BOROUGH IS BOOSTED BY MR. PALMER

Advantages of Change in Local Form of Government Is Shown by Mt. Holly Lawyer

V. Claude Palmer, of Mount Holly, law partner of Assemblyman Clifford R. Powell, was the speaker of the evening at a well attended meeting held Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce for explanation of the borough form of government. The meeting was held in P. O. S. of A. Hall.

The big crowd of citizens present evinced much interest in the proposed change of government, which is to be voted upon next Tuesday.

The question appears on the official ballot and is the last of three questions submitted to the voters. Those favoring the change should mark an "X" in the square opposite the "Yes." A favorable vote merely means that the citizens request our representatives in the State legislature to introduce a bill in the legislature changing the form of Palmyra's government.

Mr. Palmer said Palmyra's present form of government, the township form, was designed primarily for rural neighborhoods, whose purpose it serves well, but that as a community grows to town size and the amount of detail and executive work increases, the natural trend is to adopt a higher form of government such as the borough form.

Mr. Palmer said he had observed that Palmyra was growing rapidly, and, after congratulating the town on its evident progressiveness, said he had no doubt but that borough government would be more adequate to present day needs.

The speaker explained the advantages of the borough plan, which centralizes the administration in the hands of the Mayor, who is thereby responsible for the execution of local laws and ordinances and the general conduct of affairs.

The Mayor may also hold court as a magistrate, hear cases and administer fines. In addition he has the power of punishing for contempt of his court, which an ordinary magistrate cannot do.

The Mayor possesses the power of veto over the acts of council. This furnishes a system of check and balance in local government similar to that in National and State legislatures. The council can override the Mayor's veto by a two-thirds vote, but as Mr. Palmer emphasized, sufficent time is given by the veto for the citizens to express their opinions and influence the final decision.

Neither the Mayor nor councilmen, under the law, can draw salaries. Mr. Palmer made it very clear that they cannot vote themselves a salary.

This would mean a saving to Palmyra at the present time of $750 a year.

The Mayor presides at council meetings, but the council also elects its own president who presides during the Mayor's absence and acts as Mayor when that official is out of town or incapacitated.

The number of councilmen is six. They serve two years and after the system is started, two councilmen will be elected each year so as to keep four experienced men in the body all the time. The Mayor also serves two years.

Appointments are made by the Mayor with the consent of council. If the Mayor does not present names acceptable to the majority of council within a month, then the council makes its own appointment.

Councilmen are elected from the town at large, but as Mr. Palmer pointed out, the system works out so that as a general rule all sections of a town are represented.

The speaker emphasized the necessity of electing good men, if the town wishes an efficient government.

ARTISANS INITIATE CLASS OF THIRTY

The Most Excellent Master Artisan and His Entire Staff of Officers Visit Palmyra

The October meeting of Palmyra Assembly No. 65, A. O. M. P., held in Society Hall, last Tuesday evening, October 31st, was the greatest in the history of this rapidly growing and extremely active organization

The unusually large number of thirty candidates were initiated, which enabled the Assembly to realize the ambition of making 1922 the banner year of its history. The largest number of candidates initiated in any one year previous to the present one was 83 in 1919, but with the addition of this class of 30 candidates, the total number initiated for the first ten months of 1922 was placed at 89, thus eclipsing the highest record ever made and yet there are two more months remaining in the present year, so that a record of over 100 initiations during 1922 is assured.

Some idea of the magnitude of the good resulting from this effort can be had when it is realized that this represents a total of more than $100,000 in insurance placed in the homes of this community in a single year.

The Most Excellent Master Artisan, Victor I. Ridenour, brought his entire staff of officers of the Most Excellent Assembly to this meeting, and among these distinguish visitors were the Most Excellent Superintendent Charles E. Grakelow, the Most Excellent Inspector William J. O'Donnell, and the Most Excellent Recorder Allen P. Cox.

A unique feature of the meeting was the presentation of Artisan buttons to the class of candidates by Brother "Si." Palmyra Assembly has always been known throughout the order as the Assembly with the Famous Farmer; this part was realistically portrayed by DeWitt Morris, and his witticism and quaint mannerisms were the cause of much merriment and hilarity.

Wilmer H. Randel, in recognition of his untiring efforts in the membership campaign, was awarded a gift which may prove useful to him during the baseball season of next year, and in addition also received a beautiful gold Artisan charm and watch fob. High tribute was also paid to P. G. McMahon and Arthur P. Wright in recognition of their unusual success in the various membership drives.

After the business session and initiation the meeting was placed in charge of the entertainment committee, and an interesting program of three vaudeville acts was provided, after which refreshments were served.

Another large class of candidates is expected for November and the entertainment committee is already at work on a program which will be known as "Old Home Nite." This meeting has previously been set aside as Past Masters' Night, and a class of approximately 15 candidates is expected at that time.

CLOVER CLUB DANCE

Mr. and Mrs. George Baggs Win Prizes in the Elimination Dance.

The Clover Club's regular monthly dance was held on Wednesday evening, October 18th, with a large attendance of enthusiastic devotees.

The P. O. S. of A. Hall was again attractively decorated in the Club's colors of green and white, and with the advent of the cooler weather much zest was added to the evening's program.

The usual high-class renditions by Vogt's Imperial Novelty Orchestra were well received by their appreciative audience, and repeated encores were called for, especially in one of the waltz numbers, in which "Three O'clock in the Morning" was the predominating theme.

During the promenade real old-fashioned home-made cider was served with the compliments of the Club, and again speaking dansaically, numerous "encores" were requested.

Mr. Frank Black entertained with a humorous story, after which the program was continued.

Mr. and Mrs. George Baggs were presented with beautiful gifts as the result of holding the lucky number in the elimination dance.

The November dance of the Club will be held on Wednesday evening, November 15th.

Women Want Good Roads

Women's organizations throughout the State are solidly behind the $40,000,000 Highway Bond Bill, which will come up for referendum vote on November 7, according to Mrs. H. M. Hutchings, of East Orange, one of the leaders in women's work.

"Women are the home-builders," said Mrs. Hutchings. "Most of the financial problems of the home are solved by the women. Women are the ones who have to administer the household expenditures, and, therefore, are vitally interested in the question of taxation. The highway bond bill is a move in the right direction to reduce taxation, and at the same time will give us a highway system that will be of incalculable benefit to every resident of the State, particularly to the city dwellers, who depend upon the farmers for their produce, the cost of which depends so much upon adequate transportation facilities."

WELLS INSPIRES WOMEN VOTERS

Judge Makes Fervent Address on Moral Issues of Campaign; Has Faith in Result

The women of Palmyra, Riverton and Cinnaminson experienced a rare political inspiration at the meeting Wednesday afternoon when Judge Harold B. Wells, in a dramatic speech, figuratively tore the mantle of judgeship from his shoulders to don his fighting armor of the days gone by when he battled year after year for a "dry" Burlington county and a "dry" New Jersey.

The Judge explained that he had carefully abstained from politics for the past three years, following his elevation to the bench, which honor he had accepted in the belief that his life-long battle had been won in the passage of the prohibition amendment.

But with a Governor of the State, now running for United States Senate pledged to do all in his power to violate an, nullify the very Constitution of the Nation, Judge Wells could not refrain from entering the fray.

He explained how 46 States of the Union had ratified the amendment, a number greater than had ever ratified any other, and how Judge Taft, after opposing prohibition, had said, "It is now a part of the fundamental law of the land and it is the duty of every citizen to uphold it."

Judge Wells blamed a great deal of the opposition to prohibition and the violation of the law to foreigners who come to this country thinking that "liberty" means "license," and who have no respect for the moral traditions and principles of America.

He cited how Edwards' attempt to enact a beer law had been balked by the State Supreme Court, and declared that any similar thing he might attempt to do if elected Senator would be nullified by the United States Supreme Court.

It was the Democrats in the National Congress, Judge Wells said, who passed the prohibition amendment, under a Democratic President. Even now Congress is full of "dry" Democrats from other States and even should Edwards be elected he would find many of his own party in the Senate opposed to him.

The speaker asserted that the reason prohibition was not enforced more efficiently in New Jersey was largely because the Governor, an avowed "wet," had control of the State police and that someone had ordered these police to wink at violations.

Moreover, the Governor has appointed the majority of the county judges and as a result many of them were lenient to wet offenders.

With Runyon as Governor, declared Mr. Wells, the State judiciary soon would begin to uphold the law firmly.

The Judge closed with a fervent plea to the women. When he heard of huge Democratic majorities coming from Hudson county, he said he thanked God for the women vote over the rest of the State which he knew would be for the right. He closed with a homely poem directed to the woman who stays away from the polls and let others do the voting. It ends thus:

"Nobody else can do the work
That God's marked out for you."

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Florence Kershner and was opened with the first verse of "America" led by Miss Ethel Morton, and a prayer by Mrs. Minnetta Bowker.

Mrs. Terry substituted for Mrs. Nellie Russell, of Burlington, woman's county leader, who could not come because she had been up all night helping a neighbor with a sick child.

Assemblyman Powell spoke in favor of the Good Roads Bill which is one of the measures to be voted upon at the bottom of the ballot and also defended Senator Frelinghuysen's vote on the bonus, who he said had risked defeat rather than to imperil the nation's financial situation, after the Republicans had taken over the virtually bankrupt Democratic administration.

Camp 23, P. O. S. of A.

Seventy-five years ago twenty-three young Americans under the direction of Dr. Rennel Coates, organized in Philadelphia the first camp of what finally developed into the Patriotic Order Sons of America.

The objects for which they determined to work were:

1. To inculcate pure American principles.
2. Loyalty to American institutions.
3. To cultivate fraternal affection.
4. To oppose foreign intervention in our affairs.
5. To oppose sectarian appropriations of public funds.
6. To uphold and preserve the Constitution of the United States.
7. To maintain and defend the public school system.

It will be observed there is no obscurity about the origin of the institution and there is no ambiguity about the platform of principles. For nearly thirty years Camp 23 has consistently worked for the ideals set forth and it proposes to continue.

The camp has been invited by Post Rodgers to join in their Armistice Day church service November 12th, 7.30 p. m., in the P. O. S. of A. auditorium. A large turnout will show that we appreciate the courtesy.

A district meeting has been called for November 14th, at Camp 35 Delanco. We want a big delegation as matters of importance will be considered.

The quoit game with Camp 764, Philadelphia has been postponed to November 2nd.

Several candidates were proposed Monday night and there is no doubt that Producers' banquet will have a number of guests.

Democrats Trying to Fool the Women, Says Mrs. Feickert

In a statement on Tuesday from the headquarters of the New Jersey Women's Republican Club in Plainfield, Mrs. E. F. Feickert, the President of the Club, says:

"The Democratic women must like to be fooled if they are taken in by one of the planks in that party's platform. This plank says that the Democrats favor the passage of an equal guardianship law, making fathers and mothers equally the custodians of minor children. This is a nice plank and calculated to win the support of all the mothers of New Jersey, but unfortunately it does not mean anything, because the Republicans have already made equal guardianship an accomplished fact. The first bill introduced by Mrs. F. W. VanNess, Assemblywoman from Essex County, in the legislative session of 1921, was an equal guardianship bill. It passed both houses and was signed by the Governor. Fearing that something might have happened to the bill after its signature, Mrs. Van Ness, when she read the Democratic platform, immediately telegraphed to the Attorney-General of the State, and she has his reply saying that this law is now Chapter 107 of the Laws of 1921."

Riverton was represented by Mayor Killam E. Bennett. Those in attendance from Palmyra were Township Committeemen Charles B. Hinchman and James H. Hartley, Chief of Police Morris Beck and Squire William L. Fichter.

LOCAL FIGHT MARKS VOTE ON TUESDAY

Three Cornered Battle for Township Committee Engrosses All Parts of Palmyra

Next Tuesday's election is of unusual interest, both locally and in the State and nation at large.

In Palmyra there is but one contest for township office, but that, because of its extraordinary features has engrossed the attention of most voters.

This is the fight for Township Committeeman, a three cornered affair, with Township Chairman John M. Davies in the field against the regular party nominees, J. Horace Finney, Republican, and George F. Merrick, Democrat.

The big battle is between Finney and Davies. The Township Chairman, after serving on the Township Committee for nine years, lost the nomination to Mr. Finney at the primary by about fifty votes, an unusually close decision.

Mr. Davies' friends argued that the primary was lost through failure of many of his followers to vote, and promised to see that things were different at the regular election. Consequently Mr. Davies decided to run again, this time as an independent candidate for whom votes must be cast in the personal choice column.

It is generally conceded that a candidate whose name does not appear on the ballot starts with a big handicap, but Mr. Davies' campaign managers have endeavored to overcome this through publicity.

Mr. Finney's friends are understood to be well organized and to have been working very effectively, although quietly. As the regular nominee he is expected to obtain support which he may not have had at the primary, from straight ticket voters and also from those who do not approve of Mr. Davies' refusal to abide by the result of the primary.

A great deal of Mr. Davies' strength is expected to come from the belief, which is strong in some quarters, that all the Township Committeemen should not come from one section of the town. Mr. Finney resides in the same locality as do the other two members.

The Township Chairman's friends also have made use of the American Legion's difficulty with Township Committeeman Hinchman, over the latter's stopping the use of the name of the Legion at its carnival early in the summer, although the wheels were not stopped at carnivals held by other organizations at a later date.

Mr. Davies' backers have raised the issue that Mr. Hinchman would be elected Township Chairman, an office equivalent to Mayor, in the event of Mr. Finney's election, inasmuch as Mr. Hinchman would then be the senior member of the board.

Mr. Finney's friends reply to this assertion by pointing to the disagreement that has existed for some time between Mr. Davies and the other two Committeemen, Mr. Hartley and Mr. Hinchman. Even if Mr. Davies is re-elected to the Committee they say the Committee itself selects its chairman the first of each year and either Mr. Hinchman or Mr. Hartley would likely be elected chief by their own votes.

The argumentive war has been raging merrily back and forth for several weeks. Each side claims the town by a landslide while most neutral observers think the outcome will be fairly close, as it was at the primaries.

In the county the Republican nominees are without serious opposition. The county's vote on the State and Congressional cadidates is, however, considered of great importance. The overshadowing issue is the effort of the wets to elect a Democratic Governor and United States Senator. The liquor element hopes to show by another victory in New Jersey a trend against prohibition and thus influence other States.

HALLOWE'EN

All-Saints' Day, also known as Hallowe'en, All-Hallows, All-Hallowmas, or simply Hallowmas, is a festival of the Roman Catholic Church, introduced because of the impossibility of keeping a separate day for every saint. As early as the fourth century, on the cessation of the persecution of the Christians, the Sunday after Easter was appointed by the Greek Church for commemorating the martyrs generally; and in the Church of Rome a similar festival was introduced about 610, when the old heathen Pantheon was consecrated, March 31, to Mary and all the Martyrs. But the real festival of All Saints was regularly instituted by George IV, in 835, and appointed to be celebrated November 1. It was admitted into England about 870. The choice of the day was doubtless determined by the fact that November 1, or rather the eve or night preceding it, was one of the four great festivals—February 1, May 1, August 1 and November 1—of the heathen nations of the North; for it was the policy of the church to supplant heathen by Christian observances.

In England it was long customary to crack nuts, duck for apples in a tub of water, and perform other harmless fireside revelries. Anciently the most essential ceremony seems to have been the lighting of a bonfire by every household. In Scotland, the ceremonies partook of more of a superstitious character; taking, among rustics, the form of a charm to discover who should be his or her partner for life. Of these now almost exploded customs, the best summary is in Burns' well-known poem, "Hallowe'en."

He insisted upon the building of the Sewers, when prices were at the peak, and it was only because of an uprising of our people that his wishes were not carried through. The Sewer Ordinance was defeated at that time, and an even larger Sewer System was finally built at a saving of $50,000.00.

The 1922 Budget, advocated by Mr. Davies, called for an advance in our Township tax rate, and it was only through the interposition of the other members of the Township Committee that your rate is as low as it is.

He has not during the last five years of service, insisted upon proper steps being taken to collect delinquent taxes, and thereby reduce tax rates, until the matter was brought to his attention and a demand made that he enforce the law.

Mr. Davies claims he has carefully watched the expenditures of the Tax Payers' money, yet he is the sponsor for the increase in Township Committee salaries last year.

In the last nine years, what improvements have been made in the Township commensurate with the increase in tax rate, which in 1914 was $2.27, and in 1922 is $4.75?

Statement by J. Horace Finney

REGULAR REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE

I am a tax payer myself, and do not want to pay any more taxes than I have to. I am opposed to any increase in the tax rate for any purpose unless the people themselves endorse that purpose. This includes garbage and ash collection.

I am in favor of the Borough form of Government, and approve of putting the same into effect as soon as possible, if the question is endorsed by the people at the General Election.

Reports have been circulated by those who are opposing my election that I have made promises to certain individuals. I wish to say that any such reports are absolutely false and are being made maliciously to injure my candidacy. I HAVE NOT nor WILL NOT make any promises to anyone.

Mr. Davies' entire campaign has been managed by an Organization, which in a public advertisement states "Mr. Houchman automatically becomes Chairman of the Township Committee in the event of Mr. Davies' defeat", which is a false statement inasmuch as the Chairman of the Township Committee is elected annually by the members of the Committee.

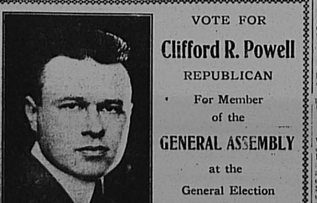

If elected, I will not be controlled by any LEAGUE or other Organization, but will be free to serve the people to the best of my ability.

It has been fully decided to maintain the club as a permanent organization and regular officers for 1923 will be elected at the January meeting.

Reeves-Major.

The Central Baptist Church was the scene of a very pretty fall wedding on Saturday afternoon at four thirty o'clock, when Miss Ruth A. Major, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Major, became the bride of Mr. Albert J. Reeves, Jr.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Eleanor Major, as maid of honor, and the best man was Mr. Leslie Reeves, brother of the groom. Miss Nan Golden, of South Orange, and Miss Virginia Wheeler, of Maysville, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. The ushers were Mr. Arthur Bowker, Mr. Howard Elliott and Mr. Albert Major.

A Better Flashlight

We want everybody to see the fine line of Winchester Flashlights in our store. They are beauties! Many special features of design and sturdy construction have made these high grade flashlights very popular.

The Winchester patented two-position safety switch makes it impossible to push it on accidentally and waste your battery. The coarse pitch threads will not cross. One-piece lens construction insures perfect contact between the battery and lamp. Extra thick seamless zinc batteries give longer life than ordinary batteries.

Get a Winchester, it's safe and dependable. Keep it in a handy place and you will wonder how you ever got along without it.

Winchester Flashlights are made in Bullseye, Miner's, Searchlight and pocket styles, fibre and metal cases, and two and three cell sizes.

EDWARDS' COURSE DISMAYS PARTY

Governor's Nullification Platform Fills Managers With Forebodings of Defeat.

DEMOCRATS ARE ALIENATED

Senator Frelinghuysen's Brilliant and Aggressive Campaign Conceded to Give Him Advantage and to Insure His Success.

SENATOR FRELINGHUYSEN APPEALS TO THE VOTERS

Raritan, New Jersey.—Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen issued the following statement on the eve of the election:

"I make my appeal to the voters of the state for re-election to the senate on two grounds: defending the fair name of New Jersey, and insuring the prosperity of its people.

"I stand for upholding the constitution in all its provisions. Governor Edwards stands for the nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment, with its attendant disregard of law and order.

"I stand for the Republican protective tariff which is restoring to the nation its lost prosperity; Governor Edwards would destroy the tariff and once more plunge the nation into the chaos of depression and unemployment."

Trenton, N. J.—Democratic dismay marks the closing days of the state campaign. Reports from every part of the state are that Governor Edwards' campaign has amazed and disgusted the great mass of the members of his party and has filled the minds of his political managers with the gloomiest forebodings of defeat.

His constant and emphatic iteration of his contempt for the Eighteenth Amendment, his indulgence in the grossest personalities, and his ingenuous glorification of the triune joys of "wine, women and song" have alienated from him the sympathy and support of self-respecting Democrats, and especially the women, who regard his convivial oratory as a direct affront.

New Jersey Democrats who have a pride in their party regard a campaign such as Governor Edwards has made as putting them and their party in a false light before the entire country and as damaging to Democratic prestige and fortunes. Men and women of this calibre, who comprise the greater bulk of the New Jersey Democracy, were known to have shown their disapproval and disgust of the Governor's "wine, women and song" speech at Jersey City by leaving the hall while the Governor was speaking.

Campaign Displeases Democrats

Nor has the Governor's plan of campaign been any more pleasing to those in his party who have a genuine disagreement with the wisdom of the Eighteenth Amendment. For they realize that Senator Frelinghuysen has placed him at a tactical disadvantage in the questions with which he has mercilessly bombarded Edwards anent his slug-plank platform of constitutional nullification, in demanding that he answer whether the present widespread decline of law and order which has made New Jersey the paradise of bootleggers is the Governor's fulfilment of his promise to make New Jersey "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean."

Aside from the insincerity of a campaign based on such premises, New Jersey Democrats are perturbed by Governor Edwards' attitude of utterly ignoring economic questions in his campaign. His single reference to this phase has been his repeated promise to do all in his power to defeat the present tariff act if elected to the Senate. His Democratic advisers regard this not only as a serious error in view of the remarkable revival of industry in the state immediately following on the operation of the tariff act, but as another evidence of insincerity on the Governor's part.

Frelinghuysen Makes Friends

Senator Frelinghuysen's brilliant campaign has been in marked contrast to the ineptitude of his opponent. At every meeting in his state-wide campaign large audiences have been received by great throngs of the voters. At two large mass meetings in Jersey City on October 24 he commanded that Governor Edwards discuss national issues and stop trying to deceive the people regarding the issue of wet or dry.

"Governor Edwards' platform is incomplete," the Senator told an audience at New Brunswick on October 25. "It should include the five-cent drunk," he said. Referring in his speech at Trenton October 24 to the Governor's election promise to make the state as "wet as the Atlantic Ocean," Senator Frelinghuysen said "New Jersey, and particularly Hudson County, is a paradise for saloonkeepers and bootleggers. Is this condition the fulfilment of Governor Edwards' promise or does he express his incapacity as chief executive to obtain an enforcement of the laws of the state and nation?"

MEN'S CLUB MEETS

Inspiring Talk Given by the Rev. Charles Bratten DuBell, of Camden

Fifty men attended the meeting of the Men's Club in Christ Church parish house last week.

Chaplain Charles Bratten DuBell, of Camden, gave a most inspiring address and the organization was voted a success by all those present. A pleasing music was rendered by the splendid orchestra and the ladies served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

It has been fully decided to maintain the club as a permanent organization and regular officers for 1923 will be elected at the January meeting.

Reeves-Major.

The Central Baptist Church was the scene of a very pretty fall wedding on Saturday afternoon at half-past three o'clock, when Miss Ruth A. Major, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Major, became the bride of Mr. Albert J. Reeves, Jr.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Eleanor Major, as maid of honor, and the best man was Mr. Leslie Reeves, brother of the groom. Miss Nan Gaddes, of South Orange, and Miss Virginia Wheeler, of Maysville, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. The ushers were Mr. Arthur Bowker, Mr. Howard Elliott and Mr. Albert Major.

EDWARDS' COURSE DISMAYS PARTY

Governor's Nullification Platform Fills Managers With Forebodings of Defeat.

DEMOCRATS ARE ALIENATED

SENATOR FRELINGHUYSEN APPEALS TO THE VOTERS

Raritan, New Jersey.—Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen issued the following statement on the eve of the election:

"I make my appeal to the voters of the state for re-election to the senate on two grounds: defending the fair name of New Jersey, and insuring the prosperity of its people.

"I stand for upholding the constitution in all its provisions; Governor Edwards stands for the nullification of the Eighteenth Amendment, with its attendant disregard of law and order.

"I stand for the Republican protective tariff which is restoring to the nation its lost prosperity; Governor Edwards would destroy the tariff and once more plunge the nation into the chaos of depression and unemployment."

Trenton, N. J.—Democratic dismay marks the closing days of the state campaign. Reports from every part of the state are that Governor Edwards' campaign has aroused and disgusted the great mass of the members of his party and has filled the minds of his political managers with the gloomiest forebodings of defeat.

His constant and emphatic iteration of his contempt for the Eighteenth Amendment, his indulgence in the grossest personalities, and his supreme glorification of the virtues Joys of "wine, women and song" have alienated from him the sympathy and support of self-respecting Democrats and especially the women, who regard his convivial oratory as a direct affront.

New Jersey Democrats who have a pride in their party regard a campaign such as Governor Edwards has made as putting them and their party in a false light before the entire country and as damaging to Democratic prestige and fortunes. Men and women of this calibre, who comprise the greater bulk of the New Jersey Democracy, were known to have shown their disapproval and disgust of the Governor's "wine, women and song" speech at Jersey City by leaving the hall while the Governor was speaking.

Campaign Displeases Democrats

Nor has the Governor's plan of campaign been any more pleasing to those in his party who have a genuine disagreement with the wisdom of the Eighteenth Amendment. For they realize that Senator Frelinghuysen has placed him at a tactical disadvantage in the questions with which he has mercilessly bombarded Edwards anent his single-plank platform of constitutional nullification. In demanding that he answer whether the present widespread defiance of law and order which has made New Jersey the paradise of bootleggers is the Governor's fulfillment of his promise to make New Jersey "as wet as the Atlantic Ocean."

Aside from the indiscretion of a campaign based on such promises, New Jersey Democrats are perturbed by Governor Edwards' attitude of utterly ignoring economic questions in his campaign. His single reference to this phase has been his promise to endeavor to do all in his power to delay the present tariff act in the senate. His Democratic adversaries regard this not only as a serious error in view of the remarkable revival of industry in the state immediately following on the operation of the tariff act, but as evidence of evidence of insincerity on the Governor's part.

Frelinghuysen Makes Friends

Senator Frelinghuysen's brilliant campaign has been in marked contrast to the ineptitude of his opponent. At every meeting in his state-wide tour Senator Frelinghuysen has been received by great throngs of the voters. At two large mass meetings in Jersey City he was cheered as he demanded that Governor Edwards discuss national issues and stop trying to "divert the people's attention from the issue of wet or dry."

"Governor Edwards' platform is incomplete," the Senator told an audience at New Brunswick on October 25. "It should include the 'never drunk' he said. Referring in his speech at Trenton October 24 to the governor's election promise to make the state as "wet as the Atlantic Ocean," Senator Frelinghuysen said "New Jersey, and particularly Hudson County, is a paradise for saloonkeepers and bootleggers. In this condition the fulfillment of Governor Edwards' promise or does it represent his incapacity as chief executive to obtain an enforcement of the laws of the state and nation?"

Senator Frelinghuysen has issued a flat-blank denial to the Democratic charge that he is a wet-cellar or that he is a drinking man.

Nevertheless, Mr. Edwards' charge that his opponent is "socially wet and politically dry" has lasted quite nobly and has undermined the steadfastness of some Republican voters. The think tank puzzles us is that one of these voters proposes to be "dry" yet are lukewarm in their attitude toward Mr. Frelinghuysen.

Mr. Frelinghuysen has voted dry in the Senate and he has unalterably pledged himself to support the prohibition amendment.

Even suppose Frelinghuysen has a wet cellar, how on earth could a single "drip" vote against a man bound to uphold prohibition in the halls of Congress, when his opponent is sworn to do everything in his power to overthrow the amendment and make the whole nation as "wet as the Atlantic ocean."

Should New Jersey send Edwards to the Senate it will brand the whole state and its inhabitants before the rest of the Nation as "wet." Do the men, the church people and others in our state, desire such a reflection? Do the saloon wished to be placed this position?

Frelinghuysenism were "socially dry," he would be debauching only himself.

Edwards wants to debauch the whole State.

Where Will New Jersey Stand?

Once more, as in the days of the War, the Republican Party stands right upon the supreme moral issue of the day.

It is the great privilege and the supreme duty of every woman to vote next Tuesday.

Palmyra has had enough votes in every past to decide county elections. Next Tuesday it may decide the state election.

Let everybody vote.

Because of the moral issues involved the Republicans are contending wholly on the women's vote and the Senator Runyon, Republican candidate for Governor, and United States Senator Frelinghuysen, candidate to succeed himself, have both made pleas to the voters who stand for a higher moral order.

Temperance and church organizations all over the State have endorsed the Republican ticket.

Barroom Statesmanship

The Trenton Times, leading Democratic paper of New Jersey, says:

"Charges by the New Jersey Democracy, barroom statesmanship dominates in the organization.

Governor Edwards, as the Sunday Times blurts out, it has time and again shocked the decent people of this State with his coarse profanity and vulgarity, and his deliberate pose as a tough guy. Right-minded Democrats are sick of the surrender of the party machinery to the rum auxiliary. Democratic women will not vote the bootleggers' ticket."

The Democratic "Newark Ledger" in open letter from the Editor said: The women voters of New Jersey are going to determine who will be next United States Senator, and, if so, you (the pronoun refers to Governor Edwards) neither look, sound good, or smell good to women.....Women are idealists, if you are not very inspiring as an ideal."

Senator Frelinghuysen is a deacon in the Reformed Church. He says he proper State anthem this year is "Onward Christian Soldiers," instead of the one suggested by Edwards, "How Dry I Am."

Wisdom in Goldsmith's Maxim.

"As I am never forward in giving top opinion, especially when I have reason believe that it will not be agreeable, think I am obliged to give it I already think it for a maxim to speak my mind."—Goldsmith.

Thinks Borough Government Better

To the Editor of the Weekly News:

I believe that the borough form of government will be the most efficient and the least expensive for Palmyra. It has been an avocate of the commission form of government ever since the law was enacted creating such a form. I find, however, that a municipality with the population of Palmyra could only have three commissioners, and therefore I am ready to take the borough form of government as being the best that could secure for our needs.

The growth of Palmyra for the next few years will be enormous. We must prepare for this expansion by intelligent governmental methods. Our present form does look after such a municipality efficiently without all the expense of a great part of the time being devoted to such duties as the selection of committeemen and the selection of a mayor from among them. Under the present form of government Palmyra is controlled by a small group of politicians, who, while they may be honest, are not capable of handling the affairs of a municipality of the size that Palmyra will be within the next few years.

I am not making a political speech, but I am convinced that the borough form of government is the best suited to the needs of the average municipality of the size that Palmyra will be within the next few years.

Yours truly,
CHARLES A. WRIGHT.

CAL MASQUE BRILLIANT

Hallowe'en Frolic Proves Most Colorful Event

The Knights of Columbus Hallowe'en frolic and last masque Tuesday evening was one of the most brilliant and colorful functions of recent years.

The P. O. S. of A. Hall was almost completely crowded for dancing, but the dense mass of picturesque couples made with their bizarre costumes and decorations a rare scene.

Many prizes were awarded, among them being dressed lady, Mrs. Charles Porter; most comic man, Irving Bertram; most original man, Mr. Dermont; character costume, Guy Wood; most comic couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods; comical female, Mrs. Irene Bartlett. Others did not know who were awarded prizes. Beatrice Hyland, Mrs. Davis, Mary Hyland, Irving Bertram, Irene Bartlett, Elwood Bradway, Dorothy Wilkinson and Margaret Jenkins.

The Judges were Master Bennett, Mrs. Charles A. Wright, George A. Winner, Willis Crane and John Keys. John M. Hughes was floor manager.

The Knights wish to thank everybody for their cooperation and stand ready to help other organizations have similar successes.

WHAT ABOUT THE WEST END

When one looks over the political situation and is brought forcibly up against the fact that approximately one-fifth of Palmyra's voters live in the West End and are now and have been for some time without representation in the Township affairs and government it is only evident that the state of affairs should be rectified at once.

It is a lamentable fact that the West End boys have not received their due from the Government of Palmyra on such facilities and amusements as other sections of the town have. At DISTRICTS should be represented in the Township Government also those who reside outside of the "HIGH GATE" on property values and so to make up the good citizenship our town has. Why not us, on the West End especially who are without representative interested in such matters as adequate police protection, street improvements, electric lights, etc., as well as those who are more centrally located.

When Taylor Hurff elected by Republicans because he was the man for the place irrespective of politics) was in office there were activities in the West End for the benefit of all—Why has this ceased?

Right now is the time to remedy the state of affairs at the coming election. Don't stand around and howl about how badly you are being treated; get out and vote. Why, you poor blind men and women, the settling of the whole question is in your hands —VOTE—It only counts when its in the Ballot Box—and that is why the "gang" are coaxing every one of you to give them your vote, and what will you get for it? Don't just listen to one cent and dried nonsense about "Party Lines" and "Party that." What you want is good men to squarely administer the affairs of Palmyra's WARD DISTRICTS representation. Get out and vote for Active.

VACATIONS

SOME get vacations, but others get none.

And those in the latter class will make their lives any more happy by complaining that they get a poor deal. The more they think they are more unfair and the more they talk about their hard lot, the sooner they will believe their pay envelope burdensome.

Everyone ought to have a rest now and then. Vacations are valuable not alone to those who get them, but also to those who grant workers periods of rest. But they are only valuable when used in the proper way. If one is to get more enjoyment from his work after a vacation or if he is to be more efficient and produce more daily, he must return to desk, store or shop rested in body and brain and without disturbing problems to distract his thoughts.

Those who can't get away for vacations would find much consolation if they realized that some whom they consider fortunate in vacationing don't benefit at all. Instead of resting, too many on vacation work harder than when they are home and frequently spend much more than they can afford. Then, upon their return they are tired and unhappy and all themselves sorely distressed by meeting their debts.

Half the fun of vacation days is lost because the "days off" are not put to proper use. Far better to devote these periods to restful, healthful, happy outings in the woods where distractions are small, that, to dash madly around fashionable resorts at such a rapid pace that one's strength and pocketbook are worn out.

It's a mistake to blame vacations for causing misfortunes, for lack of judgment in choosing ways to amuse themselves when they are so lucky as to have "days off," vacations would be of much greater benefit to the health and happiness of all.

When one cannot eat chocolate cake without getting indigestion, he shows little sense in eating it. And the improper use of vacation days is senseless, too.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"PIKER"

IN ENGLISH slang a "piker" is a tramp or a vagrant, and Borrow, in his "Word-book of the English Gipsy Language" states: "The people called in acts of parliament 'sturdy beggars' and 'vagrants' were, in the old cant language "Abraham men" and, in the modern, "Pikers."

By referring to "Piers Ploughman," we find that the word is by no means modern, for one of the quatrains of this old piece reads:

I have a horse, and he a bayard,
And I can a ryghte;
And keep my corne and my croft
From pikers by nyghte.

From this evidence, it is probable that the word was brought over to this country by some of the English settlers, and gained new impetus here by reason of the fact that the name Pike was applied in California in the early '49's to the migratory Southern poor whites, many of whom came from Pike county, in Missouri.

"Pike," says Nordhoff, in his book on California, "in the California sense of the word is the wandering, go-to-the poor Southern white. This person often lives with his family in a wagon. He rarely follows any steady industry. He is frequently a squatter on other people's lands. He will not work regularly, but moves from place to place as the humor seizes him."

The exact definition of "piker" coupled with the original English meaning, was doubtless responsible for the adoption of the term in race-track slang as the equivalent of some one who bets only small amounts, a man who plays safe and is afraid to take a chance. From the race-track, the term was adopted by Wall street, and finally found its way into the colloquial language of the nation as a whole—though it has never been sanctioned by the best of usage.

Home of Building and Loans.

The first building and loan institution was organized in Philadelphia in 831, and Philadelphia is today the greatest and wealthiest building association city in the United States. There are 2,200 in Philadelphia, with assets or resources upward of $350,000,000 and over 750,000 members. These associations were helped in completing the purchase of close to 75,000 properties in Philadelphia last year alone.—Thrift Magazine.

To Induce Sleep.

If you are habitually a long time in going to sleep, try drinking slowly a glass of warm milk and eating a few crackers before retiring for the night. The cause may be the lapse of time between bedtime and your last meal. A glass of water and a tin of crackers should always be kept at the bedside.

PRICE REDUCTIONS
Ford Cars And Trucks
LOWEST IN HISTORY OF FORD MOTOR COMPANY STATEMENT
According to a statement just issued by Edsel B. Ford, President of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit, a general reduction of $50.00 a car has been made in the prices of Ford Model T cars and the Ford 1-Ton Truck effective October 17th.

"The revision in prices," said Mr. Ford, "is the result of the increased volume of business which our company has enjoyed during the present year, and also, to the fact that we now own and operate many of our own sources of raw material, which enables us to continue increasing the quality of our product and at the same time keep the price so low that Ford cars are in reach of everybody.

"Our production for 1922 is already in excess of a million, which has been an important factor in bringing down costs. Our present daily output is averaging better than 5,000 Cars and Trucks, which means a complete Ford Car or Truck every 5½ seconds of each eight hours' work. It is an anticipation of this continued demand that price adjustments are again being made in order to keep in effect the policy of selling Ford products at the lowest price consistent with quality.

"Quality as usual," said Mr. Ford, "will continue to be a prime consideration in the building of Ford cars. As our business has increased we have constantly increased our equipment and manufacturing facilities, so that this price reduction merely reflects the progressive methods which comes as a result of increased volume.

"This reduction, which is the sixth since March 1920, brings the price of the Ford Touring Car from $575, the price in effect early in 1920, to the present extremely low level of $393, which is nearly 50% less. Corresponding reductions have been made on all other types.

The new prices by types follow:

Palmyra YMCA Notes

The meeting Wednesday night was a bowling success in more ways than one. Everybody was there, and a full quota from Calvary group, Riverton, as our guests enjoyed with us the eats and Mr. Ashbrook's talk. We believe that every fellow now has a little better idea of the aims and purposes of the YMCA group.

Small, but Powerful.

Germs are not little animals. They are tiny plants, the smallest living things known. They are sometimes called bacteria or microbes. You might have some idea of the size of a germ if you could take a grain of sand and split it into a million pieces. Of course, some germs are larger than others, but the largest cannot be seen without the aid of a powerful microscope.

Broadcasting a Message TO THE People of New Jersey

LISTEN IN:

"In presenting my candidacy for the Governorship to the people of New Jersey I base my appeal on the explicit pledges of the Republican State platform and on my record of eight years as Assemblyman, Senator and Acting-Governor.

"I elected Governor I pledge myself to use all the resources at my command to enact into law our party pledges:

To preserve the direct primary inviolate;

To enforce the laws and the constitution faithfully and impartially;

To base trolley fares and gas and electric rates on actual values, eliminating watered stock;

To subject utility holding companies to the jurisdiction of the Public Utilities Commission;

To reorganize the State Highway Commission;

To pass a law for open specifications. Every patented pavement must compete with non-patented pavements of equivalent merit, to the end that the grip of the patented pavement trust on New Jersey highways may be speedily ended.

To give counties the same right to advertise for bids on more than one type of pavement as municipalities have, and to end the county reimbursement scheme of highway building;

To provide higher rates of workmen's compensation;

To prohibit night work for women in laundries, bakeries and factories after 10 P. M.;

To improve marketing facilities throughout the State through the extension of the work of the Bureau of Farm Markets;

To afford an equal educational opportunity for every child in the State;

To abolish useless offices and consolidate public enterprises wherever possible;

To pass a law authorizing the State authorities to safeguard consumers against shortage of coal and extortionate prices, similar to the laws recently passed in New York State.

"In soliciting your support I submit my record in the legislature and as Acting-Governor as proof of my impartiality to capital and labor alike and of my sincere interest in the welfare of the people of the entire State."

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM

Legion to Help Dedicate New Roads over County

Arrangements are being made for appropriate exercises on Armistice Day in dedication of the new roads in Burlington County, which have been named after the American Legion and the various operations conducted by the American Expeditionary forces in France.

A joint committee of the Board of Freeholders and the County Committee of the American Legion are arranging for exercise at Bordentown, Mount Holly, Moorestown, Palmyra, Riverside, Beverly, and Burlington. The parade will be accompanied by a band and will start at Bordentown at 8.30 in the morning, arriving at Bordentown at 9.9 o'clock; at Mount Holly at 11 o'clock; at Palmyra at 11 o'clock; at Riverside at 2 o'clock, at Beverly at 12 o'clock.

After the exercises in Burlington, which will be concluded about one o'clock, the members of the American Legion, together with the public will all join in a parade over the streets of Burlington and arrangements have been made by The Captain James McFarland Post in Burlington to serve a lunch immediately following. The public is invited to participate in the exercises and to join in the line of parade.

The St. Mihiel Drive, otherwise known as Broad street, will be dedicated in Palmyra.

Love and Duty in Actual Life.

A thousand wheels of labor are turned by dear affections, and kept in motion by self-sacrificing endurance; and the crowds that pour forth in the morning, and return at night are daily processions of love and duty.—Chapin.

Armies Equally Matched.

The battle of Fontenoy was the only large battle ever fought in which the opposing armies were of equal size, each 70,000 men—and the loss of victors and vanquished of each also—both

"wheels of fortune" being operated in a perfectly honest way for the support of a worthy organization WHEN THE STATE POLICE FOUND SO MANY PROMINENT COUNTY AND STATE OFFICIALS STOOD IN THE MIDWAY AT THE BURLINGTON-MOUNT HOLLY AND MOUNT HOLLY-SEEING THE WHEELS SPIN AND OPERATED FOR PHOSA MAIN OBJECT WAS TO SEPARATE THE PEOPLE FROM AS MUCH MONEY AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE AND GIVING NOTHING IN RETURN. WHO DARED? And furthermore, these men ran what is known as "The P. A. Wheel."

We feel it is our duty to support the statements made by our Commander and condemn your apparently partial attitude in regard to these several carnivals in Palmyra.

The law, which was invoked to stop one organization or individual, certainly should have been invoked to stop others from doing the same thing. We do not know what your reasons have been in not doing so, but your actions, whether it was antipathy to the American Legion or friendliness to the other organizations, appear similar to a pure and unintentional mistake in the construction of your duty. And we do we care to interest ourselves in the matter except as far as the result is beside the present question. The fact is that a certain law was enforced against another organization and was not enforced against other organizations under the same set of facts.

This is in itself absolutely contrary to the principles of law enforcement, and inasmuch as it is the duty and one of the objects of the American Legion to uphold and maintain the true principles of that government, we feel that regardless of Commander Rodger's connection with the affair and any special interest he may have had, that, we would be derelict in our duty to not pass unnoticed and unmentioned what plainly appears to have been a flagrant violation of those principles, and therefore we feel that it should be a public and satisfactory explanation and apology to the American Legion, but to the citizens of Palmyra who elected you to impartially administer the laws of the land in the community in which you were elected.

A copy of this letter will be handed to you a sufficient length of time prior to its publication to enable you to make reply thereto, should you desire, in the same issue of the paper in which this appears.

Very truly yours,
POST FREDERICK M. RODGERS,
AMERICAN LEGION.

Letter From Post Rodgers to Mr. Hinchman

October 23, 1922.

Mr. Charles B. Hinchman,
Head of Department of Police,
Atlantic City, N. J.
Dear Sir:

At the regular monthly meeting of this organization which was held on Tuesday evening, October 3, copy of letter addressed to you in the above manner and copy of your reply was read but owing to the late hour neither the questions asked in the letter of your Commander.

You say in your letter: "When your carnival was in operation I went to the head of your organization and told him it was unlawful to operate the wheels and asked him to discontinue the sale of tickets for the same and your request was complied with immediately, thereby obeying the law and I thank you for your co-operation."

We feel compelled to take issue with you upon the statements contained in the above quotation from your letter, as your investigation of the facts disclosed are totally different from those set forth by you. We can recall that there was a stand located upon the north side of Garfield avenue, and do you recall that this stand was operated by Messrs. Joseph Stack and Harold and that as they were selling tickets and one man was reaching for his change you attempted to steer him into another of this gentleman very nearly lost his temper, not knowing who you were? Do you recall telling Mr. Stack and Mr. Baker not to run this wheel any more?

Do you recall coming over to the Commander, who was in the act of taking down the wheel at the next booth on which the prices were advertised and saying to him, "Mr. Richter, you will have to take down the wheels?" And do you recall him saying, in the proper manner, "All right, Mr. Hinchman," and then taking them down now?

You say with reference to the carnival run by one other organization which we were interested in our letter that you were out of town when the carnival was given, and further that Mr. Beck told them that it was unlawful to run the wheels and if they did so, they did it on their own responsibility. Do you further recall that the organization continued to operate the wheels?

In the next paragraph of your letter you deal with the fact that another organization was also warned not to run the wheels. This is all you say about this subject. You do not answer the question asked in our letter of September 8th, as to WHY THEY WERE PERMITTED TO OPERATE. We asked this question because we had a desire to know from the paragraphs dealing with that part of the story, we can get no satisfaction.

You will probably recall that on the night one of the other bodies had its carnival you were at the corner later in the evening, when you were called on the phone regarding the stopping of the wheels at this carnival, you made no move to do so. Here again we are interested to know why.

You must understand very clearly that our Post does absolutely no objection to any other organization in town running these wheels if it is perfectly lawful for them to do so. Both of the other organizations are worthy ones and deserving of support. But we do object most strenuously to our being prevented from doing the very thing which others are permitted to do. That is a question to which we feel only reason, but demand a full and complete answer.

Vol. 39 No. 16 PALMYRA, NEW JERSEY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1922 PRICE FIVE CENTS

FINNEY WINS; PUMPER ALSO IS ENDORSED

Republican Candidate Victor Over John M. Davies by 149 Majority in Hot Fight

Palmyra's chief political fight was a win on Tuesday by the regular Republican nominee, J. Horace Finney, who was elected to succeed his opponent, John M. Davies, on the township committee, by a vote of 728 to 579, a majority of 149.

It is reported that Mr. Davies' backers plan to contest the election because stickers which had been placed in the booths were removed early in the day on orders from Mount Holly, although Judge Wells decided during the afternoon that they could be restored.

Mr. Finney carried three of the four election districts, Mr. Davies being successful only in his home district, the third. One of the surprises was Finney's victory in the first district, West Palmyra, which was understood to be strong for Mr. Davies because he lives north of the railroad.

The proposition to change to borough government was by an overwhelming majority.

The proposition favoring the purchase of a $12,000 fire apparatus of the "pumper" type also went through, although by a rather small vote.

The good roads bond bill carried in Palmyra, but lost out in the State at large.

The Republican county ticket won without difficulty, and a good majority also was returned for the Republican State ticket, although there was considerable cutting or "ticket-splitting" by Edwards by the "wet" voters.

A lively exchange of circulars immediately preceded the election in Palmyra. Each side thought the other was trying to trick voters into making mistakes in marking their ballots.

The total of votes cast in Palmyra was 1,538, of which 452 were in the first district, 267 in the second, 380 in the third and 419 in the fourth.

One of the incidents which at first attention was Mr. Davies' arrival at his polling place in Legion Hall one minute after the polls were closed. He was not permitted to cast his vote.

Bridgeboro Man Scales High Peak in Armenia

American Army mules imported by the Near for artillery during the World War, are to be used by Boy Scout Weskyan athletes with three other American Relief workers, have conquered Alaghez, the mountain with the largest snow cap in Armenia, known as the climber's Waterloo.

The party encountered an avalanche and one of the workers was disabled, miraculously escaping being crushed to death. The man injured in the accident reached the summit and left an inscription in a vial in the cairn of history of American Relief work in the Caucasus in a water-proof case on the top of the Armenian mountain.

Russel H. Anderson, Bridgeboro, N. J., and Hyrum D. MacDonald, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., both of whom have been in the Near East on relief service in the Transcaucasian republics, were the Western members of the party.

Alaghez, called by Armenians "The eye of God," and by the Turks "Beautiful Mountain," stands 14,000 feet high. Herein lies its treachery. Tricked by the innocent appearance of lower slopes and by the inviting fields which vistors, who have never before been attempted the ascent.

But the whole upper reaches are a gigantic mass of snow and ash, so unstable that climbing higher than a hundred and fifty feet is a risk of life in most continuous avalanches occur.

So considerable was the menace that Armenian refugees chose the risky security of caverns in its cliffs during Turkish invasions of 1918 and 1919, because of the fair certainty that the invaders would not stop to search for Gregory, the illuminator and the founder of the Armenian religion, made its difficult landslide region his refuge when fleeing persecution in the fourth century and died on the mountain.

Palmyra Castle No. 22, K. G. E.

Palmyra Castle and Riverside Castle, K. G. E., are getting together again. Next Tuesday evening, November 14th, in a contest they are joining in a purely friendly way. In other words they are forming a joint Hermitage. Of course most of the members of both Castles are known to take this side-degree. The Hermitage, or as it is officially known, The Degree of Venerable Hermits, is considered one of the most interesting of all the K. G. E. degrees

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

CLOTHES, CONFIDENCE

MARK TWAIN could afford to indulge his delight in unusual and fantastic clothes. He was a genius.

If John D. Rockefeller chose to walk down Fifth avenue in a suit of jeans it would not affect his financial standing, although it might create surprise, for his custom is to dress himself rather neatly.

Russell Sage wore the same straw hat for fifteen years, and was able at the same time to get more interest on a thousand dollar investment than almost anybody else in Wall street.

But Sage was an exception. And when he was just out of Troy, beginning his long climb in New York, he dressed more carefully.

The importance of good clothes is the confidence they inspire, not only in the wearer, but in those with whom he comes into contact.

The well dressed man impresses others with a belief in his competence. The man in rusty and baggy trousers is viewed with an eye of suspicion.

"If he is shiftless, why doesn't he dress well?" asks the world.

To the job seeker nothing is so much of an asset as appearance.

He need not be dressed as the writer of the fashions-for-men columns would dictate, but his clothes should be whole and clean, and not three or four years behind the style.

One reason for this is that competent men usually take a pride in their personal appearance and dress well. And the world takes its impressions from custom.

Of course, dressing too well is as bad as dressing too poorly. The flashily clad youth who wears cheap imitations of ultra stylish garments is usually set down as a tin horn gambler, or a horse race follower, and stands a small chance of getting any good job.

But the youth who is careful about buying and keeping his clothes, and who looks as well as he can, will get at least consideration. After that, provided there is any job to get, whether he gets it or not depends upon his manner. And his manner is sure to be the more impressive if he is well dressed than if he is shabbily clad.

YOUR HAND — How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies — the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

PREDISPOSITION TOWARD SELF-DESTRUCTION

WHILE the average student of psychology and reader of the times and will have, of course, few occasions to suspect his subject of a predisposition toward the commission of suicide, still it is well to enumerate the indications in the hand which have been found in the past to accompany such predisposition. Who can tell but, such signs being interpreted with accuracy, a rash act may not be averted?

Therefore, it is well to know that almonants have seen a tendency toward suicide in the following signs in the hand:

An exaggerated first phalanx of the second finger in a hand that is other wise weak. A mount of Jupiter underlying the first finger) that is exaggerated, with the line of the head joined to the line of health, also a poor line of fate and many lines crossing the latter. Or, if there be a star at the termination of the line of fate with another star on the mount of the moon. It is also an evil sign in the hand.

ASKING QUESTIONS

IN THE old days when it was just as much a part of the young girl's education to be taught what was called "good manners" as algebra or geography—more important for that matter—there was a prevailing notion that it was bad manners to ask questions. And when a woman indulged in pumping her friends and her neighbors it was usually concluded that she had not had the proper bringing up.

"Goodness knows," said an old-fashioned old lady to me the other day, "there are times when I would like to ask questions. I've got just as much curiosity as anyone else, but we were taught that it was not good manners. They train girls different nowadays. As a matter of fact they don't train them at all, and if a girl does not receive such instruction at home or does not have an instinctive feeling that it is bad form to ask personal questions she is pretty apt to acquire the pumpkin habit and to make herself a nuisance and mayhap a source of amusement.

Especially obnoxious are questions relating to prices. It is the height of rudeness to ask even an intimate friend how much she paid for anything, how much money she receives as a salary, or what she pays an employee.

Quite as obnoxious are personal questions concerning one's state of health. To be sure, it is only kind to ask sympathy for a friend's health, but to pry too closely into such things is extreme rudeness.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"MOB"

LIKE "sham," "mob" had its birth in one of the most disagreeable periods of English history; that between the restoration and the Revolution. It originated in a certain club in London toward the end of the reign of Charles II, for, says North, in his "Examen," "I must note that the rabble first changed their title and were called the 'mob' in the assemblies of the three Ribbonclubs, that is to say the head of horse, and was first 'mobile vulgus,' but fell naturally into the contraction of one syllable, and ever since is become proper English."

In spite of the writer's opinion as to the propriety of the word, we find in "The Spectator," at a considerable later period, the statement: "If the Britain mob, or mobile, will be pleased to hear the whole history of the man-monster formerly slain, which at present I shall only say is extant in a certain book of considerable value, . . . I could tell the world many more particulars concerning this strange creature, and particularly several remarkable stories about young women, naturally formed, as we say, with that three-fourths of his people very low extant true. Mobile, or vulgus, have taken up several ancient position in English, "mong is an all-wisable contraction, but "mob" has passed into the rank of the totally obsolete.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

FRANCES

FREEDOM is the significance of Frances, the name which is used interchangeably with only one letter's difference as a masculine and feminine appellation. It is derived from the Teutonic "frei," but, curiously enough, made its first appearance in a new approach to its present form in Italy where the son of an Italian merchant became so fluent as a French scholar that the baptismal name of Giovanni was lost to sight and he went by the term "Il Francesco" (The Frenchman). It was this same youth who later was canonized and founded the order of the Franciscan brotherhood.

The first feminine form of the name was the title of the unhappy lady whose doom was so exquisitely told by Dante in his romance of "Paolo and Francesca," which is one of the great love stories of literature. San Francesca di Roma was a devout housewife of great popularity in Italy and in 1200 there was a Francoise of fame at Cambria.

Frances came into being through Mary Tudor, who, in honor of Francois I, King of France, and in memory of her own brief rule on the throne of France, christened her first child Frances. She was the Lady Frances Brandon who established the name in the Tudor court and made it forever popular in England.

Francis and Frances were both used as feminine names without distinction in those days and Frank was the diminutive bestowed exclusively on English maids. The wife of the duke of Richmond was so called and history recalls that the duke would subdue her haughty pride on occasion by saying to her: "Frank, Frank, how long is it since thou wast married to Pranuel?" thus reminding her of an early elopement with a vintner. Lady Fanny Shirley was a famous English beauty whose baptismal name was undoubtedly Frances.

The sapphire is Frances' talismanic stone. It assures her successful accomplishment of any undertaking, preservation from evil, and fidelity in friends. Friday is her lucky day and seven her lucky number. The morning glory of contentment is her flower.

WHY? —

ARE HAT BANDS

FROM the inscriptions discovered on the walls of ancient temples it is apparent that, as far back as 3500 B. C., the Egyptian women used a band with streamers to fasten their hair, tying this in a bow at the back or side. This style was retained by many people, through many centuries, and in the Fourteenth century it was used as a "fillet"—merely a straight band without streamers, which held the hair away from the forehead and the eyes.

It was this fillet, itself an echo of the fashions of thousands of years ago, which gave rise to the streamered headdresses which were so much in vogue during the reign of James I, when, we are told, "Eudymion Porter wore his wife's di-mond necklace on his hat during a tour in Spain, but it appeared like paste beside the gorgeousness of the duke of Buckingham, who was the 'Mirror of France' (the finest diamond in England) with a little black feather on the side of his hat." This passion for expensive headgear passed with the waning of the styles of bright colors in men's clothing—but the hatband was retained because of its decorative qualities, and because men have become accustomed, through thousands of years, to seeing it worn in one form or another.

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

I CARE not what the future holds
For me alone. I only know
In summer time the sun shines cold
I'll do the best as on I go.
I'll face the future with a smile,
Content to meet whate'er may be;
And say to all I meet the while,
Today is good enough for me.

I may not win a golden store,
Nor ever achieve undying fame;
But I, at least, can strive the more
To squarely play life's little game.
I may not build a future great
Nor win renown upon the way;
But I, at least, can scoff at fate,
For I am master of today.

Not time, nor fate, nor circumstance
Can crush the hopes that in me lie;
The storms that rage, the lightning's glance,
But clear the atmosphere and sky.
I fear no future, for I know
Whate'er betide along life's way,
For me the flowers bloom and blow,
And I am master of today.

Come good, come ill, I will not yield
To sullen frown nor adverse grasp;
Whate'er betide along life's way,
For me the flowers bloom and blow,
And I am master of today.

THE KING SANDMAN STORY

GNOME AND THE FAIRY

ONCE upon a time there lived an Old Gnome, who called himself the King of the Gnomes because of his age. He never did any work and lived by stealing into the homes of the hard-working Gnomes, when they were away and taking what he could find.

One day, as he came up from the underground home of the Gnomes, he happened to sit down under a violet leaf at the very time one of the Fairies was resting in the violet blossom.

The little Fairy was on her way home from some work she had done for her Queen and was very tired, and fell asleep in the pretty violet. She dropped her magic wand on the ground and it was the wand that the Old Gnome saw first.

"Ah, there must be a Fairy about," said he, "I will creep out and look around."

Of course, he at once espied the pretty Fairy asleep and he decided to carry her off and hide her in his cave in a rock and make her his wife.

He knew full well that without her wand she could do nothing, and the wise Old Gnome picked that up and put it inside his coat before he took the sleeping Fairy from the violet.

Then clasping her in his arms, off he ran like the wind and when the Fairy opened her eyes she was in the cave and the Old Gnome sitting beside her.

"Where am I?" she asked, looking about, and then she discovered that she did not have her wand.

"You are in my cave, and I am the King of the Gnomes," said the Old Gnome. "You must become my wife for I have your wand and you cannot escape."

"With your wand you can do many things and I wish you to make this place pretty, such as I, who should live in and command all things which I wish to do," said she.

The little Fairy knew it was useless to refuse or make any outcry, for she knew that the Old Gnome had her in his power just as long as he had her wand, though for him it would not yield its magic power.

"Very well," said the little Fairy, meekly. "I will become your wife, but if we are to wed, why not have the wedding in the palace we are to live in and be married as befits your Majesty's station."

This flattered the Old Gnome so much that he decided that he would let he dressed in rich and royal robes for the wedding. So he gave the wand to the Fairy and told her to bring him his ragged brown clothes to velvet and gold.

As soon as the Fairy had the wand she waved it three times over the Old Gnome, repeating some magic words that only fairies know, but instead of the velvet and gold suit there appeared the shell of a turtle and the Gnome was no longer there. He had disappeared and a heavy-shelled turtle slowly crawled away.

Out of the cave fluttered the little Fairy and hurried to her Queen, to whom she told what had happened. "I was so sorry to use my power that way," she said, "but I could think of no other way to get away from the Old Gnome, and as turtles live to a very great old age I changed him into that shape.

So if you happen to find an old turtle some day and are told by some one who can tell the age of one that it is perhaps one hundred years old, don't be afraid. It was only the Old Gnome, who called himself the King of the Gnomes, and carried off the Fairy to his cave and was changed into a turtle for his wicked deed.

ATLAS PORTLAND CEMENT

PORTLAND cement requires expensive manufacturing machinery, delicate and accurate analysis, proportioning and supervision—it is probably the most costly of all building materials to manufacture. In use on the job it is one of the most economical.

To the building world it is what sugar is to the grocer—a staple product that must depend on volume for any profit at all. Your building material dealer is actually doing your community a favor when he stocks cement—it is an essential, and as such, pays for it.

But because it is an essential you can enable him to continue to stock it. There are a dozen small jobs, and perhaps some big ones, where you can most economically and profitably use concrete right now. You'll be surprised how cheaply it can be used.

Billie Dove

Billie Dove is a native of New York. After a short career as a model for some of the country's greatest illustrators she went on the stage. Recently she was engaged to appear at the head of distinguished casts in a special series of photoplays. She is but nineteen years old. Her eyes are large and expressive. She has light brown wavy hair.

YOUR HAND — How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies — the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

THE HAND OF A LAWYER

TO JUDGE whether a person is fitted for success in the profession of the law, note whether the hand possesses the following characteristics:

The second phalanx of the thumb (between the first or tall joint, and the rest of the hand) should be long, strong and well proportioned. This indicates good reasoning power, a logical mind, and strong intellect generally. Now, as the will power in a lawyer must be strong, if he or she is to attain any rank in the chosen profession, the first phalanx of the thumb must be markedly strong and well developed.

Next, proceed to an inspection of the line of the head. Necessarily, this must be good. Eloquence must accompany the successful career in the law and this is indicated by various signs, one of them being a decided line running between the second phalanx of the little finger and the third.

Mary: Old Sweetheart

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

At forty Mary Rochester was the loftiest spinster alive. She lived in an uptown flat, went to work every day, was manager of a large department of a large corporation, and drew a salary of $80 a week. Also, she kept a cat and a parrot.

"For goodness' sake, Mary, why don't you get married?" her friends would say.

"Thanks, but I haven't found the man yet who's a good substitute for eighty dollars a week," Mary would answer, laughing.

And nobody would have guessed that Mary Rochester had ever had a love affair. Nevertheless there were hours of loneliness when she remembered certain bygone days.

The setting was the seaside. Mary was twenty-three, less plump, more willowy, and the young man who had his arm round her was tall and slim and dark, and had expressive brown eyes.

"For ever and ever, sweetheart."

"For ever and ever."

Ah, well, they had drifted apart, and he had gone over and forgotten her. And perhaps it had all been for the best. Then Mary would come out of her trance and laugh, and tickle the cat's ears, to his indignation, and tease the parrot with a peanut.

Then, one day, she got a letter that set her heart beating the minute she saw the well-remembered writing upon the envelope. It was from James. He had done well out west, he wrote, and was returning east for a visit. He wondered whether she was married, and whether she had quite forgotten him. He had never married, he added.

Mary Rochester hesitated for several days, and then wrote that she hadn't forgotten him, and that she would be very pleased to see him, but not at her flat, as she lived alone.

He replied, making an appointment to meet her at a hotel, and they supper with her. Afterward they would go to the opera or the theater, as she preferred. There was a touch of sentimentality in his note that made Mary answer in quite a formal manner.

She would never have recognized the man in evening dress who was waiting for her. Where was the slim figure of yore? Where were the expressive brown eyes? Gone!—and in their place the retund body of middle age, and the eyes were clouded with the passage of years.

They sat down at a table, and he told her his life story during the meal. He was manager of a motor-car concern, had made tons of money, and was thinking of retiring. Perhaps he would not go back.

"Do you remember that evening at the beach?" he asked, touching her hand.

She withdrew it gently. "Yes," she answered. She laughed. "A girl doesn't forget her first proposal," she said.

"Nor her first?" asked James.

She felt herself reddening. She did not know what to do or say. There was a touch of the grotesque in this encounter. But—oh, those illusions that she had cherished, deep down in her breast, as middle-aged spinsters will!

"I suppose I'm no beauty myself," she reflected, surveying herself in the mirror.

They went to the theater and he saw her home in a taxi. He became sentimental. He had always been that, but sentimentality sat ungainly upon a boy than on a middle-aged man.

"I've had my adventure, Mary," he said, "but deep down in my heart there was always the memory of those days with you. For ever and ever. Do you remember?"

"No," answered Mary sharply.

As the taxi turned into her street he took her hand in his. "Mary, will you come back with me?" he asked. "I miss a wife. I want to settle down and we'll hit it off all right together. I want you to come back with me on Saturday."

Yet she hesitated. After all, it was her last chance, and almost anything is better than spinsterhood. For a few moments the struggle was anguished. Then the taxi stopped at her door.

"Good gracious, didn't I tell you I'm engaged?" she cried. "No, I'm afraid I can't, under the circumstances, can I? But I'm so glad to have seen you again, James. Good-by!"

In the desert of lost illusions Mary wandered that evening. She was very still, thinking. Then she put the memories of James clean out of her mind.

"He's better to have loved and lost than to have married the wrong man," said Mary.

Missing, said the cat, rubbing its head against her knees.

"My goodness, did I forget your milk?" asked Mary.

USUALLY the notow space appears at the narrow end of the boiled egg and exists because air is placed inside the egg in order that the little chicken may not suffer to death between the time it commences to live and the moment when it'll is strong enough to break the shell and dig its way out into the world.

The chick is ready to come out of the egg chamber as soon as it comes to life, therefore it needs but little air, little account for the small space of vacant within the shell. When the egg is boiled, the substances within it become hardened and fill exactly the space—thus forcing the air out toward one end of the shell and leaving a space which, when the shell is broken, appears a hard-boiled egg.

New Trespass Laws Confront Hunters

Amendments to the trespass law passed by the Legislature are attracting the attention of New Jersey sportsmen, as the opening hunting season opens.

The trespass law applies only to occupied lands. It makes it unlawful for any person, for the purpose of hunting or fishing, to cross over any such lands that are conspicuously posted against trespassers, or to trespass on such lands, even if unposted, after having been notified to leave by the owner or occupant. Any person guilty of a violation may be arrested without a warrant by the owner, occupant or licensee or any officer of the law.

In any persecution for violation of this act, the failure of the defendant to produce a written permit to hunt and fish on the lands of the plaintiff upon which he is charged with trespassing, signed by the owner, occupant, lessee or licensee thereof, can be taken as prima facie evidence that he was forbidden to trespass. A fine not exceeding $20 may be imposed, one half of which goes to the person making the arrest and one half to the Fish and Game Commission.

But knowing that it was an institution originated by common circumstances, and want and providence, and cemented by social feelings frequently indulged until they warmed into a feeling of fishing, to such a degree that the low great principals would be found to exist, and measures for carrying them out be successfully improved. The system of boiling laborers at a land and under a government shop, hard handed industrious men esteemed as the lowest class in point of rank and wealth are greater than we have the least idea of. Their daily labor hardly suffices to procure the unlady bread for the laborers family, aunt and help sides, sand was not far off. When fishing, wealth to them is a literal poverty, to toil for bread, they lacked means to seek employment elsewhere and were kept in their original state.

WHO WILL BE MAYOR?

Who for Mayor and Councilmen?

The next political campaign in Palmyra will be very interesting and the future welfare of the town will be vitally involved.

The Councilmen, all active, should be able and representative men from all parts of town. No one district must try to get more than its share.

The Mayor, upon whose shoulders will rest the greatest responsibility, will be the key to the success of the Borough government, and his selection must be made with the greatest care and with the utmost regard for the welfare of the town.

If possible, this office should fall by almost unanimous consent to some man pre-eminently fitted for the discharge of its duties.

The Mayor must be actively effective. He must be of strong character and keen intelligence. He should be just and fair to the fullest extent that the phrase implies.

It would also be well that he be fitted to preside at public occasions and able to speak well in public.

Further, it would add much to his availability for the office if he has lived in Palmyra long enough to have a wide acquaintance by the citizens of Palmyra. It is my greatest ambition to merit your confidence by future service.

PALMYRA NOTES

As an outgrowth of the Commission on Leadership at the National Convention at Hot Springs the Board of Directors of the Burlington County Y.W.C.A are planning a two-day mission for volunteer workers at the Y.W.C.A. Whistle Inn, Brown's Mills, the 13th and 14th of November. Board and committee members as well as those interested in the work of the Association are urged to save these dates, as a valuable and worth-while program is being planned.

A surprise party was given Miss Louise Fisher, of Berkeley Avenue, last week by her little girl friends. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spong, the Misses Florence Ulm, Spong, Pearl Gilbert, Alice Hopkinson, Rose Race, Anna Randall, Janice Shontz, Dorothy Wilkinson, Mildred Mercy, Betty Stevens, Hazel Heine, Dorothy Stanton, Dorothy Goodwin, Dorothy Hall, Emily Hall, Margaret Hall, Laura Marshall, Margaret Rhodes, Virginia Zayotti, Bernice Cobb, Master Wendell Lippincott, Master Willis Cooper, Jr., Master Eugene and Edwin Fisher and Miss Louise Fisher. After playing a number of novel and enjoyable games, lunch was served. All had a most enjoyable time.

Mr. Bacharach Says:

Atlantic City, November 8.

Editor The Weekly News:

I have no comment to make upon the results in New Jersey. The people have spoken through their ballots, and the verdict must be accepted. So far as I am personally concerned, I feel very much honored by the very large vote which I received in all counties of my district; it a magnificent expression of confidence reposed in me by my constituents, and I am deeply sensible of its concurrent responsibilities. In once more accepting the trust bestowed, I renew the only pledge which I made in the campaign—to continue to serve my constituents, individually and collectively, to the very limit of my ability. I am especially gratified with the vote which I received in Burlington County, and I am availing myself of the courtesy of your paper to make publicly my deep thanks to all those good people of this county who supported me at the polls on election day; and after all no greater honor can come to any man than to receive the approbation of his fellow citizens as expressed by their secret ballots, and I very humbly, but none the less deeply, appreciate this honor.

ISAAC BACHARACH.

Thanks

I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the support accorded me at the recent election by the citizens of Palmyra. It is my greatest ambition to merit your confidence by future service.

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

MY WANTS

I DO not want a fortune great;
I do not seek the cares of state,
With all their glitter and their glare,
And wicked schemes afloat in air.
I do not yearn for power or place;
Nor would I take part in the race
For gold—I only ask that I
May sow good will while passing by;
And that when I ag laid below
The cool, green sod, where daisies blow,
Some one will pause a bit, and then
Declare: "He helped his fellowmen."

I do not covet mansions grand,
Nor acres broad on every hand;
I do not yearn for jewels bright,
To dazzle my poor neighbor's sight;
I do not yearn to take command,
And order men on every hand—
I only ask that I may go
Along a road where flowers blow,
And dying, have men pause and say;
"He scattered sunshine all the way."

Let others dig and delve for gold;
Let others plave of power hold;
Let others with a beetly air,
Stand forth within the limelight's glare;

Let others trade on hopes and fears,
And profit by the sobs and tears
Of those they wreck. I only ask
The strength to do each daily task,
Then homeward go with heart elate
And greet my loved ones at the gate;
Then, dying, have men pause a while
And say: "He gave the world a smile."

Something to Think About

By E. A. WALKER

BEND OF THE ROAD

WHETHER in the work-a-day world, in the lecture room, or in some chosen field of diversion where honor is at stake, you may sometimes become depressed at your slow progress in attaining your heart's fondest wishes.

Your friends seem to go sailing on favorable tides, while you are beset by adverse currents and opposing gales. Or you may be doggedly climbing steep hills while they are striding merrily on a level road with the wind at their back, the sunshine playing hide-and-seek among the gleaming leaves, while the birds redouble their songs in a give encouragement and make the journey pleasant.

Ferret-faced men and bobbed-haired, spectacled girls are making their mark, while you with your good looking features, your stout and healthy body, of which you are admittedly vain, seem all the while to be dirting with open failure, unable to dodge it, in spite of your desire to do so.

Or again, in your frequent moods of dejection, you may fancy that Fate has a grudge against you, and is fully determined to hold you in bondage until the final farthing has been paid, all of which, if you will soberly reflect, is but an absurd phantasm of the mind.

If you have good sense without vanity, a persevering mind and a disposition to "live and let others live" with a fair amount of energy, there is no reason at all why you should complain.

Just to console yourself in such matters, compare your temperament, manners, industry and dress with those upon whom you feel you look with scowling eyes and envious heart.

After such an examination, if you should find a deficiency banish it, summon all your resolution and press forward on the right road. Let no impediment oppress you. To overcome obstacles you must climb over them or seek another course. Do this persistently, faithfully and without faltering, for there is a bend in the road just beyond, where the signboard tells you, as it has been told thousands of others, which way you should go.

Those whom you have been envying, those plain persons whose presence you shun, have within them a fine nobility of soul, which you might with profit to yourself initiate and acquire if you go about it in the right spirit and possibly in the end beat them to the goal.

The Rising Generation.

Truly this is the age of "Missouri" and even babes and sucklings have to be "shown."

A Portland business woman living in an East side apartment has made a loyal subject of her landlord's five-year-old son. The woman has had extensive stage experience and her bedtime stories are over entertainingly. By way of variety and in the interest of culture a recent narrative was the tragic history of Adam and Eve, told with dramatic fidelity to the record. Noting a brown silence on the part of the small auditor at the conclusion of the story, the woman said: "Well, how do you like that story; isn't it a good one?"

"Noooo," slowly and reflectively replied the venerable critic, "I—I—I—I—I—publish—Portland Oregonian.

Sentimental Interest.

"Any spots of interest around this burg?"

"Do you see that little knoll over there just above the creek."

"Yes."

WHAT TO EAT

DISHES for luncheon that are not too filling will be found in the following:

Ham and Noodles.

Butter an earthen baking dish, put into the bottom a layer of cooked noodles, add a layer of cold boiled ham cut into small bits, then another layer of noodles. Repeat until the dish is full. Beat one egg, add one cupful of milk and pour into the dish. Cover with crumbs, dot with butter and bake in a moderate oven.

Baked Sausages With Rice.

Cut pork sausages into thin slices. Butter a baking dish and fill with cold boiled rice. Season the rice with season in which beef extract has been dissolved. Spread the sliced sausages over the rice and bake in a hot oven until the slices are crisp.

Baked Eggs With Cheese.

Make toast of rounds of bread which have been cut nearly through with a smaller cutter and the centers thus made hollowed out. Mix grated cheese and butter in equal parts and stir constantly, faithfully and without faltering, for there is a bend in the road just beyond, where the signboard tells you, as it has been told thousands of others, which way you should go.

Those whom you have been envying, those plain persons whose presence you shun, have within them a fine nobility of soul, which you might with profit to yourself initiate and acquire if you go about it in the right spirit and possibly in the end beat them to the goal.

Pimiento and Cheese Roast.

Put three pimientoes and two cupfuls of cooked Lima beans through the meat chopper with a cupful of a pound of cream cheese. Mix well, add enough bread crumbs to form into a soft ball and bake 30 minutes. Baste frequently with water and butter. Serve with bacon gravy or tomato sauce.

Bordeaux Pudding.

Cut a sponge cake into three layers, spread with jam, put together, cover with sweetened and flavored whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped nuts. Serve with cream, whipped or plain.

Graham Gems.

Take one cupful each of sour milk and graham flour, one-half teaspoonful of soda, a little salt, one egg well beaten, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and three of shortening. Bake in well-greased gem pans.

Excellent German "Bull."

It seems there is a German "bull" as well as an Irish. Here is a specimen from the crown prince's memoirs: Von Bethmann-Hollweg remarks to Herr Hallin of the Hamburg-American: "I only wish I were dead." And Herr Hallin replies: "I dare say you do. No doubt it would suit you admirably to lie in your coffin all day and watch other people toiling and worrying."

WHY?—

IS BALANCE WHEEL OF A WATCH MADE OF DIFFERENT METALS

THE balance-wheel is the heart of a watch. Upon it depends the operation of the other parts of the complicated mechanism. Should this wheel is perfectly constructed and made so as to withstand varying changes in temperature it will not pulsate accurately and will soon cause the watch to vary so that it loses or gains time.

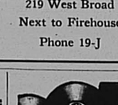

On account of the different temperatures which the ordinary watch must withstand, it is necessary that the balance-wheel be made of metals which expand and contract at rates which offset each other. For this reason the wheel itself is made of finely tempered steel, while, set around the rim in such a manner as to preserve perfect balance, are bits of brass which act as a check upon the expansion or contraction of the steel. When it is remembered that the balance-wheel of a watch pulsates back and forth some 432,000 times a day and that the delicate mechanism must be so adjusted as to withstand changes of temperature ranging from body-heat to a number of degrees below zero, it will be seen that precautions such as the use of at least two metals are essential to the operation of a watch which will keep perfect time.

Clay Pipe Set English Fashion.

It was the clay pipe which set the tobacco smoking fashion in England about 350 years ago. It is believed that the first American Indian tobacco pipe was taken to England by Ralph Lane, first governor of Virginia, in 1586. He gave this pipe to Sir Walter Raleigh.

The pipe making industry grew so rapidly in England that in 1619 there was a guild of pipe makers in London. Clay was the material of which these pipes were made. The clay was pressed into iron molds with a wire through the stem, which was drawn out before baking. The pipes like to the ones were "fresh," but so lightly that the clay remained quite soft and porous.

DO YOUR BIT

NOW is the season for parties of company, for week-end guests and for excursions to pay protracted visits to country cousins. And you will find that it is not always the elegant dressed and silted person, the girl who talks best or the man who dances most perfectly, the one who tells the funniest story or plays the best pastime, who is the most welcome guest or who is urged again and again to come back.

It is the guest who does his part and a little more who is always popular with the members of the house-hold upon whom devolves the task of running the house. And especially it is the one who never shirks who wins popularity for himself or herself. In these days when one can never count on steady servants as we could once there is always the possibility that guests will have to turn to and help wash the dishes.

If I am not going to turn in and do the work of a kitchen maid," grumbles the guest when the hotel help have all just walked out, "I didn't come here to work and I'm not going to." But that isn't the question. You wouldn't be doing the work of some striking kitchen worker. You would be helping in an all-around way to keep things going as usual.

So, if you are off with others, whether in a hotel or boarding house or whether you are merely with friends, be sure that you don't shirk your duties. Don't wait for others always to do the careful, graceful thing.

HOT WEATHER HABITS

IS IT not true that our civilized manners are tested in warm weather, and that there is a strong temptation to forget some of the little refinements of life that we possess just because we are civilized?

But the truth of the matter is that the very thing that makes warm weather endurable in office, store or home is the exertion on the part of the individuals to keep up their standard of good manners, and to remember that though the thermometer stands at ninety, more or less, they are civilized none the less.

Considerable self-control needs to be exerted. In the first place don't tell people just how warm you feel. Having exchanged a perfunctory comment or so anent the state of the weather let it go at that. To tell your associates just how the thermometer stood in your bedroom last night, how many baths you took between office closing yesterday and office opening this morning, how little you ate as a result of the heat and how much iced tea you had to consume, just makes other people think all the more about the heat and it doesn't help you at all.

You may not be able to help looking hot, but you don't have to look untidy as a result of the heat. It is better to wear a thin suit than to wear a heavier one in various stages of removal; better for the young woman in the office to wear a short sleeved open-necked blouse than another sort of blouse with the collar and sleeves tucked away.

A great deal more leniency is allowed men nowadays in warm weather. There are still some business offices where shirt sleeves are not allowed to remove their coats in office hours, but these are the exceptions. If we do have to pass through periods of almost tropical heat we should be allowed to adopt somewhat the costume of other civilized folk in tropical climes. Hence the palm leaf suit for men, soft comfortable collars and light weight suits are no longer looked upon as unsuitable or freakish in most of our cities.

But whatever else you do, remember that the chances are that you are made no more uncomfortable than the others with whom you associate. If you grumble none it means that you have self-control; it means that you are not playing the game as well as you should and also, moreover, that you are making the task of getting through the warm weather, which at worst is of short duration, all the harder for yourself and for those around you.

The Reading of the Riddle

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

"Dear, was it really you or I?
In truth the riddle's ill to read,
So many are the deaths we die
Before we can be dead indeed."
—W. E. Henley.

THE town of Willow Creek lies at the junction of a rivulet of that name, with the Big Muddy. But the people of that community being born scoffers, have changed the name of the Big Muddy in common parlance to "Mud Crick," and, transformed by the alchemy of popular depreciation, the name of the town itself has shriveled into "Willer Creek." It might have been something of a town, as towns go in the West, but instead of pulling with his neighbors for the success of the town, each of its founders spent his time making fun of the pretensions of others. When there was talk on the part of "old man" Mead, the primeval postmaster, of securing the government land office for Willow Creek, the Indian trader, and the saloonkeeper, and the blacksmith, made great sport of the old man's ambition. A few years later, when civilization had crowded in with a hotel, a lumber yard, a new saloon, and a barber shop, someone spoke of starting a newspaper; but the laugh that went up from Willow Creek was the only unanimity that greeted Editor McCray when his back was turned. But the newspaper came, and so did the people, and they kept coming, until, when the "boom" of the later eighties struck Kansas, it found Willow Creek with about two thousand seedling inhabitants.

But, in one way or another, the "boom" seemed to bring wealth to Willow Creek. And with wealth, came some attempts at the organization of polite society. There were innumerable young, real estate agents, young doctors, young lawyers, and clerks, all from the East, in the village; and these, with the daughters of the early settlers and such friends as they chanced to make in the high school, constituted the aristocracy of the town. It was a vulnerable aristocracy, and the scoffers made and havoc with it.

It was said of Flora McCray, who went to boarding school and came back, timid, retiring, and distinctly unsocial, that, "She needn't hold her self so high. If her father would only pay back the money he stole in the school land fraud she would be as common as anybody." But the girl paid no heed to these rumors, if she heard them. She quietly filled her small sphere, bounded on one side by her meek-voiced mother and her busy father, on another side by her church and her "church social," on a third side by a very brief glimpse of a very big world and her memory of it, and on the fourth side by occasional day dreams and night thoughts, pretty much the same as those which come to any young girl of good health, good spirits, and twenty-one years, who has never had a sweetheart.

As the reaction, caused by the decadence of real estate prices set in, Willow Creek became poorer. As the young men, who paid for the orchestras, and balls, and flowers, gradually left town, the young women, who for merely frequented receptions, parties and balls, were seen more and more often at the "church socials." After a two years' ineffectual struggle Willow Creek gave it up, the town could no longer support two branches of society, and the "church crowd" and the "dance crowd" merged into one.

When it was announced that the entire social body of Willow Creek was going out to Robinson's for a "taffy pull" one Saturday night, the part of Willow Creek laughed. The town people sneered at the young women who had planned the party, and intimated that the night ride out to Robinson's and back was a heroic measure; and they laughed at old man Robinson and his family for tolerating people who would snub them if they came to town, and lastly they laughed at the young men who would have to pay the livery bills.

Saturday morning, John Howard, Mr. McCray's partner in the stock business, came up from the farm on Dry Creek, and after going over some details of business, McCray asked his partner to Sunday dinner, as was his custom, when the young man was in town, and the invitation was accepted. During the "boom" Howard had made money, had mingled with what is known as the "swell set" of Willow Creek, and though not a favorite at the flood of the "boom," the very fact that he had the social instinct, made him a necessity in society at its ebb.

Soon after leaving his partner's office, he had learned of the plans for the "taffy pull," that evening. He was inzed to go, and finding that all the "rigs" were full, and that all the girls of his "set" were provided with escorts, in a moment of despairing inspiration the young man sent a note to his partner's daughter, asking for "the pleasure of her company." His invitation was accepted, and late that afternoon, Flora McCray stepped into a buggy with the first beau she had ever had, and headed a long procession for Robinson's.

• • • • • • • •

Someone had stopped the clock that night, and the young women, putting on their wraps, guessed that it was nearly midnight, when the "taffy pull" at Robinson's broke up. As Flora McCray sat alone in the Robinson parlor waiting to hear the grinding of wheels across the graveled path that would herald her escort's buggy, she went over the evening's impressions in her mind. She decided that it had been a very pleasant evening. She had never have been so thoroughly surprised as was Mr. McCray, when his daughter said to him, "Father, if Mr. Howard says anything to you about me, you will tell him—that—I cannot marry him."

McCray and his daughter were walking along the narrow, rough sidewalk toward the church, when these words were spoken. The mother had stepped back, and was not in hearing distance. McCray could not find voice for a few exclamatory "whys" and "whens" before his daughter had said firmly, "You will be sure, won't you, father?" and was waiting for her mother to catch up with them. After the excitement, Flora and her mother monopolized them, hurried home to attend to the feast of the day.

At the dinner table the young people met for the first time that day. Flora McCray felt keenly, and with a twinge of anguish, that the young man's cordial suavity in greeting her was only inspired by gratitude for her generosity in releasing him from any obligation.

She met his eye, and though she read there a recollection of everything that had been. Then, as she looked down and away, all the sweetness and unreality of the night's ride was made real to her.

After dinner the men went into the parlor, where they smoked and talked, alone, while the women put away the best china, afraid to trust it to the "hired girl." Finally, young Howard and Mr. McCray thought that the evening must need be in and disentangled. They put on their overcoats and were in the hall, when the elder man opened the dining-room door and said:

"Mother, John thinks it's time to go, and I am going to walk down to the post office with him."

When the front door closed Mrs. McCray said:

"What a nice young man John How-

She Came Even Closer to This New Found Presence, and Almost Cuddled Against the Man's Great Coat.

ard is, isn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he is nice enough, I guess," answered the daughter, rising to go to her room.

As she neared the top of the stairs, Flora McCray quickened her pace. She ran through the upper hall. Once in her room, she went straight to the dresser, where the rumpled hat was still lying. The lonely girl stood before it a moment, and then, stooping awkwardly, touched the crumpled velvet with pursed, uncertain lips, as one ashamed. It may have been the dusk in the room, or it may have been the ghost of an odor from a cigar, that transported this unschooled heart back to the darkness, and the joy of a first caress. But dusk, or ghost, or something, came to this shy girl there, and moved her whole being, so that she was no longer awkward, no longer uncertain, nor in any wise ashamed. The pretty velvet top she made her shrine, and in her worship she kissed it, rubbed it with her burning cheek, and buried her face in its sacred folds.

In Willow Creek where they scoff and niggle over sordid things, in Willow Creek the hard, the arid, the barren, they say—no matter what, but in and out of the narrow ways, turning the sharp corners with the rest, with tired feet, and tiredly, babble—there goes a woman whose womanhood came to her as a dream—in the night.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 12

JESUS THE GREAT TEACHER

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:20-49.
GOLDEN TEXT—Even a wise would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6:31.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Matt. 5:1-48; John 13:34, 35; 14:21-24.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Teaching Us to Love Everybody.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Living by the Golden Rule.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Golden Rule in Everyday Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Teaching Us How to Live To-

1. Characteristics of the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 20-26).

Only those who are subjects of the Kingdom know what blessedness is. The spiritual experience of the subjects of the Kingdom are marked by the following steps:

1. Poverty of Spirit (v. 20). This means consciousness of one's lost condition and worthlessness. It is spiritual bankruptcy. It means to come to the end of self and to show sorrow for sins.

2. Hunger for Righteousness (v. 21). The one who has come to know his poverty desires the true righteousness of Christ.

3. Weeping Because of His Lack (v. 21). This is the godly sorrow which worketh repentance (II Cor. 7:10). Those who thus sorrow are assured that they shall laugh.

4. Treatment Which the Subjects of the Kingdom May Expect (vv. 22, 23). When the subjects of the Kingdom become like the King they incite the hatred, contempt and persecution of the world. Those who pass through this for Christ's sake should rejoice, for there is great reward laid up for them.

II. The Governing Principles of the Kingdom (vv. 27-36).

1. Love Your Enemies (v. 27). To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature.

2. Do Good to Those Who Hate You (v. 27). Love acts according to its own nature. Enmity only stimulates love to act in harmony with its own laws.

3. Bless Them That Curse You (v. 28). Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged.

4. Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You (v. 28). Christ's own example is the best commentary on this precept (Luke 23:34; cf. Acts 7:60).

5. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury (v. 29). The Christian is not to bristle up in defense of his rights, but rather to suffer loss, wait, lay aside ego. This should not be pressed so far that evildoers can go unchecked. It expresses the law which should govern individual action.

6. Give to Every One That Asketh (v. 30). This does not necessarily mean that the thing asked for should be given. We should give to every one that asketh, but not necessarily the thing asked for.

7. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31). This is called the "Golden Rule." If men were to live by this rule the labor problem would be solved. An end would be put to war. International relations would be peaceful; strikes and all profiteering in business would end.

8. Be Merciful (v. 36). The mercy is the image of Father in the grand example.

III. Censorious Judgment Condemned (v. 37). We should not seek out the evil in others for our satisfaction.

10. Danger of Following Blind Teachers (v. 39). The one who does not know God and the way to heaven will lead others to ruin. Happily, we have the Scriptures, and the Holy Spirit is ready to make their meaning known, so there is no excuse.

11. Those Who Reprove Others Should Strive to Live Blameless Lives (vv. 41-46). It is easy to see others' faults, but hard to see our own.

12. The Sin of Profession Without Fruits (v. 46). The one who professes a life and fellowship with God should practice the principles which reveal the nature of God.

III. The Judgment to Be Applied to the Subjects of the Kingdom (vv. 47-49).

1. The one who hears and does the sayings of Christ the King shall be as secure as the house built upon the solid rock. The storms of the judgment cannot destroy him, for the Rock of Ages is immovable.

2. The one who hears and does not the sayings of Christ shall be overwhelmed in the judgment and go down to utter ruin and destruction.

GOOD EATING

CARROTS are a valuable food and recent discoveries have proven that they contain the soluble vitamine so necessary for growth and health. Carrots in soup and salads, as a vegetable by themselves or in pie, as pickles and conserves—who shall call them the humble vegetable?

Carrot Pie.

Take one cupful of mashed cooked carrots, one cupful of milk, one well beaten egg, three tablespoonfuls of molasses, salt, mace, cinnamon and ginger to taste and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Fill the crust and bake as pumpkin pie

Carrot Pudding.

Take one cupful each of raw ground carrots and apples, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful each of brown sugar and molasses, one cupful of ground suet, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one cupful of flour, one-half cupful of bread crumbs, one-half teaspoonful each of nutmeg, cloves, cinnamon and soda. Mix and steam two and one-half hours. Serve with an egg sauce.

Carrot Sponge.

Take one cupful of grated raw carrot, one-third of a cupful of sugar, one of milk, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, the white of an egg, salt and vanilla to taste. Heat the milk and add the sugar. Soak the gelatin in four tablespoonfuls of water, dissolve over heat, then add the milk. Set the mixture aside until it begins to harden around the edges. Beat it well with an egg beater and add the grated carrot, vanilla and fold in the well beaten egg white; turn into a mold. Serve with a soft custard.

Orange and Carrot Marmalade.

Take six medium sized carrots, three oranges, one lemon. Juice and grind. Dice and cook the carrot in as little water as possible until tender. Cut the oranges and lemon in small pieces. Measure the carrot and fruit and add a pint of sugar to each pint. Simmer until clear. Use care that no seeds of the fruit are left in the mixture. Turn into jelly glasses and when cold seal with paraffin.

Carrot and Apple Salad.

Take one cupful each of grated carrot and apple, one small onion, grated, a stalk of celery finely chopped, one-fourth cupful of walnut meats broken in bits, salt, pepper and a highly seasoned boiled dressing. Let stand to season for an hour or more and serve on lettuce with a spoonful of mayonnaise.

The Sandman Story

YOUNGSTER'S LESSON

YOUNGSTER wasn't a little puppy. He was past that age, but still he was a young dog and had many things to learn. Mrs. Old Dog, his mother, tried her best to teach Youngster the things that a useful dog should know, but Youngster thought he knew enough.

If his mother told him not to run after the master when he started off with a gun he did not pay any attention, and often got a whipping from the master for not going back when he told him to.

Then, too, Youngster would jump up on folks when they came to the farm, and Mrs. Old Dog told him many times never to make friends with strangers, and besides with your own friends it was very bad manners indeed to jump and put muddy paws on people's clothes.

One day his mother told him that he must be very careful not to go back of the barn, for the master had placed a trap there for Mr. Fox to step on when he came to visit the barnyard.

He Saw a Strange Dog.

But Youngster let this advice go in one ear and out the other, as he did much of other warnings that his mother gave. He began to play and forgot all about it.

Youngster had heard a great deal about Mr. Fox, but no one had said how he looked. He thought of course he would know this bad fellow when he met him, and of course Youngster intended to catch him and show his mother and the master how smart he was in spite of all they said about him—that he was a silly puppy and did not seem to learn a thing.

It was late in the afternoon one day when his mother was sound asleep and some of the hens were sitting under bushes in the shade that Youngster began running around the barn chasing a rat.

When he got behind the barn he forgot all about the rat, for there, looking at him from behind a barrel, he saw a strange dog. Youngster barked.

"Hush! I know where there is a bone," whispered the stranger. "Come over here."

Youngster wagged his tail in a very friendly manner and ran up to the stranger. "Where is it?" he asked, thinking the newcomer was a most generous fellow.

"Right under that pile of grass and leaves and twigs," was the answer. "You will have to walk right on it and paw it away, but it is under there somewhere, I feel sure."

Youngster did not wait to hear any more. He ran straight to the heap and began pawing, while the stranger looked on with great interest, for it was Mr. Fox, you see, and he wanted to find out for sure if there was a trap set for him, and if so he must go around the other way that night when he came to visit.

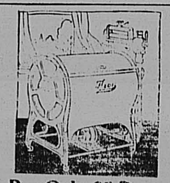

Youngster had not pawed long before something snapped and held him fast by one front paw, and it hurt so that Youngster's cries must have been heard for a long distance.

"Just as I suspected," said Mr. Fox, and with a bound he was off, for Mrs. Old Dog and all the hens and chickens and Mr. Rooster came running around the barn to see what in the world had happened.

The master came, too, and he opened the cruel trap and set Young ster free, but the paw was very painful for some time, and while he sat in the sun holding it up, his mother told him many things which went in at both ears and stayed there, for when he recovered Youngster was a wise dog and never gave his mother or the master cause to call him a silly puppy again. But it took a very painful lesson to make him wise, don't you think so?

HOSPITAL FOR JERSEY FIREMEN

Organization of the State Takes Up Project in Hope of Early and Complete Success.

HONOR GEN. SPENCER AGAIN

Primary Costs Lots of Cash—Senator Frelinghuysen Has Spent $25,979 and Record $24,429—Governor's Expenditures Not Shown.

Trenton.—A hospital for sick and otherwise incapacitated firemen of the state has been recommended by the executive committee of the State Firemen's Association, in session at Atlantic City, General W. Bird Spencer, president of the association, has made a fervent plea for the erection of such an institution, which he believes will then be on the grounds of the firemen's home at Boonton.

Among the resolutions adopted by the convention was one supporting the old-age pension established by the Atlantic City aerie of Eagles at its meeting last spring. The firemen will appoint a committee to arrange for an annual parade in connection with the convention. It also indorsed a bill in the legislature seeking to have the point a committee to arrange for an appropriation elected by the convention as a whole instead of appointed by the governor, as heretofore. At the present time the board consists of one representative from each congressional district. The matter of raising the death benefit of the association from $400 to $1,000 was left in the hands of the executive committee with full power to act.

Amid rousing cheers General Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic, was re-elected president for his forty-fifth term, being head of the organization ever since it was organized. George T. Everitt, of Hackettstown, was re-elected financial secretary for his thirty-fourth term, and William Exall, of Newark, secretary for his twenty-third year. Other officers re-elected were: Treasurer, T. Hewell Johnson, of Bloomfield; assistant secretaries, Evan F. Bennett, of Morristown, and Ralph T. Hofman, of New Brunswick.

More than 800 delegates, representing 500 associations with an aggregate membership of more than 15,000 attended the convention. The treasurer's report showed total assets of $2,874,618.00.

Primary Is Followed by Fire

United States Senator Frelinghuysen has expended thus far in his campaign for renomination $25,979.70 according to a preliminary settlement filed with the Secretary of State. Supplemental statements also may be filed twenty days after the primaries. Total contributions received aggregate $32,400. Mr. Frelinghuysen gave $50,000 of this amount.

George L. Record, who is opposing Senator Frelinghuysen, received and expended $24,429.03. This amount has been exceeded or nullified or incurred in aid of the Record candidacy, according to the campaign statement.

Governor Edwards, as Democratic candidate for United States senator and various aspirants to Congressional seats from New Jersey, filed statements of pre-primary campaign expenses with Secretary of State Martin.

Receipt of contributions amounting to $400 were recorded by Governor Edwards, whose statement showed no expenditures.

Rising Cost of Illness

Physicians of Trenton have come to the conclusion that "the cost of living is paid; that this condition is intolerable, and have taken steps to remedy it. The doctors have accordingly sailed letters to the "trade" giving formal notice that prices are about to be jacked up. From now on every time a patient drags a rheumatic limb to the doctor's office it will cost him $2, instead of $1, as in the past. Then, if he should be so thoughtless as to walk, sail, sightfull to be with acute inflammation of the [illegible] bank roll will be stricken to the extent of $5, which is a loss from $2.

Margin For Realty Board

The New Jersey Real Estate Commission filed its annual report with Governor Edwards covering the period between September 6 and June 30, to the end of the 1921-1922 fiscal year. The report shows that the commission collected $42,625.00 in fees and expended all but $5,618.37, principally in salaries and expenses.

The members of the commission are: Frank Stevens, of Jersey City, president; Vincent D. Bradley, of Trenton, secretary, and Michael A. Devine, of Atlantic City. They received compensation at the rate of $25 for each day devoted to the work; also expenses. Mr. Stevens collected $6,400 in salary; Mr. Bradley, $2,112.50, and Mr. Devine, $3,312.50.

The commission's financial report shows fees paid amounting to $43,000, necessitating a tax of $10 per brokers' $2,625. In fact, for each salesman's license, and $. $0 in miscellaneous receipts, a total of $52,425.50. Total disbursements amount to $45,807.00, leaving a balance of $6,538.37. The commission raised $943 for contingencies, making a net balance of $5,618.37.

No Funds For Paving

Continued inactivity of the Burlington County Traction Company through leaving its tracks unpaved and a menace to travel on two important blocks of High street will result in the city of Burlington seeking an injunction to restrain the operation of the company's cars within the city limits, local officials notified the company. Several months ago the company has left an open ditch in the center of the main thoroughfare between Fenwick and Wood streets, which run its tracks, claiming it is without sufficient funds to complete the paving.

Councilmen who declared that with the approach of fall and winter condition will become an increased menace for he safety of the public are determined to get action or stop the trolley cars. Council has directed City Solicitor Watts to advise the traction officials to this effect. The company operates a line between Burlington and Moorestown, via Mount Holly.

Officials of the Reading Railway and the Gloucester City Chamber of Commerce made a tour of inspection of the Gloucester river front to consider the advisability of a belt line and a drawbridge over Newton creek. It was agreed that a belt line can be built easily and that a drawbridge would make the creek useful for navigation and boom land along its banks.

From Birth Through School Period

A continuous child hygiene program, extending from before birth to through the school period is the New Jersey standard set by Dr. Lerry, and the effort has been to reach the small communities and rural districts. Statistics tabulated in the State Health Department show the practical working of a scheme aiming to use all local machinery possible and at the same time to lift the cost of supervision from the local units, leaving the their funds free for actual welfare work, and at the same time ending the unsatisfactory conditions to avoid waste through duplication.

The waste in duplication, Dr. Lerry has pointed out, is not merely a matter of expending more money, but is a waste in that the mother may be confused by receiving advice from one nurse who visits her to advise as to the care of an infant and a child near school age and instructions from an other who comes from the educational authorities in the interest of older children at school. Also the child will fare better, it is thought, if it is cared for always by the same supervision through its infancy and on into its school life.

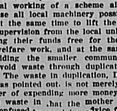

Census Nurse

Statistics recorded at the bureau show that during last year there were under its active supervision 17,000 infants of whom about 10,000 were born last year; 2,700 expectant mothers and 50,000 school children. Deaths of babies less than a year old for the entire state were at the rate of 75.6 per 1,000 births, while the rate for infants supervised by the bureau was 54.2.

In a statement recently issued by the Federal Children's Bureau it is stated that in this country "each year 28,000 mothers die in bringing children into the world. Almost that number will die this year unless prompt action is taken by local authorities and the people to call for Federal Government." This is one of the few states nave not availed themselves on in the state and which will be continued with the aid given under the Sheppard-Towner act. The results of pre-natal supervision on such death rates is indicated by these figures—a reduction in the rate in the whole are one in every 170, while those who have had the advantage of supervision show one death out of 555.

Lionheart, the Champion

By JOHN PALMER

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

His name was Leonard, and he was a champion, but they called him Lionheart for some reason that has long been forgotten. He was seventy years of age, a patriarchal beard flowed over his breast, his long locks, white as snow, hung about his shoulders.

He was the father, a shabby-attired young man of the same race, sat sipping coffee at the same table in Engel's cafe. strange things happen in obscure parts of New York. Very few in the long history of the world's chess championship of America was to be contested in Engel's in the forthcoming evening, but after hour the kind of special event would long about the greasy tables and catch now to absorption. Lionheart was never to receive their encomiums.

He was a young woman, pretty in a sullen, ordinary way, sat beside young Isaacs, and her head was bent him, and listened attentively to the conversation, occasionally interposing with some remark that was matched that of the men. Her name was Lodelaska Platonius, [illegible] Post - Impressionism, [illegible] Impressionism.

Then Lionheard dollars, Yankov," she whispered to the young man as he approached the table and sat down. "You can beat him, sure, you got his grip now. Then we get married and have our clothing from Sey."

Yankov Isaacs nodded, and turned the conversation to the patriarch began to speak.

"Well, Isaacs, if you win, I bear you no malice," he said. "Twenty years I've been the champion. I hoped for the honor of the city—five thousand dollars is not to be sneezed at, and it means that farm in Vineland Rosie and boy looked forward to. Ach, if only they'd played for such stakes in my young days I'd be a rich man! But the [illegible] was not."

"Agreed," said Isaacs, and smiled at Lodelaska Platonius, who smiled.

The patriarch went away, and one of Isaacs' followers took his seat. "Say, you can beat the old guy easy," he said. "Hear about his son Moses? No? Why, he's been hooked for growing away with his employer's money—seven thousand dollars. Old Lionheart's put up all his savings to get him set free. I guess his mind's pretty well mixed up. You'll win, Isaacs."

There was a stir in Engel's. The table had been set out. Just an armchair each side of its iron stand, a common chessboard on the marble top, a two-dollar box of chessmen. The contestants took their places. The young woman, Isaacs' side, remained outwardly as calm as if there was nothing at stake.

Pawn to king's fourth. Knight to bishop's third. Then came Lionheart's move—pawn to Queen's knight's third. The young man pondered.

He answered, and after the ballet [illegible] preparation was nearly at an end, Lionheart countered again.

Isaacs had won his way by defeating a dozen master players of superlative quality, but he had never found a master equal to Lionheart. THE PRODIGAL DAUGHTER

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1917, by the Macmillan Co.

Folks like to pamper the prodigal son —Maybe no more than they'd pet her— But no one as yet has been able to get Her to feel for the prodigal daughter. —From "The Rhymed Reflections of Eli der Twigge."

A FEW years ago the Beasly girl worked in the overall factory. She was a pretty girl, and naturally the neighbors talked about her, for the people who live along Factory row really do better than they who live on Independence ave nue, in spite of the theories that people who live on the latter street. So when she left the factory the women of the Jersey Creek neighborhood found other reasons for the vanishing of silver plates why pieces of tableware in a house owned by a hot-air furnace will tarnish more rapidly than those in a house where steam or hot-water heat has been installed. The gossip runs some up from the furnace through the registers and quickly tarnishes the silver, necessitating frequent cleaning, while the condition naturally does not exist in houses where radiators are in place.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities of Success That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

ILLNESSES SHOWN IN THE HAND

ILLNESSES that are not severe are shown by a line of life people are by a number of small bars. If there is hereditary illness, it will be indicated by an island near the beginning of the line of life. If an illness that is incurring threatens to be fatal, the line of life will be seen to be broken in one hand and continued in the other, with the broken fragments scarcely touching the interior of the mount of Venus, or ball of the thumb. The disease may be checked or cured if the fragment of the line of life starts toward the palm.

Past illnesses are marked by a cross line on the line of the heart or the line of the head, or both, and a small gap in the line of health. A coming illness is marked on the line of health by a little deep cross line. If the line of health is thick and much cut, it is a sign of illness in old age. Preservation from threatened illness is seen in a bar across the broken ends of the line of life, and recovery from a serious sickness is shown by the line of life broken inside a square.

Father and daughter met at the door; he held out his hand to her and she passed in, followed by the stranger, while the father said awkwardly, "Well, Alice"—and after a pause, "how are you?"

A smile inclosed the commonplace answer, and the old man—continued in a high-keyed tone with the upward inflection this evening's daughter had brought—"Jennie, o-o-h Jennie, you go eut use a switch; I got to tend to your ps. He's nakin' me spoil this supper." Then, after a firmer voice, "The very idee of our movin'."

And the old man, looking back with a smile, went into the twilight full of joy.

Lacked Press Agents.

The king ordered all the men to take a bath. The chancellor tremblingly approached the throne and whispered something, but his majesty was in no humor to listen.

"Let the publicity end be taken care of by the women and children."

Then the women and children," were cured the chancellor, "will have all they can do to till the soil, operate the factories, keep the houses open, and so forth.

"Then let the publicity end take care of itself!" she king insisted stubbornly.

The result was about what you might expect. The war was fought with valor and brilliancy, but when it joined his history it did so with almost a total lack of anything like distinction.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

WHY ? DOES SILVER TARNISH

THE tarnishing or dulling of the bright surface of silver is due to the action of air which contains sulphur, even in minute quantities. This sulphur, which is somewhat analogous to the rusting of iron—though the latter is due to the effect of water or moisture—forms a coating of silver sulphate over the bright surface of the metal, in some cases turning it an unsightly brown. The silver sulphate may be removed by the application of friction but, unless care is exercised, this is likely to scratch and mar the original surface of the metal. For this reason, the best preparations sold as "silver polishes" are entirely free from gritty particles, though enough is used to make the silver to be naked eye—though the entire process of polishing is, in itself, one of scratching away the film or of covering it by some kind of friction.

The fact that silver is a good medium for the tarnishing of silver explains why pieces of tableware in a house owned by a hot-air furnace will tarnish more rapidly than those in a house where steam or hot-water heat has been installed. The gossip runs some up from the furnace through the registers and quickly tarnishes the silver, necessitating frequent cleaning, while the condition naturally does not exist in houses where radiators are in place.

BANQUET OF LEGION MEN BIG SUCCESS

Col. Carleton, Commander Conlin and Others Deliver Interesting Addresses

The annual banquet Tuesday evening in Legion Hall was one of the biggest events the Post has enjoyed since its organization.

There was a big turnout of Legion boys and they had as their guests, in addition, the Township officials and officers of other town organizations, Lieut.-Col. Carleton, of the regular army, State Department Commander Alan Bruce Conlin, and Assemblyman Clifford Powell.

A splendid banquet was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary. The Post rooms were elaborately decorated for the occasion. A Philadelphia vaudeville troupe put on a highly enjoyable entertainment.

Assemblyman Powell spoke on American Legion principles. George N. Wilson acted as toastmaster when Palmyra's loyalty to its service men, and Mr. Powell voiced his eagerness to back up the Post in all the good work it planned to do.

Post Commander Daisy Saul gave the opening and closing prayer and Post Attorney Charles Ellis gave his attitude toward the prohibition amendment, which, he declared, should be repealed because it is a confession that Americans had to have more laws to force them to be honest.

Col. Carleton, who is organizing the new Reserve Officers' Corps, spoke on "National Defense."

He first showed how the old war work of American history had been forced upon us by the other side and declared that no one knew when such a thing will happen again.

The Colonel said he did not believe in war, that no one wants to avoid war more than the soldier. Nevertheless, he declared, while it is the soldiers who make war, they are the ones to avoid war by abandoning the army, he continued, "is like abandoning fire engines in the hope there will be no more fires."

The United States has always allowed itself to be caught unprepared. Then it has to build up a big military machine at a big cost in money and lives. Afterward it has always scrapped that machine and returned to the same state of unpreparedness as before.

"The money wasted in our big wars would have been enough to prevent these wars."

For the first time the nation now has a real military policy, he continued, and the organization of the Officers' Reserve Corps is a step in the right direction.

The Colonel's address was followed by a spirited talk by Commander Conlin, who is also a Palmyra boy. He declared that the Legion is not a political organization, but that it is a patriotic one. He said that the Legion is not a charitable organization, but that it is a fraternal one.

Commander Conlin declared that the Legion is not to be smeared at, and it means that farm in Vineland Rosie and boy looked forward to. Ach, if only they'd played for such stakes in my young days I'd be a rich man! But the [illegible] was not."

"Agreed," said Isaacs, and smiled at Lodelaska Platonius, who smiled.

The patriarch went away, and one of Isaacs' followers took his seat. "Say, you can beat the old guy easy," he said. "Hear about his son Moses? No? Why, he's been hooked for growing away with his employer's money—seven thousand dollars. Old Lionheart's put up all his savings to get him set free. I guess his mind's pretty well mixed up. You'll win, Isaacs."

There was a stir in Engel's. The table had been set out. Just an armchair each side of its iron stand, a common chessboard on the marble top, a two-dollar box of chessmen. The contestants took their places. The young woman, Isaacs' side, remained outwardly as calm as if there was nothing at stake.

Pawn to king's fourth. Knight to bishop's third. Then came Lionheart's move—pawn to Queen's knight's third. The young man pondered.

He answered, and after the ballet [illegible] preparation was nearly at an end, Lionheart countered again.

Isaacs had won his way by defeating

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your names; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky stone

DELIA

DELIA is a name of curiously confusing history. There are several origins from which she might have sprung. In England, she appears most frequently as a convenient contraction for the dignity of Cordelia, daughter of Lear. But Dedelia and the popularity of Delia in that country might give rise to the contention that the latter name is the diminutive of the old song favorite.

But Delia, according to the best etymological authorities, is a separate and independent name which has its source in no less an exalted realm than the mythology of ancient Greece. It was Artemis or Diana, the moon goddess, who, being born at Delos, caused the place of her nativity to be immortalized in Greek mythological history.

In honor of the goddess, the feminine name Delia was evolved from Delos and sprang to instant fame in Arcadian poetry. Lovely shepherdesses who figure in those ancient pastorals, bore the name and it reached England by the literary route. The sound of it was good to Irish ears, and it was straightway adopted by that country.

Since Artemis was the moon goddess, it is fitting that Delia's talismanic gem should be the moonstone. It will bring its wearer good fortune, and will prove an exceptionally lucky jewel if it is a gift from a sweetheart. It is said that lovers can read the future by looking into its depths when the moon is full. Monday is Delia's lucky day, and 4 her lucky number.

ANGRY MISS CHESTNUT

PLUMP little Miss Chestnut lived in a burr all soft and nicely podded. She was very happy and looked forward to a nice comfortable winter. She did not know a thing about the world outside her burr house, nor did she care. "It may be cold or it may be hot, the wind may blow or the snow come out," mused Miss Chestnut as she lay tucked snugly in her soft house.

"I have heard of such things from the big tree on which my house is fastened, but what care I for I never intend to leave my own warm house to see a place as uncomfortable as the world outside. And so she went to sleep again, thinking that was all she had to do. But one day she felt a terrible bump, and while at first all was dark, soon Miss Chestnut found herself in a bright world.

"Why, I am not alone," she said, looking around her. "There are many others like me. I wonder if they are as comfortable as I am?"

Now Miss Chestnut was a very angry little lady, and she looked around her with a frown on her face. "Why, I am not comfortable at all," she said. "I am all squeezed and pressed and I don't like it. I am angry with the one who has destroyed my home.

"What do you mean—you wicked cold creature, coming along here where folks are asleep and tumbling them out of bed. Look at my house; you have spoiled it beyond repairing. Who are you and what are you doing here?"

Now Jack Frost—for it was he—is not afraid of anyone, but Miss Chestnut was so angry he was glad she did not know that her house was a burr that was prickly, for it was nearly, and the Goblins were not all in their rocks and no knowing what Miss Chestnut might get them to do. "My name is Jack Frost," he answered. "I come along about this time every year to get things ready for Father Winter. Don't you know him?"

"No, I do not and I do not wish to," snapped Miss Chestnut, all shiny with anger. "And if I did not have anything better to do than going about bothering folks I would stay right at home.

"I guess if Father Winter knew what a nuisance you are and how much mischief you do he would give you a good whipping and put you in bed and keep you there.

"I would not give you any support if I had my way. You are a starved looking fellow, anyhow. I suppose you are so busy doing mischief that you do not have time to grow plump like me.

"What are you going to do about my house you broke open? You better get busy at once and mend it. Somebody must. I have no place to sleep and I do not intend to stay out here in the cold."

But Jack Frost did not hear all that she said, for he was running for home and saying to himself, "What a temper that little creature has! She would have made it so warm for me, if I had stayed, that I would have been melted. I hope some one comes along and picks her up before I get there tonight."

But by and by the sun came out and little Miss Chestnut was warm again and soon forgot all about the bad Jack Frost who had spoiled her house.

ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ABRACADABRA"

TO DISCOVER the genesis of this term, formerly used in incantations and now utilized as a symbol of "gibberism," one has to go back to the Hebrew words signifying Father, Son and Holy Spirit—Ab, Ben, Ruach Acadosh. The initials of those words give "Abra," the syllables which are twice repeated in the supposedly ritualistic invocation.

The earliest known occurrence of the word is in a poem written in the Second century by Q. Serenus Sammonicus, but it was in comparatively recent times that the term gained fame on account of its supposedly mystical powers of healing, particularly when written in the triangular form:

ABRACADABRA
ABRACADABR
ABRACADAB
ABRACADA
ABRACAD
ABRACA
ABR

According to the popular superstition, the paper upon which these letters were written was to be folded so as to conceal the writing, sewed up with white thread and worn around the neck, thus protecting its wearer against fever and ague.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

Possesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

ILLNESS SHOWN IN THE HAND.

TROUBLES with the throat are indicated in the hand by nails that are moderately long, but are thin and brittle. Typhoid fever may be dreaded if there is a small square on the line of life, with a St. Andrew's cross inside, and generally with a bluish tint. Wounds are shown by spots on the line of the heart, and the line of the head will be seen to be broken under the line of Saturn, in both hands with the two fragments overlapping each other. A wound inflicted in a fight has its mark or sign in a spot on the upper mount of Mars, and if there are fine lines on the mount of Jupiter (at the base of the forefinger), with a star at the line of the head, we may foretell or read a wound in the head.

It must be remembered, of course, that while the hand affords many valuable indications of illness, past, present, or to come, these signs should never be used to supersede or supplant diagnosis by medical experience. Palmistry is not a science sufficient unto itself.

Tribesman Whistle Messages.

The aborigines inhabiting the Malabar islands speak to each other at a distance by whistling, the whistlers being selected for their ability to whistle loudly. They make this their livelihood.

Love Always to Be Desired.

But love directed towards the eternal and infinite feeds the mind with pure joy, and is free from all sadness. Wherefore it is proper only to be desired, and to be sought after with our whole might.—Spinoza.

Beauty Confined to No Class.

There are beautiful things to be found in very unpromising surroundings. Fine traits of character can often be discovered in those who have been brought up in poor homes and who had scanty moral teaching.

Soap Kept in Bond.

Up to less than seventy years ago all soap manufactured in England was made in bond and subject to duty, and each boiling pan was fastened down at stated by an excise officer.

VOTE IN STATE AND COUNTY

Official Figures for State Ticket. Road Bond Carries. Burlington County Elects No Democrats.

Returns were so slow coming in after the election last week, that official figures were not available up to the time The News Item went to press. The official figure as finally tabulated are as follows:

Senator, Edward I. Edwards 457,648, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen 364,932; Edwards' plurality 92,716. Governor, George S. Silzer 426,817, William N. Runyon 383,226; Silzer's plurality 43,591. Silzer carried only five of 21 counties, but his plurality of over 80,000 in Hudson was sufficient to win.

The Democrats also elected nine out of twelve New Jersey Congress delegation, but the Republicans retain control of both houses of the Legislature. They lost one Assemblyman and gained one Senator. The Senate will stand: Republicans 17, Democrats 4; Assembly: Republicans 44, Democrats 16. The Republican majority on joint ballot will be 41, the same as this year. This will probably make the reelection of Newton A. K. Bugbee, Republican, as Speaker certain.

The $40,000,000 road bond issue was approved by a majority of 14,390.

Burlington county elected the entire Republican county ticket and gave good majorities to Frelinghuysen, Runyon and Richarach. The official returns follow:

Edward I. Edwards, D. 9,967

Frelinghuysen's majority 3,760
For Governor
William N. Runyon, R. 14,834
George S. Silzer, D. 8,632

Runyon's majority 6,192
For Congress
Isaac Bacharach, R. 15,340
Clifford R. Powell, D. 7,017

Bacharach's majority 8,223
For Assembly
Clifford R. Powell, R. 15,025
John J. Earling, D. 6,781

Powell's majority 8,291
Freeholders
Charles R. Stout, R. 15,585
George W. Rogers, R. 14,820
Edward Thackara, R. 15,105
Stout's majority over Thackara was 480, and over Rogers was 8,715.
Steward of Almshouse
Charles A. Bowne, R. 14,927
Edward F. DeVine, D. 5,964

Bowne's majority 8,963
Road and Bond Issue
Yes 8,117
No 6,174

Majority against 1,943
While the bond issue lost out in the county, it carried in the State by a small majority.

The number of voters registered in the county was 43,723. The number of votes cast was 24,831—about 60%.

When on the bed of disease or death, there could spare time to smooth the creased pillow or moisten the fevered lips, or speak calmness to the delirious mind. When they looked forward to the close of this sinful, feverish life, but with only the passing cee's coffin to be pressed into, a pauper's grave into which it is to be huddled out of sight, without a breathed prayer over the dead, or a whispered text of hope and consolation for the living. And for the surviving, parent and bereaved children no figure was presented, but trundling them from parish to parish, until they were thrust into the vice and infamy of the almshouse; or, perhaps, thursting them into the streets, to grow up beggars or criminals, if they did not early find their level in the gutter! Such were, most probably, the circumstances and prospects of the two little ones announced our Order, devised its first benevolent measure, to bury the poor of the dead, and based the whole structure of its philanthropy on that of God and the Brotherhood of man.

PORCH CLUB NEWS

The concert given last Thursday evening by Mr. Robert Armbruster, pianist, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Hood Latta, mezzo soprano, and the Duo-Art Piano, was indeed a rare treat.

Mr. Armbruster delighted the audience with his playing, while Miss Latta was most charming, both when accompanied by Mr. Armbruster in her first group of songs, and when in the next group with the Duo-Art played for her.

The Duo-Art Pianola Piano seems to have reached a point of perfection, inasmuch as it reproduces exactly the interpretation of the artist who plays for the recording of the roll.

Mr. Armbruster played with the Duo-Art a selection arranged for four hands and again he played alternately with the Duo-Art—in each case it was impossible to say which part was being played, except by looking at Mr. Armbruster's hands.

The Porch Club had each guest present, appreciates the generosity of Mr. Armbruster in bringing whom this concert was made possible.

Col. D'Olier to Speak in Riverton

The Porch Club is pleased to announce for its next meeting that Lieutenant-Colonel Franklin D'Olier will be the speaker on the life of the "Valet of Marshal Foch to the U. S. A."

This will be an open meeting, every one invited, on Monday evening, November 20, at 8.30, in The Porch Club.

Come and bring a friend to welcome a former townsman, and hear his most interesting story.

Bowling at the Country Club

The fall bowling tournament at the Country Club has entered its fifth week with Staunton's team still way out in front. The majority of the other teams are fairly well bunched so that a loss of two or three games for any one teams makes a big change in the standings for the week. Hirst's team has made the remarkable score of only winning two out of fifteen games played, as this team contains some of the best bowlers in the Club, their given average for each man was so high that it is taking some time for the members to get back to the form they displayed at the finish of last year's tournament.

The honor of bowling the highest single game so far goes to Mark Clark with a score of 231. Clark bowls on Larry Vaughan's team, which also holds the team high score game for this tournament. Vaughan's team, bowling five men, made an average of 187 for each man bowling. This game will probably stand for some time to come. The standing of the teams up to Friday night, November 17th, was as follows:

1	Staunton	15	833
2	Beehme	11	611
3	Davis	9	600
4	Graff	10	555
5	Ayres	10	555
6	Vaughan	9	500
7	Willis	8	444
8	Wright	8	444
9	Murray	8	444
10	Evans	6	400
11	Cox	6	400
12	Coe	6	400
13	Hirst	2	133

LOVE OF BROWN LEAF

ONCE on a low branch of a tree in the woods grew a leaf. It had not thrived as did its brothers, and so it grew to be very, lonely and sad.

One day it was swinging in the wind when it heard a sob right under it, and looking it saw a purple flower growing there.

"Why are you so sad?" asked the leaf, forgetting its own troubles. "You are so pretty and sweet to look upon that you should not cry."

"I am alone," answered Purple Flower. "Some one came along and picked my sisters and did not take me, but then I am so small I cannot expect anyone to notice me. My sisters were much more beautiful."

"But you are beautiful," said the Leaf. "You cannot see your own beauty or you would not complain, and I am glad you were not carried off, because you have made me forget that I am unhappy and I shall not be again if I have you to look upon."

"Oh, I am so glad if I have been of some use," said the Flower. "But why should you be unhappy when you have so many brothers up there with you?"

"Do you not see that I am not handsome like my brothers?" replied the Leaf. "I am not large and green as they are. I am small and I am turning brown before my time."

"Oh, but you look beautiful to me," replied the Flower. "You are nearer to me than your brothers. Why I do believe you are going to drop off, and if you do we will drop right down beside me."

"If I can do that I shall never be sorry that I did not grow strong and handsome like the other leaves," said the Leaf. "I have wondered for a long time what would become of me if I dropped down there, where before I must only look at my sisters."

Before the two little friends could say more along came a breeze and scooped off the Leaf that held the Leaf on the branch and down it dropped close beside the Purple Flower.

There it lay close to her and on balmy nights or when it rained Leaf covered the Flower and kept her company.

Purple Flower grew strong and beautiful, and though Leaf grew brown and withered, it knew nothing about it, for did not Purple Flower tell him each day he was the most beautiful leaf in the world? And she thought he was because of his great love for her.

The strong green leaves on the tree over them looked down and smiled scornfully at the brown Leaf snuggled close to his sweetheart, but the green leaves knew nothing of the joy of a great love nor did they know that beauty that the eye can see is not to be compared to that of a beautiful soul.

And so, when the cold days came and winter with his soft white blanket covered the lovers I expect they slept until Miss Spring came and awakened them, and there, no doubt, she found the Leaf close beside the pretty Purple Flower.

THE FROG WEDDING

PINE TREE VALLEY, I must tell you, is one of the nicest parts of Frogville, and every frog that cares at all about where he lives tries to find a home in that valley.

When it became known in Pine Tree Valley that Miss Jennie Frog was to be married there was great excitement. Mrs. Field Mouse read the notice in the paper, the Pine Tree Jottings, and hurried to the phone.

"Squeak, squeak! Give me Miss Cricket, please!" said Mrs. Mouse.

When at last Miss Cricket answered, Mrs. Mouse said:

"I have just read in Pine Tree Jottings that Jennie Frog is to be married to Billy Frog. Do you suppose we'll be invited?"

"Of course we will!" replied Miss Cricket. "We are all such old friends and I just heard that it will take place under the pine tree and Parson Beetle will marry them."

Jennie Leaning on Her Father's Arm.

"Well, I do hope my invitation comes soon," said Mrs. Mouse. "for I must have a new dress, and I will have to ask Grandma Rat to stay with the children, and if you hear any more about it do let me know! Good-by."

The guests were being seated by the ushers, the young Frogs, who were all dressed in their best green suits and white waistcoats and, of course, each had on white gloves and a white flower on his coat, and handsomer ushers it would have been hard to find.

Mr. Jar Fly began tuning up and soon the orchestra burst forth with the wedding march and two lovely yellow butterflies flew blithly over the bank by the pond and began to sprinkle tiny flowers for the bride to walk on. Then came pretty little Sally Frog,

RICH AND POOR

PITY the poor millionaires!

Some of their shoes are out at the toes. They are finding much difficulty in mending ends meet. Those who are out of jobs or have had their salaries reduced are not the only ones suffering financial distress during these readjustment days.

There are some who go around the country preaching discontent, claiming that most of the people are kept poor in order that a few men may be made rich or kept rich. Not an inconsiderable number are willingly led to believe this doctrine and, in consequence make their own lives unhappy and disturb the peace of their fellows.

In contradiction of this sentiment reports from the bureau of internal revenue in Washington, show that the so-called poor are having less trouble than those accustomed to enjoying fat incomes.

In 1914 there were only 60 individuals in the United States who reported incomes of a million dollars or more per year. For 1918 the incomes of more than a million dollars totaled 2003; but since that year—the bottling of street-corner orators notwithstanding—there has been a marked decline. Wealthy men's income returns for 1919—the last year for which statements have been compiled—included only 95 of a million dollars or more. During 1920, due to the dropping and passing of dividends resultant from the period of depression, inclinations point to a drop in the number having million-dollar incomes even below that for 1919. And the end is not yet, for corporate incomes, from which most of the big individual incomes are derived, have been shrinking so much that many wealthy men find themselves in a quandary as to their ultimate outcome.

It's a mistake to smile over others' misfortunes. Not one should find cause for rejoicing because quickly made millionaires and wealthy persons are made miserable through failing business. But the information at hand regarding the difficulties the rich are encountering is a reason for the average person to consider the misfortunes less serious and to realize that there is nothing in the radical observations of the rich getting richer and the poor poorer.

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHERE NOT TO GOSSIP

GOSSIP is, of course, despicable. We are brought up to know that. But just the same, we all gossip. Those of us who are well bred, or live up to our breeding, don't gossip. Those of us who are in an illbred manner, whether or not we are illbred, do gossip insidiously. That is about all there is to it.

So if most of us are bound to gossip—that is, to pass along interesting bits of news about our friends and neighbors—let us be careful where we gossip. And a word in defense of gossip. Really the news in the newspapers, and the contents of books of memoirs and biography are nothing more or less than gossip. So long as our curiosity is not malicious it need not be entirely eradicated, for there is a deep-seated desire in man to gather and pass on scraps of all kinds.

One place not to gossip—and that is over the telephone. Don't ever talk about your neighbors by phone, because of the chance that somebody else might be listening—even if what you are saying is entirely pleasant.

Don't gossip in a train or trolley car. It is necessary to raise the voice to make it heard in a train or car, and others might overhear what you say. Again, though that might be entirely pleasant, you would not want to be quoted by someone who overheard you.

Don't gossip on a postal card. Don't gossip with servants. Don't gossip with children. Don't gossip across the back fence. Indeed, the whole thing comes down to this: If you must gossip—and most of us do—gossip in the place and time conventionally given over to conversation.

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

THE CHEERUPATHIST

WHEN you're feelin' kind o' blue,
An' things comin' bad for you,
Don't give up in funk despair,
Weep or wail or tear your hair;
Grit your teeth an' bow your neck!
Show th' world you're right on deck.
Smile an' say, "Well, here we come—
Stand aside and watch us hum."

You've good reason to be glad
That though things are comin' bad,
They might easily be worse;
So, you're foolish if you curse
'Stead o' tryin' to extol sight
Of th' silver linin' bright;
Grit your teeth an' hustle out
An' you'll win without a doubt.

In your mind th' fable bear
Of th' tortoise an' th' hare.
You may be a movin' slow—
That don't matter—only go.
Don't stand still an' weep an' wail,
But keep pluggin' up th' trail.
Smile your troubles all away
An' you'll land all right some day.

THE GARDEN INVISIBLE

SINCE the first unsearchable day in which man's consciousness of self with a stuttering consciousness of your wonderful capabilities, to 'show the old world what it could never do' and to make permanent progress without your help, you have, let it be said, with due allowances, been digging, planting, raking and watering in the garden invisible.

Now this is your garden, your very own.

Everybody in this storm-troubled sphere has one, so you are no exception. The sunbeams play hide and seek, and the storms beat at regular intervals, as the gods will. And strange to say, you carry this garden with you wherever you go.

Yours is not a coward soul, yet it lacks courage to take your friends into this particular garden and show them the result of your achievements.

You are a little abashed at the noxious plants that spring up in the night, and often left standing to gather strength to crowd out the good and the beautiful.

Failing in this you begin to fail in yourself.

So here is where your sorrows take root and overwhelm you with fear in the season of ripening fruit.

Year after year you have been carelessly sowing and reaping only a handful. Time has flown by on ostrich wings. You failed to take care of its flight, and instead of giving attention to your own work, you meddled with the work of others.

You yielded to temptation, indulgence, idleness and insult. The picture on the face of the soil intrusted to you to cultivate.

An ashamed sense comes upon you at the scene with an overpressing sense of neglect and a sickening futility.

The sun and the showers were faithful to their trusts; the soil was rich, capable of bringing forth the choicest fruits of wealth and happiness.

Beside your forsaken garden is your neighbor's, radiant with flowers and golden fruits. While he was doing his duty, working faithfully at his given task, and later giving work to others, you were faithless, grumbling and negligent, as is evidenced by your garden, filled now with worthless, withered weeds, taunting and mocking you in the evening of your given day.

Confidence, Judgment Resources

It is a well-known fact that sound judgment and strength of resources create confidence. The people have confidence in the Cinnaminson National Bank, because it is strong, substantial and well-managed—a banking institution which gives careful attention to the best interests of the bank and its customer.

LESSON FOR NOVEMBER 19

JESUS THE FRIEND OF SINNERS

LESSON TEXT—Luke 7:37-48.
GOLDEN TEXT—This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.—I Tim. 1:15.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Luke 15:1-32.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Loves Everybody.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Friend of Sinners.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Sympathy of Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Helps the Fallen and Sorrowful.

I. A Penitent Woman's Act of Love (vv. 37, 38).

1. Place of (v. 37). It was in the home of Simon the Pharisee while Jesus was sitting at meat. The feast must have been public, else she could not have so readily gained access.

2. The Act of (v. 38). She washed Jesus' feet with her tears and wiped them with her hair. Through some means she had heard of Jesus' pardoning grace, and God had opened her heart to receive Him as her Savior. Out of a heart of gratitude she kissed His feet and anointed them with precious ointment.

3. Who She Was (v. 37). Her name is not mentioned. She was of a notoriously bad character. Though known to the public as a bad woman, something had happened which transformed her. She was now a saved sinner, because she believed on Jesus Christ.

II. The Pharisee's Displeasure (v. 39).

Simon felt scandalized by such a happening at his table. He was a respectable man. For Jesus to tolerate such familiarity on the part of a woman of such evil repute greatly perplexed him. He reasoned that if Jesus were a prophet He would have known the character of this woman and would have either withdrawn His feet from her or thrust her back with them, or if He knew her character His tolerance of such familiarity proved that He was not a good man. Simon's righteousness was of that sort which gathers up its skirts and gives the sinner a backward push into his filth.

III. Jesus Teaches the Pharisee (vv. 40-48).

He taught him by means of a parable of a creditor and two debtors. Observe that Jesus made it very clear that He not only knew the woman, but knew Simon also.

1. The Common Debt (v. 41). The woman was a sinner, so was Simon, though he was not the same kind of a sinner that she was. There were two debtors, though the one owed ten times as much as the other. This is representative of all sinners still. The debt declares all to be sinners, yet recognizes degrees of guilt. Full credit ought to be given to the man who is honest, virtuous, generous and kind. Yet such a life will not secure entrance into heaven. The Savior's words are a severe rebuke to the respectable Pharisees who are sitting in judgment against the sinners of a coarser type.

2. The Common Insolvency (v. 42). And when they had nothing to pay, Jesus freely granted the difference in the degree of the woman's sins and those of the Pharisee, but drove home to him the fact that they were both debtors and had nothing with which to pay (Rom. 3:23). Therefore all have need of a Savior. As sinners we may quit our sinning and hate our deeds, but that does not make satisfaction for the sins of the past. What has been done is irrevocable—it has passed from our reach. Every transgression must receive a just recompense of reward (Heb. 2:2). We must come to our Creditor, God Almighty, and acknowledge our insolvency and accept the kindness of Jesus Christ who bore our sins in His own body on the tree (I Pet. 2:24). We are all paupers, and instead of judging each other as to relative guilt, we should come to God and sue for pardon.

3. The Relation of Forgiveness and Love (vv. 44-48). Simon's reluctant answer to Jesus' question shows that he got the point of Jesus' teaching. In order to make His teaching concrete He turned to the woman, calling Simon's attention to what she had done in contrast to what he had done. Simon had neglected to extend to Jesus the common courtesies of a respectable guest, but this forgiven woman had lavished upon Him her affection and gifts. The measure of one's love is determined by the measure of the apprehension of sins forgiven. The one who is forgiven most will love most.

The Friendly Path By Walter L. Robinson

ROUGH PATHWAYS

"Those travel farthest who don't know where they are going."

PERHAPS so. Also perhaps they and ronish pathways and frequently find little when they reach the end of that road they traveled.

But there is some soundness to this philosophy coined by Sir Oliver Cromwell. Many complain of the difficulties they imagine they are likely to encounter, or else are so fearful of meeting trouble that they never make a fair start to anywhere.

A day or two ago we were passing through a crowd on the sidewalk and a blustering pedestrian rushed past and crashed into an unfortunate blind man. The hurrying one was terribly sorry. The poor man without eyes, with the usual charity of the sightless, excused the offender and stated that he has no business being blind. Then he stumbled along with the aid of his cane, while the other went on about his business with regret stamped upon his face.

This is a characteristic experience one may find all along the pathway of life if he keeps his eyes on those who hurry onward without watching where they are going. For more often when one speeds thoughtlessly, others are likely to be injured more than he is himself.

If anything will bring happiness with its accomplishment, it ought to make people happy to engage in the work necessary to bring accomplishment about. True it may be disappointing and tiresome when progress is slow, and apparently there are insurmountable troubles in the path ahead. But nothing is to be gained by bemoaning the necessity of work, nor by fretting over blistered feet.

It is always well to work happily for work is what makes life worth while.

Mrs. Fox Picked Up the Broom.

FOX FALLS DOWN HILL

MRS. FOX told her husband that she was too busy running about to be a good hunter. "You run from one place to another all night," said Mrs. Fox. "Why don't you stay at one farm and watch for a chance to get our breakfast? Here you've been for a week past and never once," "What?" questioned her husband, for she did not know at all what she meant.

"I mean you are too restless. You never stay in one place long enough to get anything," said Mrs. Fox. "A stone rolling and rolling never gets moss on it, but you never."

"Yes-s," said Mr. Fox, doubtfully, "but if I can't get in where the poultry is at one farm, what is the use of hanging there? Why not try another?"

"Stay in one place and watch for a chance to get something," said Mrs. Fox. "You spend all your time running around, just like a stone, all the time rolling."

Mr. Fox scratched his head as he went out of the house. "She is a deep thinker," he said. "I am half afraid I made a mistake in selecting such a smart wife."

Over the hill trotted Mr. Fox, and remembering his wife's warning not to be too absent, he found a place to hide near a poultry house and fixed himself to wait for the hens and ducks to come out early in the morning.

But long before it was the least bit light Mr. Fox had left. He was looking right on the top of a steep hill and when something awakened Mr. Fox he jumped out of his home with a terrific buzz and went straight for the poultry house.

The first thing Mr. Fox knew he saw Mr. Dog in the moonlight standing where he was hiding. He did not stop to hear him bark. Up he jumped and turned to run, but something in his feet caught in a vine and there he went rolling and rolling down the hill, all the way to the bottom.

Now it happened that this hill was full of burrs, and Mr. Fox rolled himself into the prickly round things so his clothes turned by the time he reached the foot of the hill he looked like a huge monster instead of the trim Mr. Fox who had left the woodland evening.

He didn't know a thing about that until he reached the path leading to his home and met some of the woodfolk that had also been out hunting and coming home.

"Oh," screamed Mr. Coon, who was the first to see Mr. Fox.

Mr. Possum looked. "Oh," he cried and run, and so did all the others frightened out of their wits by the strange looking creature they saw.

"What is the matter with them," thought Mr. Fox, hurrying home, but when he opened the door and Mrs. Fox gave a scream he knew something must be the matter with him. "What is it?" he asked.

It was a fortunate thing he spoke, for Mrs. Fox picked up the broom-stick to drive out the monster she saw coming in her house.

"I must have not been rolling down the hill," said Mr. Fox as Mrs. Fox picked off the burrs. "My dear, your saying about the rolling stone may be true, but you can see for yourself that a rolling Fox gathers burrs."

"You will have to gather something besides burrs if you expect any breakfast," said his wife, and Mr. Fox knew by her tone that she meant what she said.

The Real Issue

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

IT WAS near the close of a long session—a session which had lasted a winter and a spring and a summer, and threatened to push itself into the first days of autumn, when Wharton, the western member, who had been in the house five terms, conceded to pack his valise and go home. The campaign was growing warm. Nearly all of the county conventions had been held, and a majority of the delegates elected were instructed for him, which insured his renomination if the three remaining counties in the district did not go solidly against him. He had laid his plan mechanically for a renomination, and if he had stooped to ask himself whether or not he really wanted to come back to congress, he would probably have said no. He was tired, but he did not know why. He thought he needed rest, that he had been overworked, that he was played out; yet his private secretary, who had kept the run of the legislative business and did his routine work, did not seem tired—the private secretary even had refused a vacation, and it was at the secretary's own request that he stayed in Washington.

But Wharton, the western member, was tired—dead tired, and he pictured to himself the pleasures of getting back to his home in the little town of Baxter, where people on the streets who had seen him grow up from a boy and called him "Tom," really were glad to see him. Just before he had left his room for the departing train his private secretary had handed him the day's clippings; and after he had been riding for an hour or so, while he was fumbling in his pockets for a match, they tumbled out in a tight little roll. He idly read them. He was used to unjust abuse and sick of uncalled-for praise. The first clipping was taken from the Queen City Daily Herald; it bore a Washington date line, and was introduced by the words, "Special to the Herald." It read:

"They say here that Wharton of the Fourth district, is beginning to feel uneasy. He has received several letters from his district that have convinced him that the Populist cyclone has shaken down several lengths of fence in Lee, Meade and Smith counties. Bill Hostley's strength is said to be developing down there wonderfully. The Hon. Ike Russell, who was here last week looking for a job as receiver of the Baxter National bank, was in close consultation with Wharton three of the four nights he was here, and the 'old man' is wearing a hunted look and is talking to himself. They say down in the Fourth district that it will take more than the Hon. Wharton's mug to explain away his silver vote.

Wharton knew the correspondent and only smiled as he flipped the wad of clipping out of the way. There always was a short editorial clipping from the same paper. It read:

The dispatches say that 'Our Tom' Wharton is wigwagging in his seat and trying to prevent his friend Ike in the Fourth district to see how his fences are, and at the same time to keep his corporeal body in Washington to look after Ike Russell's pie plate. If 'Our Tom' doesn't fall down in his anxiety to keep one foot in the 'Nation's Capital' and the other at the political back door, the name for either a Calaveras or Rhodes or a 'quadrille dancer.'

Wharton dropped that on the floor and read another clipping from the County Farmer's Friend. It was long and full of double leads and "break lines," and its static and electrical energy, if it was abusive in the extreme and closed with this tirade:

Now, let us reason together. Tom Wharton has been in congress ten years; he has been judge six years before entering congress; he has been unpretendent four years before he was judge. Twenty years has he been in office; his total salary in that time has been only $70,000. Yet he is hailed by the commercial agencies as a one-half million dollars. He has banks and railroad stock; he owns mortgages and farms. Where did he get them? His time has been sold to the people; he has been false to every trust; he has voted with the East on the money question; he has neglected the farmers at every turn. He is a garden-seed congressman; he comes out here and haw-haws around, and then goes back to Washington to sell seed. Wait street knows its friends, and "Our Tom" is worth one-half million dollars. Here is a man who hadn't a dollar's worth of property when he went to the territorial legislature—he has accumulated it since; he has been a country lawyer, with a big head, tall hats and close-buttoned coats! Ike, do you remember when I went to the legislature and was a leader of 70, and came back discouraged and disappointed with the sham of it all—the rottenness of the thing and the scheming of the politicians? Do you remember when Russell would have interjected some reminiscent joke on the young statesman, but he was on record with 'Ike,' and he couldn't afford to break the spell of silence that fell on the house when 'Ike' spoke? Ike,

LOCALS WIN AT QUOITS

Defeat Medford in "Rubber" Game by Score of 16 to 8

Last Saturday Medford's crack quoit pitchers journeyed to Palmyra to play the third and deciding game of the series. The local players were in excellent form and took 16 games while Medford was winning 8, the points majority in favor of Palmyra being 60 points.

...ng, Lee and Griscom, paired, won 7 straight of the 16 and Walton Taylor and his partners won 4 straight.

In the entire series played, Palmyra won 36 games and Medford 32, the net points in favor of Palmyra being only 12, showing the teams to have been well matched and indicating some close pitching.

The year was the first season for the present Palmyra quoit league and it proved such a success that it is planned to not only continue it next year, but form a league composed of ...owns in the vicinity of Palmyra, such as Medford, Collingswood, Haddon Heights, Merchantville, Pensauken and any other towns which might be interested in entering teams.

NEEDLEWORK GUILD

Palmyra Branch Shows Splendid Growth and Accomplishment

The Palmyra branch of the Needlework Guild of America held its annual meeting and display of garments in the Epworth Church Wednesday afternoon.

The splendid growth of the local branch under the presidency of Mrs. William T. J. Purnell was shown by the increase in membership to 32 during the past year. Three others were added Wednesday, and by the big display of splendid garments, 1,125 in number, all of which go to various charities all over the country, the sum of $41 also was raised.

Mrs. Clement B. Webster delivered a charming address in the afternoon and Miss Mabel F. Kraus gave a talk explaining to the guild the needs and work of the Visiting Nurse.

The meeting was very well attended.

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

MANNERS, MARRIAGE

DID it ever occur to you that manners have quite as much to do with happiness in marriage as temperament, and that many a separation laid to incompatibility was due more than to anything else to plain bad manners on the part of the two persons most concerned?

And good manners are made up of attention to a lot of seemingly little, trifling things. For instance, there is the matter of interrupting. Every one knows this is bad form, and ...persons guard against interrupting mere acquaintances, associates in business or society; but they are not so careful about interrupting members of their own family. And a time comes, after you have been interrupted again and again, when it begins to irritate to the point of exasperation. Then there is the habit of contradicting. You guard carefully against flatly contradicting the man or woman whom you wish favorably to impress, yet there are a good many husbands and wives who do not hesitate to contradict each other whenever their own opinion differs with that of the other.

Now, don't think just because your husband doesn't rebel against your habit of flatly contradicting him, that he really is insensitive to it. It irritates him, even if he doesn't seemingly note it, and he would really enjoy being in your society a little bit more if you did not have this bad habit. So often a man begins to tell some anecdote or incident for the entertainment of a guest, and before he has got fairly under way, the wife comes in with: "Now, let me tell that story. You're getting it all wrong," or "Well, that's the first time I ever heard that; you must be dreaming." Such interruptions and contradictions are boresome to the guests and irritating and embarrassing to the host who is trying to tell the story. And usually the point raised by the contradiction was some trivial matter that she might have let go unchallenged, even if she did feel convinced that there was some discrepancy about it.

The Coat of Arms

November has a coat of arms,
No king's could grander be;
It beats the finest specimen
Of ancient heraldry.
Upon a shield of pumpkin pie
In hues of brown and gold
Are sausages of cranberry sauce
And chicken casserole!

A roasted turkey couchant on
A tablecloth is seen,
With quarterings of potato mashed,
And celery white and green,
And apples red, and pretty girls
The four for crullers sieving,
And at the top the legend scrolled
In letters bold, "Thanksgiving."

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

KEEP YOUR TEMPER

A MAN can acquire courage in an hour. It has been often done on battlefields.

He can learn self-possession in a year.

But it takes many years of intensive training to teach him to keep his temper.

Yet these years are well spent. Unless you are certain that your temper is irritation-proof, you can never be sure of yourself.

At some time, on some occasion, you may lose all control of yourself and do something that you will regret for the remainder of your life.

It is useful to teach boys boxing, not only because it develops their muscles and enables them to defend themselves in case of necessity, but because it is the best lesson in temper-keeping.

No man, without training, can endure sudden pain, inflicted by another man without a temporary fit of anger.

Doubtless you have sometimes walked along a path in the woods behind a companion and been smitten smartly in the face by a branch he released as he passed. If you didn't lose your temper you were hardly human.

Learn to avoid sudden anger, which is very different from the slow deliberate kind which you ought to feel in the face of a great wrong or evil.

For, if moved to quick wrath, the blood flies to your head, your judgment departs, and for a few minutes or a few seconds you are no better than a maniac.

You may not resort to blows, but you are likely to resort to hot words that are more dangerous than blows for they will be longer remembered.

Nothing worth while was ever accomplished in a fury. No vision, seeing red, ever saw clearly. No brain, flooded with blood, was ever able to think.

It is right that you should be angry at evil, that you should be indignant when you see, for example, a man beating a horse or a child. But your power to redress such a wrong, even to save the victim, departs if you are moved to violent rage.

Learn to keep your temper. It will take a long hard course of lessons but they will pay.

Some of Us Know It.

A curtain lecture is worth all the sermons in the world for teaching the virtue of patience and long suffering.—Washington Irving.

What Will You Do With Your War Savings Stamps?

War Savings Stamps, series of 1918, become due and payable on January 1, 1923. The purchasers of these stamps will receive their full face value upon redemption, and will find that the money they saved five years ago has earned every quarter 4% compound interest. In order to afford the holders of War Savings Stamps an opportunity to continue their investment in a safe Government security, the Treasury Department is offering an exchange of War Savings Stamps for Treasury Savings Certificates. These certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $100 and $1,000, maturity value, and sold for $20.50, $82 and $820 respectively. The holders of War Savings Stamps can get these certificates at these prices upon application through their own banks or their post-offices. Exchanges will be made as of January 1, 1923 upon applications presented between November 15, 1922, and January 15, 1923. Immediate payment will be made in cash of any difference due the holder of War Savings Stamps if he takes the largest possible amount of Treasury Savings Certificates on the exchange.

The Pumpkin

...t, ardently and fair in the lands of the sun,
The vines of the gourd and the rich melon run,
And the rock and the tree and the cottage enfold,
With broad leaves all greenness and blossoms all gold,
Like that which o'er Nineveh's prophet once grew.
While he waited to know that his warning was true,
And longed for the storm-cloud, and listened in vain,
For the rush of the whirlwind and red fire-rain.

On the banks of the Xenil, the dark Spanish maiden
Comes up with the fruit of the tangled vine laden,
And the Creole of Cuba laughs out to behold
Through orange-leaves shining the broad sphere of gold;
Yet with dearer delight from his home in the East
Is the pumpkin, the harvest the Yankee loves best.
What beautiful forms are coiling and yellow fruit shines,
And the sons of September melts down on his vines.

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,
From North and from South come the pilgrim and guest,
When the cand'ed sweet Negro waits on each one
And the pasty is heaped with the raisin's dark stone,

O, fruit loved of boyhood! the old days recalling,
When wood-grapes were purple and brown nuts were falling!
When wild, tasty fares were carved in its skin,
Glaring out through the dark with a candle within!
When we lingered round the corn-heap, with hearts all in tune,
Our chair a broad pumpkin, our lantern the moon,
Telling tales of the fairy who traveled like steam,
In a pumpkin-shell coach, with two rats for her team!

Arrested for Reckless Driving

Three men in a car crowded a resident of Riverton off the road between Riverton and Cambridge Sunday night, and wound up in the court of Justice Trout, who held a special session Monday night to hear their case. The man who complained against them said they were intoxicated in his report to the Chief of Police at Riverton. When the men reached Riverton they were arrested by Officer Wesley Miller. Chief Geiss could not decide that they were intoxicated, and called a physician who declared they were not. The men were held until Monday night while the case was investigated. It was learned that the man who was driving the car had suffered a broken arm some time ago, and had not fully recovered.

At the hearing Monday night they gave their names as Peter Koch, who drove the car, Joe Warnick and Casper Machillis, all of Camden. They said they were on their way home from a christening at Cambridge when their car overturned. A bottle containing something, supposed to be "hooch" was found in the car.

The charged of driving a car while intoxicated was not pressed, but Koch was fined $19.50 for reckless driving and the other two men $13.50 each. Koch's license card was taken from him and sent to the office of the Commissioner of Vehicles at Trenton with the recommendation that his license be revoked.

Pity Mother on Whom the Burden of Christmas Shopping Rests

That's the way the Munger and Long Department Store in Camden feels about the matter.

We want to help her by bringing to her consideration our vast store, with its five floors filled with holiday gifts. A store where she can choose with comfort, convenience and economy.

A store she can reach from her own doors by bus, trolley or train, and where she does not have to "fight her way" through crowded ferry boats, store aisles and street cars. Will you, Mrs. Palmyra, let us help you have the best Christmas you have had in many a day?

All busses, trolleys and trains stop at our doors.

Football Notes

The Riverton Reserves have lost the services of their full-back through the injury Lody Orcutt suffered to his hand at the Ziegler printing plant.

Palmyra High School lost its first game in three years to Burlington High School last Friday afternoon by 9-0. Adams was the star for the visitors, scoring a touchdown and kicking a field goal. There was considerable loose playing on the part of some of the locals.

Porch Club News

Mrs. S. W. Collin, as soloist, assisted by Mrs. A. L. Wilson, Mrs. H. M. Morris, and Mrs. Leon Guest, all members of the Riverton Choral, will be appreciated as ever, while some "Two Minute Talks" by Club members will complete the program.

The executive board will meet at 1.30 p. m.

A WARNING

You and I are receiving by letter every few days a so-called "opportunity" to quickly become wealthy. These opportunities are offered to us by rascals in various parts of our country.

One week ago you were offered by letter from Pittsburgh the "marvelous" opportunity to invest your hard-earned savings in The Motors Mortgage Corporation, which at that time was $4,000,000 "in the hole."

The Commercial & Financial Chronicle (the best financial paper in the United States) under date of November 18th, 1922, writes as follows:

"MOTORS MORTGAGE CORPORATION—Receiver—

The Federal Court of Pittsburgh has appointed the Real Estate Trust Co. ancillary receiver for this company, a Delaware concern. It is alleged that the assets are $2,474,772, and the liabilities $6,686,220. Frank M. Jones, of Georgetown, Del., has been appointed receiver for the corporation in Delaware."

A BIT OF TIMELY ADVICE:

Buy only those securities which John Moody, of New York, gives an "A" or better than an "A" rating, and after buying check the rating once each year.

Paralyzed in both arms and legs, confined always to a wheel chair, Mal Rose, vigorous in mind and indomitable of soul, composed on twenty-four hours notice, this little poem, hoping that it would help to guarantee to others the health which he has been denied.

"I am a Little Christmas Seal"

I am a little Christmas Seal,
Oh please, sir, won't you buy me?
For I've a mission that is real,
And no one should deny me.
A penny, sir, will pay for me,
I'm sure you'll never rue it—
My mission is to fight T-B,
And you must help me do it.

It's more than just a hand-out stunt
To stay this thing of terror,
So I'm the army at the front,
And you're the stretcher-bearer;
For where we come or where we go,
In foul or fairest weather,
Tuberculosis is our foe,
And we must stand together.

Both life and health we may prolong,
If you will pay a penny,
To help the kiddies to be strong,
For unfed tots are many;
And, honor to home and town to town,
Let's work to save the babies—
Oh please, sir, do not turn me down,
With promises and maybes.

Just roundly kiss me on the back
And stick me to a letter,
And for a penny and a smack,
We'll make the whole world better;
And oh, how glad we both shall feel,
If you'll but trust and try me;
I'm just a little Christmas Seal,
Oh please, sir, won't you buy me?
—Mal Rose.

Legion Auxiliary Bazaar

A—stands for Auxiliary.
B—for Bazaar.
For the things to be sold
Would take all the letters there are,
So come to the Legion rooms.
To please you we'll try,
Eats, Toys and Fancy Goods.
Stop! Look! and Buy!
This annual affair comes off Saturday, November 25, afternoon and evening. The usual stand-sockers, candy, dolls, toys and fancy goods, with lots of children's things, will be there. But wait until you see our flower basket and the lovely blooms that never droop; poinsettias, chrysanthemums, roses, daisies, poppies and violets, and there will even be sparkling glass baskets and bud vases to carry them home in.

Maybe we all can't go to Florida this winter but we can pick oranges just the same. Come up Saturday and take some home to the kiddies, or better still, let them pick their own. Have you seen the lovely little Colonial Dame in her rose and gold lace? Who wouldn't love to have her soft, pretty radiance in a boudoir?

Then there is that charming big Legion doll and the boxing gloves! And do you remember that peppermint of last year? Well, if you want some this year, better call up Riverton 570 and order it. Some of us "got left" last year. Perhaps you would like to add deviled crabs, too, to that order—"do your shopping early!" Have your supper up there in the rooms—soup, coffee, hot dogs, baked beans, something to warm you up, in place of that cool you haven't got. Come 'round and see us anyway, Saturday, November 25.

Volunteer Workers' Institute Attracts Many

The First County Institute for Volunteer Leaders was held on Monday and Tuesday, November 13 and 14, at the Big 6 Whistle, Brown's Mills, for the young Women's Christian Association of Burlington County.

Monday evening Miss Ernestine Friedmann, 11 yrs an Industrial secretary of the Y.W.C.A., now instructor of English, and head of the Bryn Mawr Summer School, gave an inspiring talk on the "Girl in Industry," her intense desire for an education, her interest in her fellow workers, and her spirit of service. "One of these girls went back to her home" she said, "and gathered together one hundred others who sought an education which seemed possible only thro the Y. W. C. A."

At the round table discussion led by Mrs. Collins, president of Burlington County, much thought was given to the subject of a closer cooperation between the churches and the Y. W. C. A., and a strong desire expressed that the bond might grow closer all the time, that the spiritual welfare of the young people might be emphasized in the work.

Round table discussions were also led by Miss Woolman, treasurer, on Finance; Mrs. Albertson, chairman of the Girls' Work Committee, on Girls; and, Mrs. Newcomb, chairman of the membership committee, on Membership.

Miss Herring, of the County department, made the closing address on the County Vision and the days showed clearly the breadth and depth of the Y.W.C.A. and the opportunities for SERVICE lying at the door of Burlington County.

Annual Meeting Burlington County Board of Agriculture

The annual meeting and banquet of Burlington County Board of Agriculture will be held at Grange Hall, Columbus, December 12, 1922. A special attraction is Dr. William Rader, of San Francisco, California, an orator, brilliant, witty, of world-wide reputation.

Tickets may be procured from H. G. Taylor, Jr., Riverton.

Riverton Holds Paulsboro to 12-0 Score

Those who attended the game at Palmyra last Saturday and witnessed Riverton's 12-0 victory over the strong Paulsboro team saw one of the most interesting games that has been played this season. Both teams, from the kickoff until time was called at the end of the game, played good, snappy football, and it was not until the third period that Riverton, by numerous line plunges and end runs and a beautifully executed forward pass (Hylton to Mellhenny) were able to advance the ball down to a position when Hollingshead, after repeated line plunges, carried it over for the first touchdown. This was followed up by another score when Jenkins blocked one of Paulsboro's kicks and Nichols fell on it back of the goal line for Riverton's second touchdown. The defensive playing of Nichols, Riverton's right end, was the outstanding feature of the game, but creditable mention should be made for every player of both teams as each one of them certainly gave their full measure of good football during the game.

The lineup:

Riverton		Paulsboro
Bowers (Faunce)	le	Dergy
Clifton (Jenkins)	lt	Gallagher
Wille	lg	Mooney
Jenkins (R.Hylton)	c	Helms
Wallace	rg	Carney
Lloyd (Matalack)	rt	Dalbow
Nichols (Wescott)	re	Huber
J. Hylton	qb	Langford
H. Stack (Holvick)	lh	Turner
Mellhenny (Stack)	rh	Calahan
Hollingshead	fb	Mattson

Riverton	0	0	12	0	—12
Paulsboro	0	0	0	0	— 0

Time of periods—12 minutes. Referee—L. Keating. Umpire—Hahn. Head linesman—O. Spence. Timekeeper—G. Steedle.

This Saturday Riverton will have for their opponents the Darby Rams, from Darby, Pa., and the following extract from their manager's letter will give an idea of what kind of game is expected:

"Dear Sir:—I had a team which received a darned good facing in Riverton a couple of years ago, and I want to arrange another game, as I feel that my present team can come up there and give you a darned good trouncing, if given the chance.

"He was immediately answered and told that he might be right about the trouncing, but that there certainly would be a team out on our field to argue that point with him, and next Saturday on the Palmyra Field Club grounds at 3 o'clock we have arranged to start to settle this little dispute, so be on hand when the whistle blows as a good game is in order.

The Riverton Reserves will play a preliminary game with a team from Moorestown. Game to start at 1:45.

This Saturday Riverton will be handicapped by not having Bill Mellhenny in the lineup, as he received a badly wrenched ankle in last week's game. It is reported that a new man, a friend of Nichols, will be in the lineup to try and take his place.

The Thanksgiving attraction will be a game in the morning between the Riverton Reserves and Beverly at Beverly, and in the afternoon the Riverton A. A. will play the Riverside team, known as "Wagner's Bull Dogs" on The Field Club grounds, game starting promptly at 3 o'clock. As this Riverside team has not been defeated this season, a fine game is anticipated. Irons Metropolitan Band, of Burlington, will furnish music during the game.

Electric Rates Reduced

Statement by President Thomas N. McCarter, of the Public Service:

"Public Service directors at a meeting held Wednesday, voted to reduce the Uniform Electric Lighting Rate and the Uniform Electric Retail Power Rate, effective with December sales. Their action will result in a saving of at least $1,600,000 a year to the commercial lighting and retail power users served under these rates as at present constituted. More than 90% of all the customers of Public Service Electric Company will be favorably affected by the voluntary reduction in prices. The new base rate will be nine cents per kilowatt hour instead of ten cents with similar cuts in the second, third and fourth steps of the lighting rate.

"The directors also voted to pay a two per cent. quarterly dividend on the common stock of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, thus restoring the dividend rate for that class of stock to an eight per cent. annual basis, the same rate that prevailed before the United States became involved in the World War. The usual two per cent. quarterly dividend on the preferred stock of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey was likewise declared, both common and preferred stock divisions being payable December 31 to shareholders of record December 15.

"The directors also decided to recommend to the stockholders for approval two changes in the preferred stock structure of the Corporation as now existing. At present the authorized issue of preferred stock is $50,000,000 of par, carrying eight per cent. cumulative dividend of which approximately $18,500,000.00 is outstanding. This stock is redeemable at the option of the Corporation at 110% of its par value. The directors felt that this redemption stipulation acts as an unnecessary bar to the proper market value of the stock in the hands of the stockholders and have therefore decided to recommend that the Corporation give up its privilege of redemption.

"The directors also felt that there would be times hereafter when it would be practicable for the Corporation to sell seven per cent. preferred stock and have therefore decided to recommend to the stockholders the approval the alteration of the company's charter so that the $50,000,000.00 of authorized preferred stock shall hereafter consist of $25,000,000.00 eight per cent. preferred stock and $25,000,000.00 of seven per cent. preferred stock. This, together with the authorized common stock still available for issue, will provide a flexible structure of which the Corporation may avail itself as occasion may require. It is believed that the stockholders will approve of both of these suggested changes."

Electric Rates Reduced $1,600,000 a Year

PUBLIC SERVICE ELECTRIC COMPANY is pleased to announce herewith the filing with the Board of Public Utility Commissioners of a NEW SCHEDULE OF RATES, which will result in the above substantial saving to its lighting and retail power customers.

What the New Rates Will Be

Base rate for lighting reduced from 10 cents to 9 cents;
Second step rate reduced from 9 cents to 8 cents;
Third step rate reduced from 8 cents to 7 cents;
Fourth step rate reduced from 7 cents to 6 cents;
Base rate for retail power and for optional retail power also reduced from 10 cents to 9 cents.

New schedule of rates will become effective with December sales, meaning January bills, and every householder, every shop keeper, every factory owner served under uniform lighting rates, as well as every retail power user will share in the substantial money benefit. Reductions apply in one hundred and ninety-seven municipalities. No change in minimum charge.

Before Public Service engaged in the electric business the base rate for lighting in Newark was 13 cents per kilowatt hour. Other companies in New Jersey have raised lighting rates, this company never. On the contrary, Public Service has voluntarily made successive reductions as conditions warranted, in keeping with a policy of giving the best service at the lowest cost.

Twenty years ago there were only 16,000 electric meters in the territory served by Public Service. Today there are more than 330,000 meters in use and every meter installed means more comfort and convenience for the user of electricity. This is one way Public Service has helped make New Jersey a more desirable place in which to live and do business.

The company believes that the steadily increasing use of electricity for light, heat and power will justify these reductions which have been made possible by the great growth of the business and by economies and efficiencies obtained through the exercise of the highest technical skill and the most careful management.

Every effort is being made to meet the needs of customers, old and new. The company is planning and constructing further large additions to its generating, transmission and distribution plants. It already has on order and in course of installation apparatus which will increase the available capacity of energy from 294,000 kilowatts to 410,000 kilowatts.

The company takes this occasion to express its appreciation of past favors and to give assurance of its intention to continue applying itself to the limit of its ability and capacity to rendering helpful service to the people of New Jersey.

Public Service Electric Company

THOMAS N. McCARTER, President
