urging of the fact that conversion costs, i.e., the labor involved in manufacturing, is the primary basis for a tariff tax is a great step forward and labor everywhere throughout the country should understand that in you they have found a friend whose practical help does much to insure the maintenance of the present American wage scale even during this period of depressed foreign manufacturing costs.

"We hope that the people of New Jersey will realize the great service that you have rendered every element of its citizenship.

"Very truly yours,

"(Signed) H. R. WALKER.

The Afternoon Meetings Will Be Resumed Sunday, the 24th

On Sunday, September 24th, the Wesleyan Men's Bible Class will resume its afternoon meetings. The first will be known as "Kershner Day." Brother Kershner gave some delightful and beneficial talks last year at the meetings and it is hoped that a large number will be on hand to greet him at the beginning of the new season.

Those of the Wesleyan Class attending the meeting in the grove this Sunday, when the Men's Classes of various churches of the community have combined for a big day, are requested to park their cars in front of the P. O. S. of A. Hall, facing west.

All members of the class are urged to attend this "open air" meeting. A pleasant hour is assured all, and "Pop" Jordan will have a message of interest and helpfulness.

The place conducted by Joseph Sunopie, of Riverside, also was raided, and ninety gallons of alleged moonshine, one hundred gallons of mash and a large still were confiscated. Cambrie for a King.

In 1830 a purse of gold was offered in behalf of Henry VIII of England to any workmen who would produce the finest shirts. The prize was won by the weavers of Cambrai and the material was called cambric, in honor of the town in which it was made. Before long the linen that there were produced became famous to the trade. Straightway it became the fashion for all fine underwear, collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs and ruffles to be made of cambric.

The morning of the day will be devoted to reception of visitors. The exercises in the grove, consisting of addresses of welcome, band music and appropriate songs, will begin at 2 p.m. and will be followed by a ball game between the teams of Riverton and Palmyra of 25 years ago.

FORM MEN'S CLUB AT CHRIST CHURCH

At a meeting of members of the congregation and the St. Agnes Guild of Christ Church, Palmyra, last Saturday evening, W. T. J. Purnell cited the splendid work done by the Guild and suggested that the men of the church should also be organized.

The idea met with quick approval, and the pastor, the Rev. D. A. Parce, was requested to take the chair and effect a temporary organization. The following temporary officers were elected: W. T. J. Purnell, president; Charles K. Mervine, secretary; R. E. Wilson, treasurer.

Mr. Purnell then appointed an organization committee composed of Frank A. Mathews, Sr., Frank A. Mathews, Jr., E. W. G. Borer and E. B. Day.

The name, Men's Club of Christ Church, Palmyra, was adopted and it was decided that the meetings should be held on the fourth Monday of each month, the next to be held in the parish house on October 23rd.

The policies and scope of the club were then discussed at length. Mr. Wilson urged that its efforts should be toward intellectual, moral and religious welfare in a non-sectarian way, by means of lectures, entertainment and study.

E. B. Day was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee and Mr. Borer agreed to provide a speaker at the next meeting, while Mr. Brelsford agreed to supply a musical entertainment.

water and was drowned. The body was not recovered until Tuesday, September 12th, two days after the accident. Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks were former residents of Riverton, occupying the house at 419 Main street.

The Burlington County Firemen's Association is preparing a history of the fire companies in the county which are members, which will be published in booklet form. Sheriff Flagg and a photographer from Mount Holly were in Riverton on Sunday and took a picture of the Riverton fire apparatus, president Killam E. Bennett, members of the Board of Directors and active firemen grouped about the machine, to be published in the history.

Frank Flower, formerly of Riverton, indicted at the last term of court for the larceny of some window cushions, mirrors, electrical wire, etc., from a property owned by George N. Wimer, Herbert Trout and A. Harry Ruddock, entered a plea of guilty last week at Mount Holly. He claimed that he was out of work at the time and that he had to do something to pay his back board bill. He was sentenced to sixty days in the county jail, to date from the time of his commitment on August 19th.

On Saturday afternoon, October 7, there will be given a series of exhibition tennis matches, at the home of Oliver G. Willits, by the following well-known players: William T. Tilden, present National champion; Wallace F. Johnson, last year's runner-up to the champion; Carl Fischer, Middle States champion; Sandy Wiener, one of Tilden's proteges. Steel stands will be erected for the convenience of the spectators. The exhibition is given for the benefit of the Burlington County Hospital, and tickets of admission may be secured by application to Mr. Willits, phone Riverton 409.

W. Stewart Hollingshead had a narrow escape from serious injury in an automobile accident in Riverside early last night, when his car was run into by another car driven by Raymond Bentley, of the Windy Nook House, Beverly. The accident happened at the corner of Pavilion avenue and Lafayette street. Both Hollingshead and his car escaped unhurt, while Bentley's car was wrecked, his wood radiator and fender had to be taken to the Riverside hospital, where he was treated for injuries to the face and leg. A trial to determine the responsibility for the accident, will be held before Squire Rochrig at Riverside town hall Friday evening, the 8th.

Riverton School in Fine Shape

At the meeting of the Board of Education Tuesday night, the property committee was given a vote of thanks for the splendid condition in which the building had been put during the vacation season and for securing a supply of coal. Mrs. Dora W. Smith, one of the teachers, who had signed up for the coming year, sent a telegram to Miss Chew, supervising principal, last Friday stating that she would not be able to come. A resolution was passed rescinding her contract and the clerk was instructed to ask her for return of the same. Mrs. Jeanette Vollmer was employed to take her place. Miss Chew reported that school had opened on Monday, the 11th, with an attendance of 308, with twelve to come, making a total enrollment of 320. A resolution was passed placing the renting of the auditorium in the hands of the district clerk.

The applications of thirty pupils who desire to go to Palmyra high school, were granted. The clerk was instructed to write a letter of thanks to Mrs. Henry C. Biddle, for pictures which she presented to the school and which have been hung in the auditorium.

MICKIE, THE PRINTER'S DEVIL

Huh! Whassat?

Chimney Swifts and Their Glue.

The bird called the chimney swift, without stopping in its flight, snaps off with its beak or feet little twigs at the end of dead branches, and these it carries, one by one, into a chimney, glueing them against the side until it has finished an almost flat, shelflike lattice cradle. Only during the nesting season do certain glands in its mouth secrete a brownish fluid that quickly gums and hardens when exposed to the air. When the basket has been stuck against a chimney-side it looks as if it were covered with a thin coat of isinglass. On this lattice four to six white eggs are laid.

Quickly Gone.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel.

INEZ

INEZ has a saintly origin since it is derived from the Greek word agnos, meaning "sacred," "pure," and comes into usage through the Latin word for lamb which is agnus. The lamb was the symbol of the Roman maiden whose place of martyrdom manned the Church of Saint Agnese. Pilgrimages are made there and it is said that the gentle saint has appeared to supplicants, in human guise with a lamb of purest whiteness by her side. Each year, two lambs are brought to the pope and blessed in the Church of Saint Agnese; then they are shorn and the wool is spun and woven by the nuns into palls presented by the pope to each primate.

Agnes or Agnese, is in popular usage as a proper name in England, France and Germany. Portugal is responsible for Ines. Soft as Agnese is, it did not please the Portuguese who changed it first to Ines, indicating the liquid sound of "gn" by the vedilla. Later it became Inez and named the ill-fated Inez de Castro, whose doom made it famous above all Portuguese feminine names.

Ines and Inez flourished for centuries there, before they were brought to England, and without being anglicized were used as British names unreservedly. The diminutive which the Portuguese had evolved, Inesita, was left in its native land as being too Latin for English adoption. Italy, too, rejected it, preferring Agnese, but also adding its own Agnete and Agnesca.

Thomas Hood wrote a charming lyric to "Fair Ines":

"Oh saw ye not fair Ines?
She's gone into the West;
To dazzle when the sun is down,
And rob the world of rest;
She took our daylight with her,
The smiles that we love best,
With morning blushes on her cheek,
And pearls upon her breast."

Chrysolite is Inez' talismanic stone; "the chrysolite of sunrise," wrote Shelley, if worn upon the left arm and set in gold, it will drive away all evil and protect its wearer from contagion. Thursday is Inez' lucky day, and 7, her lucky number. The chrysanthemum, signifying cheerfulness, is her flower.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 17

THE MESSAGE OF MALACHI

LESSON TEXT—Mal. 3:1-4:3.

GOLDEN TEXT—Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts.—Mal. 3:7.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—II Kings 17:7-41; Isa. 1; Ezek. 34:1; Acts 26:6; II Cor. 6:1-2:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Promise of the Savior's Coming.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Offerings That Please God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What We Should Give to God.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What the Bible Teaches About Giving.

The subject of today's lesson is broader than the text, especially the verses printed. The best way to teach this lesson is to give a survey of the entire book.

Malachi was perhaps contemporary with Nehemiah; probably sustained the same relation to Nehemiah that Haggai and Zechariah did to Zerubbabel. After the completion of the walls of Jerusalem Nehemiah seems to have been called back to the Persian court, but returned to Jerusalem after a few years. Though outwardly the lives of the people were correct, the prophet pointed out the sins of a corrupt priesthood, mixed marriages and a failure to pay tithes.

I. Israel's Base Ingratitude (1:1-5). God approached them with the tender affirmation: "I have loved you." It was the prophet's burden to declare this fact unto them (v. 1). So formal and worldly were the people that they failed to see God's hand upon them. The attitude of Israel to God is shown in the skeptical insinuation "Wherein hast Thou loved us?" The prophet answers this by showing God's choice of Jacob and His passing by Esau; His destruction of Edom and saving Israel.

II. God's Severe Indictment (1:6-2:17).

1. Against the Priests (1:6-2, 9). They were guilty (1) of profanity (1:6). Their profanity was in despising the name of God. To fail to honor God is to be profane. To use His name in any unreal way is to be thus guilty. (2) Sacrilege (vv. 7, 8). Their sacrilegious act was in offering polluted bread and blemished sacrifices. To bring such offerings to an earthly ruler would be a gross insult. Gifts to be acceptable with God must be genuine; must cost something. We should give to God our best. There is no intellect too brilliant to offer in the Lord's service. The young should not esteem their lives wasted who offer them on the altar of missionary sacrifice. (3) Greed (1:10). They were not willing to open the doors of God's House without pay. Our service should be out of a heart of love for God, not for profit. This has a vital application to ministers and evangelists today. To enter Christian service because of worldly gain is of this type. (4) Weariness (1:12,13). Because of lack of love the routine of duty became irksome. (5) Not teaching the law to the people (2:1-9). Those set apart to teach God's law to the people have a great responsibility and God will most surely demand an accounting.

2. Against the People (2:10-17; 3:7-15). (1) For ungodly marriages (2:11, 12). God's purpose in the prohibition of mixed marriages was that He might raise up holy seed (v. 15). The marriage of the believer with the unbeliever today brings confusion into the fold of God and turns aside His purpose. (2) For divorce (2:13-16). Divorce was the source of great sorrow—even the tears of the wronged women covering the altar (v. 13). The offerings of a man who had thus treated his wife would be an abomination to God. The tears of wronged women today are going up to God and make even the prayers of some men an abomination to Him. (3) Public wrongs (3:5, 6). (a) Sorcery—magic. Those who practice such things should be regarded as public offenders. (b) Adultery. This is a sin of wider extent than the parties concerned. (c) False swearing. (d) Oppression of the hireling, widow and fatherless. (e) Turned aside the stranger from his rights. (4) Blasphemy (3:13-15).

III. The Severe Judgments Which Shall Befall the Nation (3:16; 4:1-6).

1. By Whom Executed. This is done by the Lord. Judgment has been committed to the Son of God (Acts 17:30-31).

2. Time of Second Coming of Christ. John the Baptist was the forerunner of His first coming. Elijah shall be the forerunner of His second coming.

3. Result. For the righteous it will be a day of healing and salvation. To the wicked it will be a day of burning and destruction. A book of remembrance is now being kept. A day of retribution is coming.

Even as He Is Pure.

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure.—I John 3:2, 3.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

TURNING CORNERS

THE very ease and speed with which you rush ahead, so serviceable while the road is smooth and clear, make it difficult sometimes to slow down and turn the corners in safety.

A straight course is easy to follow, but a devious way is hard and calls for all your strength and finer judgment in spite of your vaunted skill.

A few trifling words, a slip of the foot, a shifting of the eye or a broken truth and you are destitute of courage, in a perilous position from which it may take years to extricate yourself.

Friendships are irrevocably lost at the corners where you must turn to determine your future; where you find that you must curtail expenses and live a simpler life with less pleasure and more work.

Turning corners dampens the spirits of high-strung men and women and often narrows their views to so great an extent that they become mere corner loungers, of no use to themselves or to the community in which they exist.

The sunlight vistas of life have been darkened by the gathering clouds of adversity in which they unexpectedly plunged as they turned a sharp corner in an unfamiliar territory.

Like you, these victims of misfortune were comfortable and happy in the heyday of prosperity.

And like thousands of others, they miscalculated their strength and were hastily swept off their feet, bruised and maimed as they found themselves bereft of power and hubbled in pride.

In an atmosphere that stifles their ambition and fills their souls with remorse, they are like frightened children lost in the dark, afraid of the shadows and unable to move.

Yesterday they would have laughed at the plight of a friend who made an unfortunate turn at the corner; to-day, laughter and they are not on speaking terms.

Only the brave and true and merciful can hope to turn the corners on life's highway in security.

And if you will look into the lives of such persons you will find that they were early taught at a good mother's knee to put aside greed and selfishness, to call men brothers, to help the poor, to be charitable to the fallen, and to practice in their dealings with others the golden rule, that the corners might be turned without calamity, even in the purpling twilight.

Uncommon Sense By JOHN BLAKE

"USED" THOUGHTS

EMERSON, wisest of all American essayists, says somewhere that every man must sooner or later make up his mind that he and no one else must determine his future.

We can learn from others knowledge, methods, even wisdom.

Other men can teach us how to think, as they can teach us how to swim or play golf.

But they cannot swim for us, they cannot play golf for us, and they cannot think for us.

We all employ a great deal of thought that is not our own. That must be, for we should be foolish not to profit by the accumulated wisdom of those who have gone before.

But these "used" thoughts, white we must at times employ them, serve not at all to develop our minds.

And while we might get along fairly well through life without original thought, we should die little wiser than when we began, and contribute nothing whatever to the progress of the world.

All that is of value in education is learning how to think.

From biography we derive a great deal, but most of it consists in knowing how other men thought, and how their thoughts made their fortunes.

If we carry all our problems to others to solve for us, we shall some day be confronted with a great problem and lack the understanding of how to grapple with it.

And in that time there will be no one to help us, and we shall meet with a failure that may change for the worse the course of our lives.

Most of us will do anything rather than think, for thinking is labor of the hardest kind.

But it is the sort of labor that means development, that enables us to use our minds for our own advancement, that makes us resourceful and independent and not afraid of tackling whatever comes along.

There are small differences between the outsides of our heads. There are tremendous differences between the insides of them. And those of us who have learned to think have developed machines which steadily and industriously through the years will work for our prosperity and our happiness. But those whose thoughts are second hand wonder why they never arrive.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

IN SLUMBERLAND

ONLY a relatively small number of the 1,700,00'000 inhabitants of this world are really mentally awake, capable of fitting their way through the labyrinthal professional and business avenues to a place of secure independence.

When the long shadows cross their paths and they discover to their dismay that the western sky is darkening, they rub their sleepy eyes and ruefully regret the years they have misspent in groping from pillar to post without worthy accomplishment.

They were in slumberland when the church bells rang of a Sunday morning; they were in slumberland when in the brilliantly illuminated ballrooms they danced to luring music with fair partners till the east was rosy and another day came gleaming over the gorgeous hilltops and smiled benignly on pale faces and broken promises.

They wasted drifting days which drifted into wasted years.

Again and again they rubbed their melancholy eyes and saw in their last supine effort to reclaim themselves that they were on the long, boulevard of old age, with forty or fifty years behind them.

Somewhere were, even at that late hour in life who managed to turn about, pull themselves together and snatch themselves from precarious positions, but the numbers were small, for their strokes were light and their old habits were strong and hard to break.

They lacked the staying power and the flexibility of youth.

So has wagged the world and so it will ever wag until the crack of doom.

If you wish to pick success, plant your orchard while in the full vigor of life so that you may gather the fruit and enjoy it while your senses of appreciation are still keen and your faculties yet alert.

Make friends, but do your own digging, your own pruning and your own watering. If your friends scoff at your industry, dig all the harder, think harder and keep at your work in heat and cold.

Seek the counsel of those who came here before you, your father and mother, for they know where your feet are likely to slip and your judgment is liable to err.

Do these things without turning either to the right or the left and nothing save death can stop you in the ultimate realization of your fondest dreams, and the fine achievements of which you are capable.

Erskine Dale, Pioneer

By John Fox, Jr.

Illustrated by R. H. Livingstone

"Now!" said Erskine sharply, and Grey's blade flew from his hand and lay like a streak of silver on the dewy grass. Grey rushed for it.

"I—I—you!" he raged, and wheeled furiously—patience, honor, and caution quite gone—and they fought now in deadly silence. Ephraim saw the British officer appear in the hall and walk unsteadily down the steps as though he were coming down the path, but he darted open his lips. There was the sound of voices, and it was evident that the game had ended in a quarrel and the players were coming up the river bank toward them. Erskine heard, but if Grey did he at first gave no sign—he was too much concerned with the death that faced him. Suddenly Erskine knew that Grey had learnt, for the fear in his face gave way to a diabolic grin of triumph and he lashed suddenly into defense—if he could protect himself only a little longer! Erskine had delayed the finishing stroke too long and he must make it now. Grey gave way step by step—parrying only. The blades flashed like tiny bits of lightning. Erskine's face, grim and inexorable, brought the sick fear back into Grey's, and Erskine saw his enemy's lips open. He lunged then, his blade went true, sank to the hilt, and Grey's warped soul started on its way with a craven cry for help. Erskine sprang back into the shadows and snatched the pistol from Ephraim's hand.

"Get out of the way now. Tell them I did it."

Once he looked back. He saw Barbara at the hall door with old mammy behind her. With a running leap he vaulted the hedge, and, hidden in the bushes, Ephraim heard Firefly's hoofs beating ever more faintly the sandy road.

CHAPTER XVIII

Yorktown broke the British heart, and General Dale, still weak from wounds, went home to Red Oaks. It was not long before, with gentle inquiry, he had pieced out the full story of Barbara and Erskine and Dave Grey, and wisely he waited his chance with each phase of the situation. Frankly he told her first of Grey's dark treachery, and the girl listened with horrified silence, for she would as soon have distrusted that beloved father as the heavenly Father in her prayers. She left him when he finished the story and he let her go without another word. All day she was in her room and at sunset she gave him her answer, for she came to him dressed in white, knelt by his chair, and put her head in his lap. And there was a nod in her hair.

"I have never understood about myself and—and that man," she said "and I never will."

"I do," said the general gently, "and I understand you through my sister as she was so like you. Erskine's father was as indignant as Harry is now, and I am trying to act toward you as my father did toward her." The girl pressed her lips to one of his hands.

"I think I'd better tell you the whole story now," said General Dale, and he told of Erskine's father, his wildness and his wanderings, his marriage, and the capture of his wife and the little son by the Indians, all of which she knew, and the girl wondered why he should be telling her again. The general paused.

"You know Erskine's mother was not killed. He found her." The girl looked up amazed and incredulous.

"Yes," he went on, "the white woman whom he found in the Indian village was his mother."

"Father!" She lifted her head quickly, leaned back with hands caught tight in front of her, looked up into his face—her own as crimsoning and paling as she took in the full meaning of it all. Her eyes dropped.

"Then," she said slowly, "that Indian girl—Early Morn—is his half-sister. Oh, oh!" A great pity flooded her heart and eyes. "Why didn't Erskine take them away from the Indians?"

"His mother wouldn't leave them." And Barbara understood.

"Poor Erskine!" she whispered, and her tears came. Her father leaned back and for a moment closed his eyes.

"There is more," he said finally. "Erskine's father was the eldest brother—and Red Oaks—"

The girl spoke to her feet, startle-agonized, shamed: "Belongs to Erskine," she finished with her face in her hands. "God pity me," she whispered, "I drove him from his own home."

"No," said the old general with a gentle smile. He was driving the barb deep, but sooner or later it had to be done.

"Look here!" He pulled an old piece of paper from his pocket and handed it to her. Her wide eyes fell upon a rude boyish scrawl and a rude picture of a bullet pierced by an arrow:

"I make me laugh. I have no use. I give hole dam plantashun Barbara."

"Oh!" gasped the girl and then—"where is he?"

"Waiting at Williamstone to get his discharge." She rushed swiftly down the steps, calling:

"Ephraim! Ephraim!"

And ten minutes later the happy, grinning Ephraim, mounted on the thoroughbred, was speeding ahead of a whirlwind of dust with a little-scented note in his battered shoutch hat:

"You said you would come whenever I wanted you. I want you to come now. BARBARA."

The girl would not go to bed, and the old general from his window saw her like some white spirit of the night motionless on the porch. And there through the long hours she sat. Once she rose and started down the green path toward the sundial, moving slowly through the flowers and moonlight until she was opposite a giant magnolia. Where the shadow of it touched the light on the grass, she had last seen Grey's white face and scarlet breast. With a shudder she turned back. The night whitened. A catbird started the morning chorus. The dawn came and with it Ephraim. The girl waited while she was. Ephraim took off his battered hat.

"Marse Erskine done gone, Miss Barbary," he said breakenly. "He done gone two days."

The girl said nothing, and there the old general found her still motionless—the torn bits of Erskine's scrawling deed scattered about her feet.

CHAPTER XIX

On the summit of Cumberland gap Erskine Dale fired Firefly to the east and looked his last on the forests that swept unbroken back to the river James. It was all over for him back there, and he turned to the wilder depths, those endless leagues of shadowy woodlands, that he would never leave again.

At Boonesborough he learned from the old ferryman that, while the war might be coming to an end in Virginia, it was raging worse than ever in Kentucky. There had been bloody Indian forays, bloody white reprisals, fierce private wars, and even Then the whole border was in a flame. Forts had been pushed westward even beyond Lexington, and 1782 had been Kentucky's year of blood. Erskine pushed on, and never grew his hopelessness. The British had drawn all the savages of the Northwest into the war. As soon as the snow was off the ground the forays had begun. Houses were stolen, cabins burned, and women and children were carried off captive. The pioneers had been confined to their stockaded forts, and only small bands of riflemen sallied out to patrol the country. Old Jerome Sanders' fort was deserted. Old Jerome had been killed. Twenty-three widows were at Harrodsburg filing the claims of dead husbands, and among them were Polly Conrad and Honor Sanders. The people were expecting an attack in great force from the Indians led by the British. At the Blue Licks there had been a successful ambush by the Indians and the whites had lost half their number, among them many brave men and natural feeders of the settlements. Captain Clark was at the mouth of Licking river and about to set out on an expedition and needed men.

Erskine, sure of a welcome, joined him and again rode forth with Clark through the northern wilderness, and this time a thousand mounted riflemen followed them. Clark had been stirred at last from his lethargy by the tragedy of the Blue Licks and his expedition was one of reprisal and revenge; and it was to be the last. The time was autumn and the corn was ripe. The triumphant savages rested in their villages unsuspecting and unafraid, and Clark fell upon them like a whirlwind. Taken by surprise, and startled and disheartened by such evidence of the quick vengeance in the beaten whites, the Indians of every village fled at their approach, and Clark put the torch not only to cabin and wigwam but to the fields of standing corn. As winter was coming on, this would be a sad blow, as Clark intended, to the savages.

Erskine had told the big chief of his mother, and every man knew the story and was on guard that she should come to no harm. A captured Shawnee told them that the Shawnees had got word that the whites were coming, and their women and old men had fled or were fleeing, all, except in a village he had just left—he paused and pointed toward the east where a few wisps of smoke were rising. Erskine turned: "Do you know Kahtoo?"

"He is in that village."

Erskine hesitated: "And the white woman—Gray Dove?"

"She, too, is there."

"And Early Morn?"

"Yes," grunted the savage.

"What does he say?" asked Clark.

"There is a white woman and her daughter in a village, there," said Erskine, pointing in the direction of the smoke.

Clark's voice was announcing the fact to his men. Hastily he selected twenty. "See that no harm comes to them," he cried, and dashed forward. Erskine in advance saw Black Wolf and a few bucks covering the retreat of some fleeing women. They made a feeble resistance of a volley and they too turned to flee. A white woman emerged from a tent and with great dignity stood, peering with dim eyes. To Clark's amazement Erskine rushed forward and took her in his arms. A moment later Erskine cried:

"My sister, where is she?"

The white woman's trembling lips opened, but before she could answer, a harsh, angry voice broke in haughtily, and Erskine turned to see Black Wolf stalking in, a prisoner between two stalwart woodsmen.

"Early Morn is Black Wolf's squaw. She is gone—" He waved one hand toward the forest.

The insolence of the savage angered Clark, and not understanding what he said, he asked gruffly:

"Who is this fellow?"

"He is the husband of my half-sister," answered Erskine gravely.

Clark looked dazed and uncomprehending:

"And that woman?"

"My mother," said Erskine gently. "Good God!" breathed Clark. He turned quickly and waved the open-mouthed woodsmen away, and Erskine and his mother were left alone.

feeble voice called from a tent near by.

"Old Kahtoo!" said Erskine's mother. "He is dying and he talks of nothing but you—go to him!" And Erskine went. The old man lay trembling with palsy on a buffalo-robe, but the incredible spirit in his wasted body was still burning in his eyes.

"My son," said he, "I know your voice. I said I should not die until I had seen you again. It is well . . . it is well," he repeated, and wearily his eyes closed. And thus Erskine knew it would be.

CHAPTER XX

That winter Erskine made his clearing on the land that Dave Yandell had picked out for him, and in the spring of it threw up a rude log hut in which to house his mother, for in remembrance of her made him believe that she would prefer to live alone. He told his plans to none.

In the early spring, when he brought his mother home, she said that Black Wolf had escaped and gone back into the wilderness—that Early Morn had gone with him. His mother seemed ill and unhappy. Erskine not knowing that Barbara was on her way to find him, started on a hunting-trip. In a few days Barbara arrived and found his mother unable to leave her bed, and Lydia Noe sitting beside her. Harry had just been there to say good-by before going to Virginia.

Barbara was dismayed by Erskine's absence and his mother's look of suffering and extreme weakness, and the touch of her cold fingers. There was no way of reaching her son, she said —he did not know of her illness. Barbara told her of Erskine's giving her his inheritance, and that she had come to return it. Meanwhile Erskine, astounded by his mother's sad face, had turned homeward. To his bewilderment, he found Barbara at his mother's bedside. A glance at their faces told him that death was near. His mother held out her hand to him while still holding Barbara's. As in a dream, he bent over to kiss her, and with a last effort she joined their hands, clasping both. A great peace transformed her face as she slowly looked at Barbara and then up at Erskine. With a sigh her head sank lower, and her lovely dimming eyes passed into the final dark.

Two days later they were married. The woodsmen, old friends of Erskine's, were awed by Barbara's daintiness, and there were none of the rude jests they usually flung back and forth. With hearty handshakes they said good-by and disappeared into the mighty forest. In the silence that fell Erskine spoke of the life before them, of its hardships and dangers, and then of the safety and comfort of Virginia. Barbara smiled:

"You choose the wilderness, and your choice is mine. We will leave the name choice so . . ." She flushed suddenly and bent her head.

"To those who come after us," finished Erskine.

MORE GARBAGE AND ASHES

Our attention is attracted by the article appearing in your last issue signed "Booster" and opposing the municipal collection of garbage and ashes.

It is difficult to conceive how anyone with a vestige of common sense or pride in the community can be found voicing such sentiments. Sanitation receives first consideration in most towns and everyone must know that garbage is a breeder of disease and should be disposed of promptly and with due consideration of the health of the community. This fact seems to be lost sight of by some in Palmyra. Uniform collection of garbage and ashes is a positive necessity and this argument about the expense is pure "hokum."

The average citizen now pays twice as much to have this done, as against what it would cost by contract. Fifty cents per week is an insignificant figure when it is divided among the thousand homes in Palmyra, and this will be the average cost, as there will be no need for an incinerator. It will be up to the contractor to dispose of it in his own way.

If there are people in town who desire to raise a few chickens and fancy other purpose, all well and good, but the majority of people are disgusted with the present system and want the matter given proper attention.

It is characteristic of Mr. Davies and his cohorts to dismiss such important subject with a wave of their hands and under the pretext of saving the town money. If Mr. Davies is so anxious to serve the community in this capacity, why didn't he see that the public tax was collected from the gas company for the several years he has served on the Township Committee, and why didn't he see that the people secured a real storm sewer for the $17,000 expended. Some these are big things and involve thousands. Mr. Davies' mind functions efficiently only when he deals with the petty items of the town.

As a political propagandist our Booster friend "aint"—that's all. The people of Palmyra want uniform collection of garbage and ashes and are going to have it.

THE WEEKLY NEWS.

Vol. 39, No. 10 PALMYRA, NEW JERSEY, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1922 PRICE FIVE CENTS

CLOSE FIGHTS DUE IN PRIMARY VOTE ON TUESDAY NEXT

Both Township and County Offices Objects of Close Contests Among Several Candidates

Several interesting contests in the township, county and State will be decided at the New Jersey primaries on Tuesday.

In Palmyra the contests are between Township Committeeman Davies, candidate for renomination, and J. Horace Finney, and between Township Assessor John W. Shade, also candidate for renomination, and William B. Colsey. These contests are Republican affairs, there being no Democratic candidates for these offices.

Mr. Davies has been a member of the Township Committee for several years and has been chairman since the death of the late James E. Russell.

Mr. Finney is prominently identified with most of the local fraternal societies and now is for the first time candidate for local office. He is a director of the Palmyra National Bank, president of the Wesleyan Bible Class and holds a fire position with a Philadelphia paper box manufacturing concern.

Mr. Davies has a responsible position with a Philadelphia bank and has long made township affairs his hobby. His friends point to experience and also put forth the argument that he has not "so many irons in the fire" as his opponent and consequently will be better able to attend to township duties.

Mr. Finney's friends argue it is time for new blood to be infused into the local governing body and declare that he would be more progressive and efficient than his opponent.

One point, however, that is expected to be considerable in Mr. Davies' favor is the fact that Mr. Finney resides in the same section of the town, the southeast, as the other two members of the committee. Mr. Davies lives on the north side of the railroad and the argument is made that the whole committee should not come from one part of the town.

In the Assessorship fight something of the same sort is expected to be heard. Mr. Colsey lives next door to Committeeman Harry E. Hess and is a younger man than his opponent.

Mr. Shade's friends point to his long experience in assessing and also to the fact that he has been a carpenter and builder all his life, thus being able to judge values, while Mr. Colsey is a broker.

Both fights are expected to be fairly close.

The big county fight is for the two Republican Freeholder nominations. One of the leading candidates is George W. Rogers, of Riverton, who seeks renomination. The other two are Charles R. Stout, of Florence, and Edward T. Haines, of Mount Holly.

Mr. Rogers is very well known and popular among his home people and also has a wide circle of friends throughout the county. He was formerly a shoe salesman but is now devoting all his time to the freeholder job. He has a record of performance for his home town was getting the State to take over Delanco avenue, laying a fine asphalt surface on part of it and smooth macadam on the remainder.

He is a native of Burlington county, having been born in Florence township 49 years ago. He was educated in the public schools and has had a successful business career. According to some of the other candidates Mr. Rogers is a pleasing manner and is a good mixer." All his home town people can testify to that.

Charlie Stout is one of the younger and more progressive figures in the political life of the county. He is first sprang into prominence upon winning a freeholdership in Florence ago and has rapidly forged to the front, having practically made the political leader of the county.

He is a fruit farmer by occupation but makes politics his big job in life and has shown himself to be very progressive and efficient. Roads are his chief interest and he is bent on further extending the fine system now being built.

Edward T. Haines is popular in the county and has a number of interior friendships. He served two years on the small board now in existence, but was defeated for a seat in the big board election. It was said at the time he refused to make certain political contributions that were demanded of him, and further, he told people about it, and left-over political resentment "ditched" him.

There is also a State Committee fight in both parties. Harry L. Knight, former Republican county boss, is making an effort to stage a comeback and land this job, which is of no importance politically, and he is opposed by County Clerk William H. Reeves, the candidate of the progressive and anti-Knight people.

On the Democratic ticket James Mercer, the present Democratic county leader, from Mount Holly, is fighting it out with William H. Vandegrift, of Burlington, and George E. Lippincott, of Moorestown.

The only State fight of importance is between Senator Frelinghuysen and George L. Record for the U. S. Senatorial nomination.

One of the numerous changes in the election laws made by the late Legislature, is that by which constables and pound-keepers are to be chosen by the municipal governing bodies hereafter, instead of being elected on the ballot at the November election.

Mrs. Joseph Schwartz, of Salem, O., sister-in-law of Maurice Schwartz, and Mrs. Fisher, of Sag Harbor, L. I., sister, were visitors here this week.

NEIGHBORS PROTEST BLACKSMITH SHOP

Chester Watson Has Arguments on His Side, Too, in Building New Plant

At the meeting of the Palmyra Township Committee Tuesday evening a number of property owners on Park avenue appeared to protest against the erection of a blacksmith shop at the corner of Broad street and Park avenue.

The property owners, among whom were Edward Rogers, of Riverside, Frank Bua and Frank Biatti, said that the district was being rapidly developed as a residential section, but that it would be much hampered by the presence of the shop which is being built by Chester Watson. They claimed that a deal for a number of lots already had been called off because of it.

Mr. Watson's side of the story is that the lot he is building upon was sold by the original owner some time back as the site of a laundry, and that his shop will be no more objectionable than a laundry, especially as he proposes to erect a nice building and keep it in orderly condition.

He has been forced to move from the present shop and needs a central location for his business. He offers to take any other suitable location that the protesting property owners can find, but cannot afford to go clear to the outskirts of town for business reasons.

The township committee agreed to interview Mr. Watson the next morning, but it was decided that any solution of the difficulty could be arrived at.

The firemen want the people to vote in November upon the question whether they approve the spending of $12,000 for a pumping apparatus and the Township Committee took steps to have the question put on the ballot.

The Chamber of Commerce asked the committee to block off south Broad from the new Cinnaminson bridge, having already arranged with the county to have the other side blocked off from Morgan to Leconey, for Old Home Day evening, and also requested the use of police headquarters for general headquarters, the providing of extra police and the cleaning up of the central part of town for the celebration. On Mr. Hartley's motion the requests were unanimously granted.

Lieut. Richter, commander of Post Rodgers, American Legion, demanded the reason why the wheels of the fire hand had been stopped at the join carnival and not at two successful carnivals given by other organizations.

Mr. Buchanan, police commissioner, replied that all three organizations had been notified not to run wheels, as it was against the law, but that the Legion had been the only one to obey the statute.

The latter, however, declared the Legion had been discriminated against and that he would bring up the matter before Judge Kalisch within two weeks. He thought Mr. Hinchman had not treated the Legion right on several occasions and demanded that this matter be made amends.

Mr. Hinchman said he had written a letter to the Post which he thought would straighten the matter out, but the Commander asserted only a public apology would suffice.

The contract for sidewalk work on Seventh street was awarded to Joseph Pierrgrosi.

BIBLE CLASSES IN BIG RALLY

"Pop" Jordon Addresses Big Crowd of Sunday School Workers in the Grove

More than five hundred members of Men's Bible Classes from Collingswood, Medford, Riverside, Camden, Delanco, Mount Holly, Mount Airy, Riverton and Palmyra attended the big rally held last Sunday afternoon in Society Hall grove.

The meeting was managed by officers of the local Bible classes, all of which were well represented, including the Lutheran, Moravian, Baptist, Episcopal, Presbyterian and Methodist.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Jacob "Pop" Jordon, of Prospect Park, Pa.

Mr. Jordon's subject was given as "Christian Citizenship." He drew much inspiration from the spirit of unity and cooperation as manifested in the meeting itself. Such gatherings, he said, would help keep the "pot" in Palmyra.

Mr. Jordon, who is a bricklayer during the week, has spent many years in religious study and often substitutes in pulpits of other ministers. He declared that he himself was a good example of the interdenominational, fraternal spirit, inasmuch as at different times in his life he had been identified with several different denominations.

Mr. Jordon's address was made especially effective by his command of homely poetry of the James Whitcomb Riley and Walt Whitman type, and his hearers were much affected by his rendering of "When a Hand is on your Shoulder in a Friendly Sort of Way" and "Let Me Live in a House by the Side of the Road and be a Friend to Man."

After the meeting, which marked the beginning of a series of such gatherings in different towns, there was a big automobile parade through the towns.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 24

REVIEW: THE EXILE AND THE RESTORATION

DEVOTIONAL READING—Ps. 46:1-5, 16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us: whereof we are glad. —Ps. 126:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Selected Stories Retold.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Restored His People.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC —Leaders in the Restoration of Israel.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Lessons From the Exile and Return.

Two methods of review may be employed to advantage.

1. Character Study. Assign the outstanding heroes of the quarter's lessons to members of the class and have them to report. This assignment must be made the week previous, e. g. Ezekiel, the prophet of God; Daniel, the statesman; Ezra, the teacher of God's word, etc.

2. Summary of Contents. This is a good method at all times. It can be adapted to different grades. The following is a suggested method:

Lesson I. Before Ezekiel was commissioned as a prophet he was given a vision of the Almighty. After that he was given an experimental knowledge of God's word—he ate the book—digested and appropriated its contents. An experimental knowledge of God's word is essential.

Lesson II. Because Daniel besought the Lord he was able to make known the king's dream and interpret it. "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God (Jas. 1:5).

Lesson III. While Belshazzar and his lords were engaged in drunken revelry a mysterious hand recorded Divine judgment. There is a day coming when men shall be judged. Happy is the man who has fled to Christ, for to such there is no judgment (John 5:24).

Lesson IV. Daniel's sterling worth brought him to the front—he was elevated to be prime minister of the Persian empire. Moved by jealousy certain wicked men plotted his downfall. Because of a flawless record in business they trumped up a charge against him on the ground of his foreign religion. Though the king executed the foolish decree Daniel was delivered and his accusers were cast into the den of lions and destroyed.

Lesson V. Though Israel went into captivity as a chastisement of the Lord, in due time He recovered them. God's covenant and judgments are sure. He can move a heathen king to freely fulfill His own good pleasure and purpose.

Lesson VI. In the restoration of the people to their own land, the first thing necessary was the provision of a place for the worship of God. As soon as this work was begun, violent opposition was in evidence. That which God sets out to do shall be completed, though all hell oppose.

Lesson VII. Haman's wicked plot against the Jews was frustrated by Esther's shrewdness and courage. Those who plot against and hate God's covenant people shall be brought to destruction.

Lesson VIII. Through Zerubbabel the people were brought back and established in their own land, but they had gone far away from God. There was now need of a religious leader. Ezra was moved by the Spirit of God to lead them back to fellowship. Because Ezra sought the Lord his way was prospered. Success always comes to those who trust God.

Lesson IX. When Nehemiah heard of the distress of his brethren at Jerusalem, he took the matter to the Lord in prayer. Their sorrow and distress was his sorrow and distress. "I am afflicted, let him pray (Jas. 5:13)

Lesson X. When Nehemiah began the rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem he encountered violent opposition from without and from within. His faith in God moved him to go straight on with the work and he had the joy of seeing the work completed.

Lesson XI. The method used in bringing back the people to God was the word of God. Because God's word was made plain to the people they repented of their sins and rendered obedience to God.

Lesson XII. Malachi as an aid to Nehemiah in effecting reforms pointed out the sins of the people, viz.: Base ingratitude, a corrupt priesthood, mixed marriages, robbing God by withholding tithes, etc., pointing to a day of judgment when righteous retribution would be meted out to the wicked and rewards would be given to the faithful.

Beginning the Day.

If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me. For whosoever will save his life shall lose it and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it.

Sing With Grace in Your Hearts.

Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. —Colossians 3:16.

THIS IS A STUDEBAKER YEAR

TO HOLD RALLY DAY IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Opening of Fall Campaign to Be Staged this Sunday as Afternoon Sessions Begin

Vacation time is now over. The public schools of the community have taken up their work again. Sunday Schools have not been closed in most cases, but many members have been absent.

Now is the time for every member to rally to the fall and winter Sunday School work, and for this purpose next Sunday, September 24th, will be observed as "rally day" in most of the Sunday Schools of this vicinity.

It has become almost the universal custom in organized Sunday School work to set apart a special day, usually the last Sunday in September, as an occasion to rally the forces which may have become scattered during the vacation season, and with renewed enthusiasm to take up the plans for active work.

The schools which have put into use the International Graded Lesson system find Rally Day an appropriate occasion to make promotions from one grade or department to another, and new series of lessons are begun at this time, in this respect corresponding to the methods of our public schools.

In the case of our Sunday School this date also marks the beginning of the afternoon sessions, instead of the morning services held during the summer.

The schools of Calvary Presbyterian, Epworth Methodist, Central Baptist, and First Lutheran Churches unite in this call to their members to meet their accustomed places, and in this special invitation to those not already members to begin attendance at the school of their choice.

Many new folks have moved into the community who have not been attending any of the Sunday Schools, and this rally day will be an opportune time to get acquainted and enter into the work of one of the schools.

Efforts are being made in the various schools to have the greatest number of members and visitors on hand this rally day that ever attended the Sunday Schools. But mere numbers is not the main object—the important thing is for all to "get started" in the habit of regular attendance and interested in some one of the schools.

G. O. P. WOMEN RALLY

Frelinghuysen and Runyon Endorsed at Mount Holly Meeting

The Republican Women of Burlington County gave a rousing demonstration of their approval and support of Senator Runyon and Senator Frelinghuysen in a luncheon held in St. Andrews parish house, Mount Holly, on the 15th. The hall was crowded and women were turned away. Representative women leaders in the W. C. T. U., Federation of Women's Clubs, Y. W. C. A., County Granges, County Educational Committees, County Republican Committees, gave definite and logical reason for supporting their candidates. The campaigning of the next few weeks will be followed up with the same enthusiasm and definiteness. Burlington County women are determined to carry their county for Senator Runyon as Governor, and Senator Frelinghuysen as U. S. Senator.

MIKE IS IN AGAIN

With Wife and Guest is Fined After Hooch Party

The home of Mike Krouse, near Five Points, which was the scene of a "hooch" raid recently was also the scene of what was described by neighbors and police as a "hooch" party, which wound up in a brawl between Mike, his wife, Mary, and a visitor, Charles Major, Monday evening.

Neighbors complained to the Palmyra police and Chief Heck and Officer Wallace brought the three to the lockup.

At the hearing Tuesday morning before Justice Fichter, Mrs. Krouse, who displayed a bruised eye, denied they had been drinking bad whiskey. "Only soda water" she said.

The Squire fined the Krouses $5.00 and costs and let Major go with costs.

THE FRIENDLY PATH

By WALTER I. ROBINSON

"SOMEONE must do it."

This is a good thought to remember when one finds himself burdened with public service or other work for the benefit or happiness of his fellows. Though it may be exceedingly disconcerting to realize that one is sacrificing considerable through devoting much of his time to civic or philanthropic service which he should devote to his own business or profession, he should recognize that there is likely to come to him the pleasure of great satisfaction in the amount of good he does.

This is the position assumed by one of the most public spirited men we have ever known. Year in and year out for a quarter of a century this man has given a large proportion of his time to the work of formulating plans for a great park system, and in order to make a big city a more desirable place in which to live. Not being wealthy, the man is virtually dependent on the income from his profession.

Only recently it was our privilege to notify him that he had just had a new job added to his many tasks by being appointed a member of an important committee. He smiled one of his big faithful smiles which told of the big heart within his breast and declared:

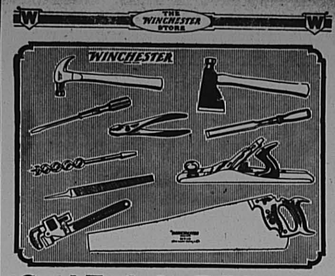

"That's fine. But, by Jove, don't you know I shouldn't mind if I'd get an appointment now and then which would mean a few five spots. Yet someone must do it or these essential improvements won't be done, so I might as well add a little more to my pack. Anyway no money could compensate for the happiness which I experience when I realize that I've helped even a little to make the city a better place in which to live."

Let us keep this sentiment fresh in our memories when the call comes to neglect our own affairs for the public good. If we do, we'll not only be better able to do a real service, but our pleasure will exceed our regrets. (© by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

"He Stands for the Better Things in Politics"

These words, used by a friend of William H. Reeves, who is candidate for a member of the State Republican Committee, tells the story in a nutshell. His unquestioned and unquestionable integrity of purpose and character will be his great asset in the battle which will be fought at the polls next Tuesday. The question of whether or not the political leadership of Harry Knight, which was reinstituted in the organization of the Republican County Committee last year shall be re-established. Independent men and women, who aim at the overthrow of one-man domination in county politics will find a conscientious and able exponent in William H. Reeves.

"He stands for the better things in politics."

In speaking before the Women's Club in Mount Holly last Monday night, Mr. Reeves said in part:

"I am a candidate for State Committee, not by my choice, but through circumstances, which were produced through my efforts to see civic harmony in the party.

"The position of chairman is important. It formulates party policies and makes recommendation for appointments.

"If elected I shall stand for the highest qualifications of all candidates. I have made no promises for appointments.

"As to my qualifications, I can but say, I would not be judged by any promises I may make to you, but by the life I have lived before you, which life is an open book, subject to inspection by all, and by which I am willing to be judged.

"In reference to the rumors that are afloat regarding my canvass, I court the fullest investigation.

"The verdict rests with you.

"I thank you."

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

BELLE

BELLE is one of the many feminin names which began existence a contraction and gained sturdy independence until it became a recognized appellative and is bestowed without reference to its prenix.

Since Belle signifies "both of Real," it is easily discernible that it is an offspring of Isabelle. In the day when Elizabeth of Thuinault married Philippe Auguste and suffered he name to be changed to Isabelle by th French, it is hardly likely that Bel was used, either as an endearment o a diminutive. But Isabelle became very popular in royal circles and th betrothed of Hugues de Lusignan, wh later married King John, brought Isa belle to England.

It was there that Belle came int existence and into consequent vogue Of all the contractions of Isabelle— of which Nib, Ibbet and Ib are a few examples—Belle proved the most popular and lasting.

Belle is a popular form in this country and is bestowed without reference to Isabelle. France recognizes no such contraction, but Spain has an equivalent Bela.

The opal is the gem assigned to Belle. It will prove a talisman against evil, danger, and disease when worn by her. The evil designs of the idolic, which superstition claims is imprisoned in the stone, will be powerless against her. To dream of an opal means success. Friday is Belle's lucky day and 4 her lucky number. The chrysanthemum is her lucky flower.

KIDDIES SIX
By Will M. Maupin

RELICS

A LITTLE box with tear-stained lid

Paints memory faces o'er the room,
I leave the world of toil and care,
And seated in the old armchair,
I ope the lid and fondly gaze
Upon the things of other days.

A little box with tear-stained lid
Beneath which treasured things are hid.
A little shoe out at the toe—
A baby boy, I love you so—
A tiny cap with turned brim
That eloquently speaks of him—
These are the treasures laid away
To gaze upon at close of day.

A little box with tear-stained lid
Beneath which treasured things are hid.
A broken top, a toy, a whip,
A crippled ox from Noah's ship;
A kitty socking—all the wool
That men secure by work, or stealth,
Would not suffice to buy from me
One thing I ope the lid to see.

A little box with tear-stained lid
Beneath which love-worn things are hid.
As long as Death's angel roams
To lay a blight on happy homes,
Kept many a box will hide away
The relics of a happier day;
And when the evening's echoes call
Upon their lids hot tears will fall.

WHY ?
DOES A GLOWWORM GLOW

THE glowworm, or "lightning bug" as the species found in the United States is generally known, is supplied with its tiny lantern in order to indicate the location of the female insect.

In the family of glowworms, found principally in England, the male is equipped with wings, while the female resembles a caterpillar and remains upon the ground. To permit her to attract her mate and also to point the way to their home, the female has been provided with a pale greenish light. At night, when the male is flying around in the air, the female flashes her miniature lantern as a sort of guiding star to prevent his getting lost.

Members of the same species of beetle are also common in this country, where they are called "fire-flies" or "lightning bugs." In the American variety, however, both sexes are equipped with wings, but the female is the only one who carries a light—and for the same reason as the glowworm, proper—to attract the attention of the male. The "glow" is only another manifestation of nature's continual attempt to make the female of the species attractive to the male.

"Some More Ashes and Garbage"

Is the caption of last week's issue of The Weekly News where REAL ROOSTER criticizes the attitude taken by Booster regarding the Municipal collection of garbage and ashes.

Let us before we go further, investigate as to whether Booster or Real Booster have done the most for Palmyra, and as to who feels the most interested in the things which are for the benefit of the entire community and not those which are represented by the desires of a chosen few.

Mr. Real Booster says that garbage is a breeder of disease, and should be disposed of promptly, but further along he says that it will be up to the man who collects the garbage to dispose of it as he sees fit or in his own way. This is funny. Suppose Mr. Garbage Collector should take the garbage down and dump it in the river. Suppose Mr. Collector should take it down to the lower end of the town and attempt to dispose of it there, by burning it without an incinerator. Where would these people get off? Does Mr. Real Booster consider that the wishes of these people are as important as those of us who live in the upper end of the town? I think that Mr. Real Booster does not consider these things when he says we do not need an incinerator.

Mr. Real Booster does not say anything about the use which we will have for the ashes (if we are fortunate enough to have any this year) to use in filling in the waste wells, which will be "For Sale or Rent" about the first of the New Year. Shall we have our ashes hauled away, and have someone else haul them back to fill up the wells?

Mr. Real Booster says that the people of the town are disgusted with the present arrangement, and want uniform collection of garbage and ashes. How does Mr. Real Booster know that the majority of the people want an increase in taxes, to take care of this?

I would like to give Mr. Real Booster a Tip. Go to the Township Committee and ask them to pass a resolution putting this on the ballot for the November election, making the garbage and ashes separate items, and in this way we will have a real expression of opinion.

In regards to the storm sewer, I would like to say that, not being an engineer, and believing that Mr. Real Booster does not know much about this either, we will have to gloss over this, and say that we don't know anything about it, although, it does seem to carry off the water where it was placed and we think it was placed there for that purpose.

Mr. Real Booster thinks we are playing politics. Does he not sound like he had an axe to grind with the Township Committee, and does it not seem that he would like to elect some one? I wonder who it is.

Mr. Real Booster no doubt has a great interest in Palmyra. But rather than have municipal ash collection, I would like to have municipal grass cutters, because I can carry out the ashes in the winter, but it is very hot cutting grass in the summer.

BOOSTER

Legend of Wandering Jew.

The wandering Jew was a legendary personage condemned to wander upon the earth until the second coming of Christ, for reviling the Savior while on his way to Calvary. Some say he was a porter in the service of Pontius Pilate, named Cartaphilus; but others identify him with Ahasuerus, a cobbler on whose doorstep Christ attempted to rest when overcome with the weight of the cross. Tradition has it that Ahasuerus drove the Savior from his door with curses, whereupon Jesus, calmly replied: "I truly am going; but thou shalt wander over the earth until I return." Southey's "Curse of Kehama," Croly's "Salathiel," and the Sue's "Le Juif Errant" make use of this legend, although not in its original form.—Kansas City Star.

HOW PYGMIES GET BANANAS

Hark Green Bunch With Arrows, Take it When Ripe and Leave Meat in Payment.

The pygmies in Central Africa take their abode near the village of a big chief, where banana plantations abound, from which they may grow when they please. They have two methods of doing this. One is as follows:

A pigmy will mark out a bunch of bananas in a plantation by shooting an arrow into the stalk. The arrow signifies that the pygmy desires that particular bunch when it is sufficiently ripe. The owner of the plantation stands in such fear of the pygmy's vengeance that he never dreams of removing the fruit or the arrow, but leaves both to be claimed by the awe-inspiring dwarf.

By the other method, the pygmy buys the bananas, he fixing the price and paying for it in that which his flat makes currency. On returning home from a day's hunting, with several pieces of meat wrapped in grass or leaves, he goes to a plantation, selects several bunches of bananas, sticks up in the ones cuts off the branches, and in payment, affixes one of the small packets of meat to the stem by a wooden skewer. He has not, in his view, stolen the bananas—he has bought them!

Where Every Bride is Measured.

The "measuring of the bride" follows every marriage ceremony performed in the English town of Royden. The reason is that about three hundred years ago the lord of the manor bequeathed the sum of $5,000, the interest from which was to be voted annually to provide dowries for four brides. Under the terms of the bequest, the money has to be divided among the youngest, the eldest, the shortest and the tallest brides married during the course of each year in the parish church. The official records determine who are the youngest and the eldest, but to decide the shortest and tallest, each bride is required to remove her shoes and let down her hair and be measured by the officiating minister.

Auto Hemic Therapy Transforms Into New Woman of Her

"Before placing myself under the care of Dr. Greiss I was completely run down. I suffered from falling spells and vertigo. I was also extremely nervous and easily excited. My appetite was poor and I suffered from indigestion. After a few treatments I felt better and whenever it threatened or occurred, I suffered from it in a very mild form. I have gained seven lbs my weight now is 140 lbs. Since taking Auto Hemic Treatments, I feel like a new born soul Dr. Greiss has made a new woman of me. All my pains have disappeared and my appetite is excellent. Before taking the treatments I did not sleep more than a few hours each night, but now I sleep all the period of the day. Now I go about and enjoy as long as I care to. I feel that I cannot say enough in praise of the treatments as Dr. Greiss and the wonderful Auto Hemic Treatment."

TWILIGHT TEAMS ARE BEATEN TWICE

P. O.'s Lose to Moorestown and Baptists Are Beaten by All Stars

The twilight league staged a double header at The Field Club grounds last Saturday. The first game was between Moorestown and the local P. O. S. of A., Moorestown winning by the score of 7 to 5. In the second game, the Baptists were beaten by the All Stars by the score of 3 to 1 in nine innings.

In the first game Moorestown got off to a four-run lead in the first inning. Shea, first man up, flied out. This was followed by five hits off of Orcutt's left hand shoots—four of which counted for runs. All nine men on the Moorestown team faced Leddy in this inning. The locals went out in order in their half inning. In the second inning they managed to get a couple of men on through the generosity of the Moorestown third baseman, but could not reach the scoring station. The second was also void for Moorestown.

In the third, however, Moorestown scored two runs on a hit, and two errors by Truman. The locals countered, and scored two runs in this inning themselves. They also scored two runs in the fourth, and one in the fifth, while Moorestown was being put out in order. In the sixth and seventh the locals failed to score, Moorestown scoring one run in the sixth inning. Notwithstanding, twelve hits were gleaned off Orcutt's offering, he struck out six men to four by Bowman, the visiting shortstop. Donaghy and Wallace got four of the five hits allowed by Moorestown, each having two. The other hit was made by Reeves.

As soon as the game was called in the seventh inning, President Patterson presented the cup to Clinton Gibbon for the Baptist team, and also the one which The Field Club donated for the team finishing second position, to Leslie Reeves, for the P. O. S. of A.

As soon as the field was cleared, the Baptists got into action with the All Stars. The All Stars scored two runs in the first inning, after two were down, Hullings getting on while Rus Gibbon was retiring Hubbs at second. Hullings stole second, and Flynn reached first on an error by Rush. This brought "Pat" Steedle up, who came through with a single, scoring on hits by Hubbs and Flynn. With two down, Hubbs, having been advanced to third, Hardy wild-pitched him home.

In the subsequent innings, the All Stars went out in order. In the fifth inning, the Baptists managed to score one run on a hit by Freed, who stole second, and later scored, while Hardy was being thrown out going to third. McGinley pitched the first four innings for the All Stars, during which he allowed five hits, and in the last five innings, which were pitched by Orcutt, only three hits were scored, one of which was a two-bagger.

Hardy pitched a nice game for the Baptists, but the breaks were against him. Clint Gibbon had a wonderful opportunity to score in the second inning, but instead of sliding, he tried to jump over "Pat" Steedle's head, Hubb's throw beating Gibby to the plate. Buddy Freed scored the only run for the Baptists, and also had two of the eight hits allowed by McGinley and Orcutt. Hubbs had three hits out of four times up for the All Stars off Hardy, Flynn and Steedle each two, while Donaghy and Orcutt each had one hit. Eight hits in all were made off Hardy's offerings.

The series between Moorestown and the local P. O. S. of A. now stands even up, and the deciding game will be played off this Saturday, September 23rd. The locals are all prepared to give Moorestown a tussel for the honor of winning the "rubber." A good game is promised the fans.

The game between the Twin City champions and The Field Club will probably be played the first Saturday in October.

There will be a meeting of the Twin City twilight base ball league on Friday, the 22d, at The Field Club rooms at which all officers and directors are requested to be present.

YOUR HAND How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE FINGER NAILS

OCCASIONALLY we find finger nails that are long, thin and curved or ribbed. These tell us something of the physical constitution of the owner. He or she is likely to have tendencies toward diseases of the head, throat or bronchial tubes. Nails that are seen, upon observation, to be unusually thick, bent and long, are held to indicate a nature inclined to cruelty and unfaithfulness in love.

If the nails are square and very short, we may read therein a tendency toward disease of the heart. This must be confirmed, naturally, by close inspection of the line of the heart.

Nails that are brittle and inclined to break easily are a sign of ill health and nervous weakness.

There are some nails which narrow very much at the base, coming sometimes to a point, or nearly to one. If they also bend over the ends of the fingers, we may read in them a sign of spinal trouble, past, present or future.

SPONGE CAKE.—Take four eggs one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the same of flour, one-half cupful of cold water and flavoring to taste. Beat the yolks until thick, add cold water and beat again until thick; sift the sugar several times, add it to the yolks, then the flour alternately with the whites, the flour having been sifted four times, three times after it is measured. Bake very slowly at first. Use a tube pan. The cake should, when properly made and baked, be the size of an eleven-egg angel food.

ROMANCE OF WORDS

"CONFETTI."

SIGNIFYING literally "confectionery," this Italian word was originally applied to the small hard bon-bons formerly thrown during the carnival days in Rome, Naples and other cities in the southern section of Europe. These candies are known as coriandoli, and the term "confetti" is applied to the cheaper and more popular substitutes—hard pellets about the size of a hailstone which are carried in bags by the masked revellers and thrown from the ladies.

The custom of throwing confetti was introduced into France several centuries ago, and was especially popular at the fetes of Mi-Careme (Mid-Lent) and Mardi-Gras (Shrove Tuesday). But the French, possibly because they took their pleasure less seriously than the Italians, substituted bits of gaily colored paper for the hard pebbles or candies, and when the custom was introduced into the United States by the French settlers of Louisiana and other sections, confetti was understood to mean only the scraps of paper.

The amount of confetti used in Paris is apparent from an account of one of the Mardi-Gras celebrations, when it was estimated by one of the local newspapers that 1,500,000 pounds were sold during the three days preceding Ash Wednesday. At an average price of twenty cents a pound, some $300,000 was spent upon this form of entertainment alone. (Copyright by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

American Legion Auxiliary Notes

Greetings to the Legion Auxiliary and all those eligible to join this privileged body of women. Our Fall work begins Tuesday evening, September 26, at 8 o'clock sharp. Your delegates have returned from Lake Hopatcong, filled with deep earnestness and a throbbing desire to instill in the Home Unit the same enthusiasm and active interest displayed by the organization at the head of the Department of New Jersey. Our reports will be ready to be submitted to the Unit at that meeting.

We had the rare privilege of listening to an address by Mrs. Hobart, the National President, also one by Mr. Pattison, American Legion department chairman of hospitalization, Commander Sears and other renowned men. May we quote a few pithy sentences from some of these speakers:

"The hospitalization work is necessarily not a work of achievement, but of progress, and that depends upon the impetus behind the work." The work of the Auxiliary is more essential now than back in '17 when you rolled bandages." Then, everyone worked, fired by a spirit of patriotism, actuated high by the need of victory to protect the ideals of our glorious country. Now the crying need is for a smaller number—but, oh! the terrible physical suffering, through destitution the influence of economic strain on a mind and body just at the breaking point, and there are only those vitally interested in that struggle—the number limited to mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of Legionnaires—to carry on. Many ex-service men will die in the next few years, this fact based upon the degree of illness at the present time. What is the Auxiliary of Post Rodgers going to do to help solve the tremendous problems that confront the Auxiliary as a whole? There is a new bureau created for the care of Veterans' orphans. Let us be among the first to adopt an American child. Let us never be slackers when the call comes to help ex-service men and their families.

And now, for things of lighter vein. You no doubt have heard of the 40 Winnies and 8 chevaux. But do you know of the 8 chapeaux and 40 femmes? Think of it! Only 8 hats for 40 women! Can you imagine a more distressing, a sadder situation? We are overcome! Be with us next Tuesday evening. We shall try to tell you then. All members in good standing are urged to join the 8 and 40. Remember the date of meeting has been changed from the third Thursday to the last Tuesday. We have much business to transact. The Auxiliary card party for the benefit of the Legion comes in October. Mrs. Frank Mathews, Sr., is the place of Mrs. Morgan, has things moving in full swing, but success depends on individual effort. Boost, boost, boost, make it a real year.

American Legion Auxiliary.

You Can't Get Good Oats Now

The quality of this year's oat crop is away below a good grade. Reports from all sections show this year's oats average weight is 19 to 25 pounds to the bushel. There is too much "wood" and not enough "meat" in the light oats. A horse or mule cannot eat more than 20 or 25 pounds of grain a day. Of the 1921 oat crop, that would be a bushel or 28 pounds average "field run" oats. Five bushels of oats are now big as a feather bed.

Horse Feeders are consequently on the look out for better feed for their horses and mules. You can't get good heavy oats now.

But You Can Get O-Molene

The manufacturers of Purina O-Molene have scoured the country for good heavy oats and this is the kind that are going into O-Molene.

Just come in and examine the big, fat, meaty kernels. You can feed one-third less O-Molene by weight than oats. Your mules and horses will do more work and keep in the pink of condition. It costs no more to use than ordinary feed.

Ask us about it today.

PALMYRA, N. J.

Republican Candidate for Freeholder

PRIMARY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1922

Ordered and paid for by George W. Rogers

An Open Letter to the Republican Voters of Burlington County:

I am taking this means of asking your approval of my candidacy for the State Committee.

You will select your representative in the State organization at the primary election next Tuesday. He will be your spokesman in the State Committee for the next three years. He should keep in touch with party sentiment and reflect the wishes of all the Republicans in his district, so far as that is humanly possible. The State Committeeman is not a boss; he should not use his position to further his own interests. If you elect me I pledge my honest effort to represent you truly and to speak for you as you would have me speak. I would regard myself as the party's servant—not its master. I would do my utmost to further the best interests of the Republican party, and I would endeavor to adjust factional difficulties to the end that we may all present a united front to the common enemy when the real battle is fought on November 6.

May I ask you to judge my future course by my official record as your County Clerk during the past three years, and as Chairman of the County Committee for a year? I am willing to stand or fall according to your judgment as to how I have fulfilled the trust reposed in me.

I beg to emphasize the vital importance of the Primary Election to be held next TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26. Every Republican, man or woman, who is qualified to vote, should go to the polls on that day. It is the duty of all citizens.

Let us not surrender the popular control of the Republican party's affairs in Burlington county—won through so great a victory for the people a year ago.

RECORD SLOWING UP IN HIS FIGHT

Advantages All to Frelinghuysen in the Final Week Before the Primaries.

GAINS NEW SUPPORTERS

President Hibben of Princeton and Thomas A. Edison Issued Strong Statements Advocating Senator's Re-election—Record's Regularity Is Attacked.

Remember the Primaries Are September 26th

"Republican voters owe a duty to themselves and to their state on next Tuesday," says Congressman Frank F. Patterson, Jr., campaign manager for Senator Frelinghuysen, in a last word statement, prior to the primaries on the 26th of this month. "That is to vote without fail in the primaries for Senator Frelinghuysen and his progressive and constructive policies against the radical and destructive appeals to prejudice which are the political capital of his opponent, George L. Record.

"Mr. Record is not a Republican. During his political career he has been a Democrat, a Republican, a Progressive, a Bull Mooser, a member of the New Idea party, and one of the founders of the Committee of Forty-eight. He formally left the Republican party when President Harding was nominated and the only intimation that Republicans of New Jersey had that he had returned to it, was when he announced his candidacy for nomination to the United States senate."

The final week before the primaries found the fight for the Republican nomination for United States senator intensified with daily additions to the strength of the incumbent, Senator Frelinghuysen, as George L. Record's candidacy entered out.

Mr. Record, although continuing to fire broadsides of questions at his opponent, maintained an obdurate silence on the question asked him by Edgar A Knapp, of Elizabeth, several weeks ago. Mr. Knapp, who is well known in the Republican party and who was for many years a leader in the Progressive wing of the party in New Jersey, in a letter to Mr. Record recently put this question to him:

"If Senator Frelinghuysen wins the nomination at the forthcoming Republican primaries for the United States senatorship, will you abide by the choice of the people so expressed and support him for re-election?"

Up to date Mr. Record had made no reply to this letter and had not even acknowledged its receipt. Commenting on Mr. Record's silence, Mr. Knapp in a statement said:

Record's Silence Interpreted

"Mr. Record's silence can have but one meaning, and that is, that he will not support the nominee of the Republican party for United States senatorship unless that nominee accepts to him himself. It apparently is justification for the many doubts that have been cast on Mr. Record's title to Republicanism which have arisen in the course of his variegated political career—a career that has caused him some half dozen times to unsuccessfully seek election at the hands of New Jersey voters under three party emblems.

As the campaign waxed, additions to the ranks of Frelinghuysen supporters were reported daily. In most distinguished of whom were Dr. David Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, and Thomas A. Edison.

Mr. Edison, who had expressed a desire some time ago to make an expression that would evidence his approval as a citizen of New Jersey for the course which Senator Frelinghuysen has pursued in the senate, wrote briefly and to the point. His statement follows:

"I believe it to be to the best interests of all the people in New Jersey to have Joseph S. Frelinghuysen returned to the senate."

Dr. Hibben's Statement

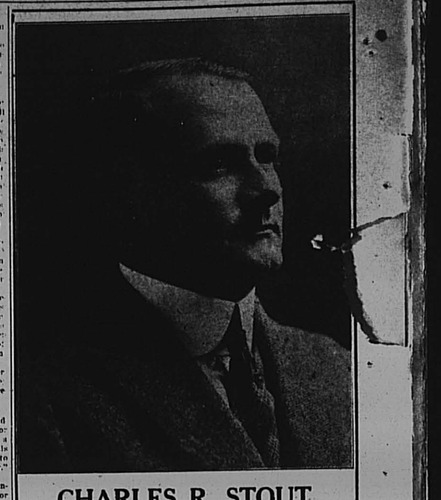

President Hibben in a statement advocating the nomination of Senator Frelinghuysen characterized him as a "representative who had proven his unquestioned integrity and devotion to the highest welfare of the country." Dr. Hibben's statement follows:

"I am very glad to state my opinion concerning the claims of Senator Frelinghuysen upon the people of New Jersey for re-election to the United States Senate. During the most trying period of our history he has proved, in his official capacity as representative of the State of New Jersey, his unquestioned integrity and devotion to the highest welfare of our country.

"While we are still confronted by the serious problems growing out of the war and the after-war conditions, a man of Senator Frelinghuysen's ability, character and patriotic devotion should be retained as a member of the United States Senate.

"I have heard that some of the Republican leaders in the state have rather complained that Senator Frelinghuysen has not given as much time and attention to his own candidacy in New Jersey as they would have wished.

"The fact that Senator Frelinghuysen is more concerned with his duties in Washington than with his own political fortunes is the strongest recommendation of the character of the man to the people of New Jersey."

Do you want to reduce the cost of living?

Do you want coal at half the price a ton, instead of fourteen dollars?

Do you want beef at lower prices?

Do you want steady work at good wages?

Do you want prosperity for the business man and farmer?

Then you must destroy the power of the great trusts and monopolies which own our basic natural resources and our railroads, and thereby control our business and political life.

There is no hope in Frelinghuysen. The monopolists are his friends and backers. As Senator he has persistently voted for their interests and refuses to explain his votes. He even voted to subject farm organizations to prosecution as criminal conspiracies. He offers no plan to improve conditions.

It's time for a new deal. The stand-patters and reactionaries have had their chance. They have failed. They must be driven out. The hope of America today is in the Progressive Republicans, in men of an entirely different type, with constructive ideas and the ability and courage to carry them out.

George L. Record is such a man. For twenty years he has been at the front in every fight to improve conditions in New Jersey. He has stuck to every measure he has advocated until it has become a law. The law to make the railroads pay taxes, the direct primary, the official blanket ballot, the corrupt practices act, and the public utility law are monuments to his common sense, courage and perseverance. Mr. Record has never stood for an unsound measure. He is able, resourceful and practical. At this time when we are faced with tremendous and pressing problems, George L. Record is the strongest and best equipped man New Jersey can send to the United States Senate, and will be a leader in the Senate from the day he enters it.

Vote for George L. Record at the Republican primaries on September 26th, at your usual polling place, open from seven in the morning till nine at night.

FINNEY AND SHADE WIN IN PRIMARY

The local primary in Palmyra brought mixed results.

Horace Finey and William B. Colsey had been teamed for the Republican nomination for Township Committee and Assessor respectively against Township Chairman John M. Davies and Assessor John W. Shade, who supported one another.

Finney won over Davies in one of the closest contests the town has known for years, his majority being but slightly more than 50. His running mate, however, was swamped by Shade, whose majority was around 400.

Both Mr. Davies and Mr. Finney received some Democratic votes and George Merrick received 21, giving him the nomination if he wants it.

The defeat of Davies means that the whole Township Committee next year will be composed of comparatively new men. Committeeman Hingham has served but two years and Committeeman Hartley but one.

Township Clerk Spencer and Collector Griscom were renominated without opposition.

The county committeemen elected are: first district (R) J. P. Saar, Rose Roberts; (D) Earl Cooper. Second district (R), Mary King, W. B. Colsey; (D) William McCardell, Julia Abdill. Third, (R) George Wimer, Mrs. Jennie Jenkins. Fourth (R) J. E. Lees, Mrs. Elizabeth English and Mrs. George Rogers received one vote each and could decide the honor between themselves.

Both Palmyra and Riverton gave a big vote to George W. Rogers for Freeholder and thus enabled him to offset those adverse parts of the county. Charlie Stout likewise was a favorite for Freeholder in the two towns.

Harry L. Knight, former Republican leader in Burlington county, was defeated by nearly 3000 majority for the office of State Committeeman by William H. Reeves, present county chairman in the turnover last fall.

In Riverton Knight ran ahead of Reeves in the first and second districts, but the third district gave Reeves a majority of 46, placing Riverton in the Reeves column by a majority of 11 votes.

In Palmyra every district gave a majority of nearly two to one for Reeves.

Realizing that the situation was desperate, and that a defeat at this time, following the reverses of the last two years, would be a serious set-back to Mr. Knight's political aspirations, his friends redoubled their efforts. Monday night a letter, endorsing his candidacy and signed by fifteen well-known and respected citizens of Burlington county, was distributed from house to house in this section, but it was apparently not much help to him—nothing could arrest the avalanche of public determination all over the county that the new order of things inaugurated last year should at least be given an opportunity to show what it can accomplish toward giving the people of the county a larger voice in the conduct of its political affairs.

The big vote for Reeves against Harry Knight showed conclusively that both Palmyra and Riverton are lined up with the progressive element on county politics.

Charles R. Stout, whose "elimination" was attempted by the Knight faction was high man in the fight for freeholder. George W. Rogers, of Palmyra, and backed by Knight, was second with a majority of about 200 over Edward T. Haines, who was Knight's first choice last year for freeholder, but who later in the campaign was dropped for Fred Lippincott.

The fight in Riverton for Borough Council developed a surprise when John C. Geiss turned out to be high man. The movement that had been started to defeat him miscarried and Joshua W. Atlee was defeated by William B. Lynch, who was brought out to defeat Geiss.

The tabulated results of the vote in Riverton, Palmyra and Cinnaminson and the totals in the county are published in this issue.

In the State contests Senator Frelinghuysen carried every county against George L. Record, winning by nearly 100,000, the vote, almost complete, being 178,622 against 80,859. The v ote in Burlington county was Frelinghuysen 9,744, Record 3,573.

Ex-Governor Stuart Bell Telephone Director

Edwin S. Stuart, former Governor of Pennsylvania, was today named as a director of the U. S. & A. T. & T. Co., according to word received from Philadelphia by H. W. Ene, district manager of the company.

Ex-Governor Stuart's election was made to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Francis B. Reeves, of Philadelphia.

Thanks

I want to express my appreciation to everybody that worked for me and voted for me. I'll do my best to deserve the support they gave me.

PALMYRA HOME DAY IS AT HAND

Town All Decorated and Ready for Crowds for Saturday's Big Time

Palmyra will celebrate its third Old Home Day this Saturday.

The town is already gaily decorated and cleaned up and all is in readiness to receive a host of visitors.

Last year 15,000 people poured into the town and even more are expected this time when the festivities reach their height in the evening.

The morning will be devoted to welcoming and registering the visitors.

In the afternoon the program will begin with exercises in the grove. Visiting ministers will deliver the invocation and benediction. Thomas C. Van Osten will give the address of welcome and a reply will be made by Dr. Arthur L. Hartley, of Philadelphia, brother of Committeeman Hartley.

The singing will be in charge of Alfred C. Van Osten, who will also sing a solo. Mass singing of old time songs will be a feature and the big Tall Cedars band of Salem will render special selections.

After the exercises in the grove comes the ball game.

In the evening will be the general entertainment—dancing special features for young and old and some fireworks exhibition. A punch and judy show has been arranged for the children in addition to other entertainments previously mentioned.

Visitors will be served with all kinds of sandwiches and coffee by Ed King's committee.

Palmyra's many new improvements will be something worth showing the visitors.

Delair

The Delair station agent, J. E. Eicholtz, is on a two weeks' vacation.

Miss A. C. Wonderly has returned after spending a week at Chestnut Hill.

Mrs. George W. Wonderly, of Philadelphia, visited Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wonderly over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Murphy and family have returned to Delair after a pleasant vacation at Seaside.

The guests entertained at Geraldine Murphy's birthday party last Friday were Sue Stevenson, Vera Hagans, Jean Harton, Dorothy Oliver, Dorothy Rosenberg, Maryelna Cromby and Catherine and Anna Shadler.

Matcher Field Club defeated Delair on Sunday, at North Merchantville, score 2-1. Delair defeated Matcher on the Saturday previous to that, and so the third and deciding game of the series will be played this Sunday at the same grounds.

Fred "Mike" Holsinger will catch for the old Palmyra baseball team of twenty-five years ago this Saturday at Palmyra.

Rowland-Morrow

The wedding of Mr. Charles E. Rowland, of Camden, and Miss Madeline F. Morrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morrow, of Delair, took place in the Episcopal Church, Delair, at 8.15 Wednesday evening, Archdeacon R. Bowden Shepherd officiating. Miss Alice Bakker, of Merchantville, was bridesmaid and the flower girl was Miss Bernice Goll, of Philadelphia.

The bride was attired in white satin crepe with shadow lace drapery, sleeves of shadow lace terminating in a point over the hand. Her tunic came in a point to the floor. Her veil was of white tulle, crown shaped, interlaced with orange blossoms. She wore brocaded silver slippers with rhinestone buckles and carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

Miss Bucker wore orchid canton crepe with gray chiffon drapery, silver slippers and stockings, a gray velvet slipper cloth hat and carried white roses. The flower girl wore a white net dress, with small pink roses and carried a basket of pink roses and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride was gowned in blue beaded canton crepe with a black velvet hat.

After a reception at Delair Hall, the young couple left on an extended trip.

Porter-Biddle

A very pretty wedding was solemnized by Friends' ceremony in the garden of Mrs. Robert Biddle, Delair, on Saturday last, when their daughter, Miss Helen B. Biddle, became the bride of Mr. William Clay Porter, of Merchantville. The ceremony was witnessed by about two hundred guests.

The bride, who was attired in her mother's wedding gown and veil, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harold P. Fink, as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Lucy Lippincott, of Riverton, and Miss Ann Porter, sister of the groom. They were attired in old-fashioned gowns of changeable taffeta and carried flat bouquets of small flowers.

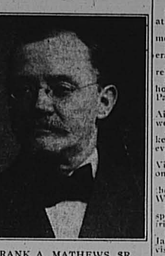

The best man was Mr. Paul Picot, brother of the groom, and the ushers were Mr. Gerald Porter, Mr. Spencer Byram, Mr. Elliott Lee and Mr. Cecil Harvey.

After their return from a wedding trip spent in Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Porter will reside in Riverton.

STRANGE PROCESSION

Mrs. Herbert J. Lees, of Washington avenue, was agreeably surprised Wednesday when eighteen ladies went in a body coming up the avenue with boxes and bundles and three of the ladies pulling a large box attached to a heavy rope.

Everyone wondered what was attached to the rope and the residents of the Avenue were startled to see such a strange sight, but it proved to be a delegation of captains and officers of the Lovers of Truth Bible class from the State Street Church of Camden, come to pay a social visit.

Everyone brought lunch and when the strange and cumbersome box was opened up it proved to contain none other but a lean ham bone. Much merriment resulted among the ladies, and later in the day the eighteen were travelers returned home thoroughly satisfied with their trip, and Mrs. Lees with a real live ham.

Those present were Mrs. Zimmerman, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Pimm, Mrs. Hiebner, Mrs. Locke, Mrs. Raymond, Mrs. M. Davis, Mrs. Letts, Mrs. Mann, Mrs. Ash, Mrs. Henry, Mrs. Fess, Mrs. Blake, Mrs. Pretts, Mrs. Cooper, Mrs. Covington, Mrs. Wolverton, Mrs. Sadie Lees, Mrs. Lottie Lees, Mrs. Bessie Lees, Mrs. Hibbs.

We Helped Him

The big majority given me in Palmyra and Riverton was the decisive element in winning the Freeholder nomination. I can't fully express my appreciation.

PALMYRA ONCE KNOWN AS "HAITI"

Town Also Was Called Chester and Texas Before Miss Toy Renamed It

Palmyra, with its beautiful Biblical name signifying "City of Palms," had several other names in its infancy, some of which were hardly appropriate to the pretty residential town which it has now become.

Way back in 1847 the town, such of it as there was, was under the name of Chester, being a part of old Chester township. A few years later we hear it spoken of as "Haiti" and shortly afterwards as "Texas."

A log house settlement down by the river bank one far from Pensauken creek was also known as "Souderstown" after the man who built some of the houses.

About the time of the outbreak of the Civil War, Miss Julia Toy, who was postmistress and whose sisters had gone abroad as missionaries, selected the name the town now bear.

The biblical Palmyra was once a flourishing city-kingdom in Asia Minor and at its height was ruled over by the powerful Queen Zenobia. Later it fell under the domination of King Hiram of Tyre, and when his daughter became one of Solomon's first wives, Hiram gave Palmyra to Solomon as part of his daughter's dowry.

The first houses built in our Palmyra were log cabins near the ball park lane and one of them still forms part of Wallace Kleckner's home.

The Toy family was rich and long prominent in old Palmyra days. The family mansion stood at Broad street and Leconey avenue. The Toys built the old Methodist church, now Society Hall, and presented it to the local congregation in the 50's.

About the same time the Methodist cemetery to the rear of the church was laid out. When the stumps were being pulled out, a lad named Solomon Kressler, joking as boys will, asked, "Who the deuce would want to be buried there?"

But Solomon was the first to lie in the new cemetery. His grave is at the entrance. The inscription on his stone is almost gone, only his name and the date, 1855, remaining, while a young tree grows out of the center of the grave.

The railroad first ran through here in 1834, but the old Palmyra station, an interesting picture of which is owned by Charles T. Hawke, was not built until 1849. At that time the village was chiefly composed of the farm homesteads of Morgans, the Wallaces, Toys, Evanls and others, some of whose families had been farmers here for generations and whose descendants are prominent citizens today.

The first lot bought in Palmyra was purchased by S. L. Hawke, for 49 years station agent, in 1880, when he purchased the ground on which his son, Charles T. Hawke, now has his store. Others in the vicinity followed.

But the big boom came a year or so later. There was some land along the railroad between Delaware avenue and Market street which had changed hands rapidly. Joe Souder, a Philadelphia shoeman, acquired some of it. Then he got into business difficulties. Out of his bankruptcy grew the first Palmyra boom. To realize more money for his creditors the land was cut into building lots and put in the hands of Fred Blackburn, a Philadelphia real estate man who later moved to Palmyra. Blackburn started a vigorous advertising campaign to sell Palmyra lots and soon had many people coming up, many of whom bought and settled.

About the same time William F. Morgan, who still lives in his homestead on the heights, began to develop that part of his land lying along the railroad. His farm was one of four into which the large holding of his father, Elias Morgan, stretching from the river a mile and a half inland, had been divided, each going to one of the sons, Elias, Jr., Joseph, John and William.

Some of the present street, Highland and Cinnaminson avenues, for example, were lanes running through the old Morgan farm.

William F. Morgan was enthusiastic about this new town but others scoffed. Old Josiah Wallace, who lived with him, said:

"Nobody'll ever get lost in Biff-town."

Hires-Jennings

Mrs. Theodore T. Jennings, of Moorestown, until recently of Leconey avenue, Palmyra, has announced the marriage of her daughter, Ruth to Edward Hires, of Camden, at Philadelphia, on September twentieth.

Moravian Church Rally

This Sunday will be Rally Day at the Moravian Church, and also at the Sunday School. Mr. Sperling plans to organize a Men's Bible Class. All the men of the congregation are invited. Mrs. Sperling is to have charge of the Ladies' Bible Class which is to be started at the same time. In the evening at 7.30 a fine program will be rendered by the Sunday School children and the orchestra will play. A cordial welcome to all.

Lombardo-Probst

The marriage of Miss Theresa Probst, of Twelfth and Columbia avenue, Philadelphia, to Mr. Samuel Lombardo, of Delair, took place on Monday, at 12 o'clock at the Church of St. Nicholas of Tolentino, Philadelphia.

The happy couple will make their home at Delair.

ARTISANS MEET

High Class Entertainment Marks Regular A. O. M. P. Session

Palmyra Assembly No.65, A. O. M. P., met in regular session last Tuesday evening in Society Hall, with an attendance of approximately 135. Two new members were initiated, and a high-class entertainment of three vaudeville acts and refreshments were provided by the entertainment committee.

Plans have now been perfected for a huge rally in October, at which time the Assembly will have as its guests the Most Excellent Officers of the Order, including the Most Excellent Master Artisan, the Most Excellent Superintendent, the Most Excellent Inspector, and the Most Excellent Recorder. A class of at least thirty candidates is expected for this meeting, and every effort is being made to have the largest class ever initiated in the history of the Assembly, which will at the same time enable the Assembly to surpass its record of 1919, the banner year.

The Artisans' "bal masque," under the auspices of the Artisans Dining Club, will be held in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on October 30th. $350.00 in cash prizes will be offered for those in costume, and a special entertainment will be provided, in addition to the dancing and other features. The stellar attraction promises to be the "Beauty Pageant," fashioned after the Atlantic City idea, and substantial cash prizes have been offered. Each Assembly will be allowed one representative. The proceeds of this bal masque will be used for a Christmas entertainment for about 800 poor children, and to relieve distress among needy members of the Order. Tickets can be procured from the recorder of Palmyra Assembly, at $2.50 each, and admit two persons.

The bowling season of the Assembly will be formally opened on Monday evening, October 2nd, at Fehrle's Riverside alleys. From present indications is is expected that the league will be composed of eight teams and members of the Assembly desiring to participate in the league games should enroll their names at once with Brother DeWitt H. Steedle, chairman of the bowling committee, and attend the preliminary series of games to be rolled beginning October 2nd.

KERSHNER DAY

Wesleyan Class Honors Teacher With Big Turn-out

A large number attended the meeting at the Wesleyan Men's Class last Sunday. It was Kershner Day, and a fitting reception was tendered Mr. Kershner.

While the orchestra played every man marched up and shook hands with the teacher, to show their appreciation for the splendid and worthwhile talks he had given the class and to wish him many more years with them.

An excellent musical program was rendered by the orchestra, which included solos by Mr. Van Osten, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Van Osten. The Lucia Sextette was rendered by a trio composed of Miss Robinson, piano, Mr. DeLuca, cornet, and Leon Harris, violin. Short talks were made by Mr. Kershner, The Rev. Mr. Robinson, Horace Finney, president of the class, and others.

For next Sunday another interesting program is being arranged, and it is hoped a large crowd will be on hand.

A journey by automobile will be made by members of the class to Bridesburg on the third Sunday in October. Make a note of this date. We want to have a large delegation from Palmyra.

Local Y. M. C. A. News

The regular monthly meeting of the Palmyra Y. M. C. A. board was held Saturday, September 16th, with eight members present.

The matter of putting into shape the building at St. Mihell Drive and Garfield avenue was one of the main topics of discussion, and the building committee was empowered to go ahead with plans laid down.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a get-together of the Ockanickon campers and their friends sometime in the near future. Wo also hope to organize one or more camps for boys 12 to 14 years of age. All boys who think they would like to belong to one of these groups should hand their names to the local secretary, Harvey G. Fisher.

A. Harry Roddack, who has served as secretary of this Board for a number of years has resigned and Thomas C. VanOsten has been added to the Board.

The Smyrna Horror

Blame whom you will for the Smyrna horror, the least Americans over here can do is to contribute promptly and generously to the Smyrna Emergency Relief fund. Responding to the request of the State Department to do its utmost, the Near East Relief advanced $25,000 and then a second $25,000, first in food, medical supplies and stores collected at Constantinople for its regular orphanage work; and since the fire, some steamers besides destroyers have been secured to transport refugees.

It is impossible to exaggerate the terrible conditions of the Smyrna, says cable reports. The call is to feed temporarily hundreds of thousands of refugees—homeless, helpless men, women and children—and convey them to places of greater safety where they will not starve to death or breed pestilence. It should be remembered that the $200,000 appropriated by Congress was for the relief of American citizens only, in Smyrna. Heroic Americans on the job rightly count on us folks back home to supply the necessary dollars for this humanitarian service, as we have never failed to do for the honor of our country's name throughout the world.

Send your contributions to the editor of this paper, or the State treasurer of the Smyrna Emergency Relief, Frederick Frelinghuysen of Newark.

Studebaker
LIGHT-SIX

CLOSED CARS

Present prices are the lowest at which Studebaker Light-Six closed cars have ever been sold.

Yet the intrinsic values are emphatically the greatest Studebaker ever offered. This means they are the best values that the industry affords, because Studebaker cars have always been above par in the amount of value per dollar invested.

Capacity production and the savings resulting from Studebaker methods of complete manufacture make these low prices possible.

Light-Six closed cars are sturdily built of finest materials and best workmanship. The bodies are the product of Studebaker skill and craftsmanship, and the prices of $1550 for the Sedan and $1225 for the Coupe-Roadster are no index to their inherent value.

When you buy a car you want to look at several makes. Include Studebaker in your list and after you have ridden in the Light-Six Sedan or Coupe-Roadster it will not be difficult to make up your mind.

The foundations of Studebaker success are quality, durability, comfort and integrity—principles that have been upheld steadfastly by Studebaker for seventy years. You can depend upon Studebaker automobiles because of the name they bear.

Protests Manure Pits

Editor Weekly News:

It seems to me that some of the organizations whose aim is to better things in our vicinity should not overlook that part of West Palmyra, which I believe is the direct cause of the suffering of a large number of residents, in that they have hay fever. A survey will show a great increase of such sufferers this summer, and it is a recognized fact that the odor of stable manure will produce a watery catharal condition and those persons pre-disposed to such diseases as hay fever will undoubtedly suffer in consequence. I am reliably informed that many people, a large proportion of children, residents of Palmyra, are afflicted this year.

These pits are entirely out of place in that location. One may argue that they are too far removed from the center of population to do any harm, that may, in theory, sound logical, but, it is well to reckon on the velocity of wind, which travels much faster than a person walking over the same distance. I reside in the central part of Palmyra, and when a strong wind is blowing from the direction of the pits, the odor is very perceptible.

It is a subject that I think should have the attention of all lovers of the interests and welfare of Palmyra at heart. To my mind, these pits are a nuisance and prejudicial to the public health, and I feel sure the best should be that the State Health authorities would take the same view of the matter.

Yours very truly, C. B. W.

Auto Hemic Therapy Treatment is Like New Woman of Her

"Before placing myself under the care of Dr. Grimes I was absolutely worthless as a housekeeper and mother. I was very nervous, had no appetite, my appetite was absolutely gone two years ago. I took no enjoyment in an outdoor and whenever it thundered or lightened I suffered intense pain. I have never got up and down to my shoulders since taking the wonderful Auto Hemic Treatment. I feel like a new born soul for today has begun a new woman of me. All my pains have disappeared and my appetite is wonderful. I can eat anything and digest it and my nervousness is entirely gone. I am so thankful for the wonderful Auto Hemic Treatment. I know if you, or any one suffering as I was, will take this treatment it will do for you what it has done for me."

GREETINGS

The Weekly News, which has been identified with Palmyra for nearly forty years, takes especial pleasure in extending a welcome to returning former residents, thousands of whom were readers in years gone by.

The joys and sorrows of Palmyrians past and present have been recorded week after week in our columns since the early eighties, but this Old Home Day is a time for happiness alone and all our citizens join with us in a happy salute to old time friends.

Like the town itself, The Weekly News has grown larger and, we hope, better as the years have rolled by.

We invite our old time readers to read The News again and we invite our old time citizens to come back again, not only for once a year, but often. We'd like to have them all live here again.

All for J. Horace

Finney won the nomination, now it's up to all good Republicans and as many good Democrats as will to give him their undivided support in November.

Horace is young, aggressive and tactful. He has ability for organization and administration. He'll put a lot of pep and first class horse sense into his work for Palmyra.

Let's help him do it!

Square Deal in Taxes

It's clear sailing for John Shade in November.

All he's got to worry about is getting his assessment done again this fall and that's no child's play.

John has promised a square deal for everybody and that's all we want.

Everybody that has an assessment kick should go to Mr. Shade and he'll help them get it straightened out.

Good Night, Mr. Night!

New Men's Club Full of Pep!

"America's failure to enter the League of Nations is largely responsible for the present 'come-back' of the Turk," declared Louis B. Runk, Esq., prominent Philadelphia lawyer and churchman during an address on "The Present Situation in Turkey and Greece," before the Men's Club of Christ Church, Palmyra, on Monday evening, September 25th.

"I do not want to introduce politics into my talk," said Mr. Runk, "but I do feel that America's influence in the League and her decided stand against secret treaties would have restrained Turkey from renewed aggression against her Christian Neighbors."

The Parish House was comfortably filled by an interested audience of men of all denominations who had gathered on invitation of William T. Purnell, to help organize a non-sectarian Men's Club.

Frank Mathews, Jr., and R. E. Wilson outlined the proposed program for the remainder of the year and after some discussion a temporary organization was agreed upon as follows: President, William T. Purnell; secretary, Charles K. Mervine; treasurer, R. E. Wilson.

The purpose of the club is to promote the intellectual, moral and spiritual welfare of its members by means of lectures, discussions, study and entertainment.

On the call of the chairman a dozen of those present expressed themselves very cordially in favor of organization along the lines mentioned. James H. Hartley, Township Committeeman, in a neat speech predicted a successful future and said he felt that the club was exactly what Palmyra needed. Charles W. Davison told of a Men's Club in a Philadelphia church very like in scope which had a membership of over 300 and he expected the Palmyre Club might easily reach that number if the announced program was carried out.

President Purnell cordially invites applications for membership from men of all denominations living in Palmyra or Riverton, and they are also invited to attend the next meeting Monday October 23rd, when an instructive and entertaining meeting is promised to all.

After the meeting adjourned refreshments were served by the Women's Guild of the Church represented by Mrs. B. S. Torbett, Mrs. James Lowrie and Mrs. William Purnell.

Notes from Parry

Mrs. Robert Wortham, of Philadelphia, was the guest this week of her son, Robert Wortham, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schuck, of Denmark, N. Y., are guests for two weeks of Mr. and Mrs. John Schuck.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wolf were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Schuck.

Mr. and Mrs. John Schuck on Sunday entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schuck, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Lambe, all of Philadelphia, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Geiger, of Orland, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. George Adams, of Philadelphia, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hutchinson.

The Ladies' Aid of the Fire Company will hold a rummage sale October 28, in Palmyra. Articles may be sent to Mrs. W. Morris, Mrs. William Phelan, Mrs. Charles Wortham and Mrs. George Dorworth.

Mr. and Mrs. William Carson, of Palmyra, entertained the Rev. and Mrs. Sperling and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Schneller and Mrs. Brumbaugh, all of Parry, with a musical evening at their home Monday evening.

Miss Emma Steelman gave a dinner Thursday evening. Those present were the Rev. and Mrs. Paul Meinert and the Misses Knecht, of Nazareth, Pa., and the Rev and Mrs. C. Nelson Sperling.

Field Club Tennis

Last Saturday afternoon the Collingswood Tennis Club came to Palmyra with the intention of evening up the score of the defeat they suffered at Collingswood earlier in the season when the Field Club tennis team won an afternoon's engagement by the count of 7 matches to 6.

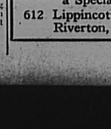

They started in with a rush and in several of the contests captured the first set, but the local players were strong finishers and were not to be denied although Collingswood put up a good fight. In the men's singles the Field Club won four out of the five contests, and in men's doubles four out of six, while in the mixed doubles Collingswood succeeded in capturing 3 out of the 4 matches played. The final score showed Field Club 9, Collingswood 6, being a more conclusive victory than the earlier inter-club match.

This Saturday, Old Home Day, the strong Merchantville tennis team is coming to the Field Club courts to match their prowess with the local racket-wielders.

QUOIT SEASON ENDS

Methodists Win Cup by Beating K. of C.

The Palmyra Quoit League ended its season last Friday evening when the Methodists beat the K. of C. in a play-off of the tie existing for first place. By winning this game, the Methodists won the beautiful cup which The Field Club offered to the champions of the League.

The deciding game was a hummer. It was necessary, for the first time during the season for two teams to battle 11 games for a decision. The 11th and deciding game, was pitched by Thatcher and Griscom, for the Methodists and LaRue and Conlow for the K. of C. These players were picked as the best on the two teams, to play the deciding game, and it was a hummer. By a coincidence, each team scored 195 points in the 11 games, but as the winner was decided by games instead of points, Griscom and Thatcher won out.

Much interest was shown in the games pitched by the various teams this season, and it is hoped that next year still more interest will be taken, when it is planned to start the season early enough so that two halves can be played off at the end of the schedule. It is planned to fix up the courts in good shape for next year, and it is also hoped to have a championship from the League to travel, and also, if arrangements can be made, to enter the South Jersey League, which, last year, developed some "pitchers."

Much of the success of the League is due to Dad Davison, who always was on the job, and whose moral support as well as his pitching, kept the [illegible] at high pitch.

The officers were: P. A. Griscom, president; H. Hinson, vice president; Jerry Smith, treasurer; [illegible], secretary.

The final standing's were as follows:

	Won	Lost	Per Cent
Methodists	7	1	.875
K. of C.	6	1	.75
I. O. O. F. of A.	5	2	.714

CLOVER CLUB DANCE

Large Number of Guests Present at First Affair of Season

The regular monthly dances of the Clover Club were resumed on Wednesday evening of last week, in P. O. S. of A. hall, this dance being known as the "open fall dance." Owing to numerous requests from residents of Palmyra and Riverton who are not members of the Club, the attendance restrictions were lifted and special invitations extended to those interested, and quite a large number of guests availed themselves of the privilege of attending this delightful affair.

Vogt's Imperial Novelty Orchestra rendered music of rare excellence. The personnel of this orchestra has been augmented by the addition of one more member, now making a total of six (two of the members of this orchestra are the sons of Herbert Lees, of Washington Avenue). An innovation for this season is the elimination of the violin, and the creation of a saxaphone trio, which, together with the banjo, drums and piano, produces a very pleasing effect, and was well received by those in attendance.

The hall was attractively decorated in the Club's colors of green and white, and the stage was draped with green curtains and the Clover Club insignia

In accordance with the usual custom, ice cream and tasty crackers were served with the compliments of the Club.

Miss Doris Horner, of Burlington, was presented with a beautiful silk umbrella, and Jean P. Mervine, of Palmyra, received an attractive leather wallet, as a result of holding the lucky number in the elimination dance.

Ever since the inauguration of these dances, Old Jupe Pluvius has hovered around with his trusty watering pot, which he would bring into active play on the third Wednesday evening of the month, but evidently the jinx was circumvented by the fact that an umbrella was given as a prize, for strange to relate, the weather was ideal for such an event.

The memberships in the Clover Club for the current year will expire in December, at which time the list will be re-opened for the year 1923.

EVERYBODY INVITED
ANNIVERSARY OF WALTER E. SMITH'S DRUG STORE

Old Home Day marks the New Drug Store's first anniversary.

Old timers, new comers and regular residents are cordially invited to pay us a visit on Old Home Day. We are one year old this day. A year ago we promised Palmyra a new kind of a Drug Store, one whose motto would be

Superior Service
Highest Quality
Lowest Prices.

We would measure our success with pleased patrons as well as with profits expressed in dollars.

Thousands of prescriptions have been filled by us in the past twelve months. Thousands of dollars have been saved by residents of Palmyra and Riverton owing to our low prices and up-to-date methods of merchandising. We take this opportunity to thank everyone who has made our success possible, either by their patronage or kind words spoken.

One year has seen Broad Street east of Morgan Avenue develop into a business section such as has not been enjoyed elsewhere in town in the past, in such a short space of time.

Patronize the New Drug Store, put your savings in the Bank and thus grow with us.

Souvenirs for everyone making a purchase of 50c or over on Old Home Day.

"Purina" Made the Difference!
EQUAL in laying ability. But the hen on the right was fed a common grain ration while the other was fed Purina Chicken Chowder and Purina Hen Chow. Grains have lots of material for yolks, but far too little for whites. As they can't lay yolks only, grain-fed hens lay fewer eggs.

OLD TIMERS WILL PLAY BASEBALL

One of the leading events among the many good ones on Old Home Day will be the base ball game between Palmyra's oldtimers and Riverton's oldtimers. They were the real amateurs, they played the game because they enjoyed the sport. These teams met each other in those good old days more than twenty-five years ago, and it will be a great pleasure to see them in action again.

This game will be played on The Field Club grounds in the afternoon at 3.30. All come and enjoy this event. Palmyra's Pep, Pluck, Perseverance, against Riverton's Rigor, Resourcefulness, Resistance.

The Riverton team will be led by the King of Amateurs of base ball, Ross Williams, the player who never accepted one cent for his services, not even carfare. Riverton players, Ross Williams, William "Billy" Turner, Coroner W. R. Knight, Wilmer Black, Charles Evans, Dave Clegg, M.
