CARLETON ADDRESSES MEN'S CLUB

Colonel Gives Interesting Address on Organized Reserve Plan of National Defense

The Men's Club held one of the most successful meetings of its history Monday evening in Christ Church parish house, Palmyra. The attendance broke all previous records and a number of new members were taken in.

Colonel Carleton, of the Third U. S. Regular Army, was the speaker and gave an interesting account of the movement to provide the United States with a real National Army.

The organized reserve, Colonel Carleton said, is one of the most democratic and at the same time efficient military organizations in the world. Enlistment is open to any man who is physically and mentally fit and within the age limits.

In the camps the highest standards prevail. In addition to obtaining a thorough grounding in military tactics and theory, the men are imbued with the spirit of patriotic Americanism and will be better fitted for civic as well as military life after their experience.

The reserve is one of the greatest bulwarks the Nation has against bolshevism and anarchy, declared the Colonel.

The speaker referred to the propaganda against preparedness, which he declared had sources both inside and outside the United States.

"How many Nations have ratified the famous navy scrapping treaty?" he asked. "Only one, the United States. France rejected it, England disregarded it, and Japan violates it. These are facts, although the newspapers seem to be trying to get us to believe that the other Nations are disarming. The truth is that all the others are looking forward to other wars and making ready for them."

"This is our nation and if we don't take care of it, nobody else will."

Col. Carleton said the headquarters of one reserve organization was at Burlington. This is the 309th regiment of the 78th Infantry. William T. J. Purnell and Joseph G. Seel, of Palmyra, are officers of this unit and will be ready to give information to anyone who wishes to join the summer training camps.

A delightful entertainment was provided by the ladies of the Church. Mrs. R. E. Wilson sang, accompanied by Mrs. Arthur C. Clifft, of Philadelphia. An instrumental quartet composed of Mrs. Frank A. Mathews, Jr., piano, Frank A. Mathews, Jr., and Ralph Sefton, violins, and Richard E. Wilson, clarionet, rendered several fine selections.

Miss Ree Withecomb, of Manchester, England, who is making a trip around the world, having recently reached the United States from Australia, delivered a splendid reading. She is spending some time in Philadelphia and came to the meeting as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson.

President Purnell announced that the next meeting of the club would be held on December 18th, at which time it is expected Judge Donges, of Camden, will be the speaker.

DELAIR

The postmaster of Delair, Walter Joseph, has withdrawn his resignation and will continue in office.

The Delair School gave its monthly entertainment on Friday. Mrs. Edwin Bagens entertained on Tuesday Miss Helen Haipak, of West Philadelphia, on Wednesday at luncheon, Mrs. Johnson and daughter, Margaret, of Cramer Hill, and Mrs. J. Hall, and Mrs. Raymond Benoit, both of Delair. Mrs. Bagen's sister, Miss Edith Walton, was her guest Thanksgiving Day.

Miss Mary Williams and Thomas Tolan and Mrs. Joseph Wilde and son, Charles, all of Philadelphia, were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Wonderly.

ORGANIZE FOR SMYRNA RELIEF

Churches Undertake Campaign in Answer to Special Appeal from President Harding

In response to the Nation-wide appeal which has been sent out by President Harding for a response to the urgent call for help which has come from the Smyrna refugees, a local campaign has been organized and Palmyra will take her place among the thousands of other communities throughout the United States who are to meet their civic responsibility in this emergency.

The text of President Harding's appeal is as follows: "The need as revealed in the latest cable reports from Grecian territory and the Near East far exceeds all previous calculations made for the relief of this crisis. The response to date has been altogether inadequate. I am sure the people of the United States will grasp the magnitude and pathos of a situation involving the absolute known destitution of over a million and a quarter women, children and old men.

"I therefore make this supplemental appeal at this season of thanksgiving for God's blessing to us, for the human beings who are sufferers in the stricken area.

"I request the Governors, Mayors, business and philanthropic organizations and all other citizens of the United States to hold this tragedy in mind during Thanksgiving week, and I appeal again to you to make a response equal to the emergency and worthy of the generous heart and the humanitarian spirit of our great republic.

"That this may be organized and definite, I hereby designate Sunday, December 3rd, as a special day of mass meeting in our cities and the climax of this appeal extraordinary."

Will Hays has been appointed chairman of the National Committee on Smyrna Relief and Archie Roosevelt is executive secretary.

The Palmyra campaign had its inception last Sunday evening when the Palmyra churches, impressed with the extreme urgency of the situation met in a union service at the Epworth M. E. Church, at which time A. H. Skean, recently returned from Smyrna, spoke.

Following the church service a meeting was held of all the workers who volunteered for service in the local canvass for funds. The Rev. C. W. Williams was elected chairman of the committee, and William T. J. Purnell, treasurer. It was decided to district Palmyra and give each of the churches a district to be responsible for. The district captains are: Norman Schriver, F. C. McCorkell, Joseph G. Seel, and W. P. T. Purnell.

The Methodist Church has taken the southeastern quarter of town, the Baptists the northeastern, the Lutherans the northwestern and Christ Church the southwestern.

MANY FIRES THIS WEEK

The Riverton Fire Company Has Been Kept on the Jump by Many Small Blazes

Starting last Friday afternoon with a fire in the woods at the Riverton Country Club, the Riverton fire department has been called out nearly every day since. The fire in the woods burned a considerable area of leaves and underbrush, threatening some of the larger trees. The ground was so dry that the leaf dust thrown on the fire to put it out burned like peat moss.

Friday night the Company was called to West Palmyra, where a small house, at the Hylton sand bank had taken fire from burning field grass and was destroyed.

Sunday morning the alarm was turned in, when a field fire at East Riverton threatened the old McWhorter manufacturing building. Dry grass was supposed to have been set afire by a spark from a passing engine. The train stopped and the engineer and crew assisted in keeping the flames in check until the fire department arrived.

Sunday afternoon the house of Oscar Roberts, also at East Riverton, was slightly damaged before the fire company arrived.

About ten o'clock Monday morning residents of Main street above the railroad were alarmed by volumes of smoke which seemed to be coming from Stiles' drugstore or his residence. The fire company responded to the alarm double quick, bringing all the apparatus. It was found, however, that there was much more smoke than fire and the situation was easily handled by the chemical engine. A quantity of fire wood, which had been stored in a small outbuilding became ignited from some burning rubbish nearby.

Camp 23, P. O. S. of A.

Compared with the world at large the American people have much to be thankful for. As a representative organization the camp has abundant cause for gratitude and it should be esteemed a privilege as well as duty to make public acknowledgment of this sentiment. Therefore let us turn out in goodly number on Sunday night, December 3rd, to hear Dr. Stahl's message.

Service will begin at 8 p. m. We will assemble in camp room 7.30 prompt and proceed to Calvary Presbyterian Church in a body. Riverton members can meet the column at Broad and Thomas or the church, as may suit their convenience.

December 10th marks the seventy-fifth birthday of the order, and the camp will observe the anniversary by a class initiation, December 11th. An interesting session may be anticipated.

The Home Association has issued the annual circular calling attention to the work and needs of the institution.

They purpose building a public school at the orphanage as a fitting memorial to the founder, the late Emmet Berger, and state that a contribution of a nickel per member will enable them to carry out the plan.

That Booster bunch are quietly planning some good stuff for next term and it would be of mutual benefit to see them next Monday night and exchange ideas.

ANOTHER "KIDDIES" NIGHT TO BE HELD

Churches Join Hands to Spread Christmas Cheer Among the Little Ones

The churches of Palmyra and Riverton have combined to hold a "kiddies" night for children of Palmyra, Riverton and vicinity on Wednesday evening, December 27th.

An entertainment and dinner, with suitable presents will be given to the invited guests. The place at which the entertainment is to be held has not yet been decided upon.

Automobiles to transport the children to and from the entertainment will be provided.

The idea of thus spreading Christmas cheer grew out of the "kiddies" night given last year by the Wesleyan class. This affair was such a success that all the churches have been asked to join hands this year to do things on a larger scale than ever.

Several meetings have been held and plans are now well under way. The officers of the "kiddies" night organization, which is expected to be a permanent body, are as follows: chairman, George S. Wimer; assistant chairman, J. Horace Finney; secretary, Mrs. Florence Kershner; assistant secretary, Mrs. F. N. Johnson; treasurer, Norman Shriver.

William T. J. Purnell is receiving contributions to defray the expenses of the affair and letters asking donations will shortly be mailed out.

Have You Visited

Morgan Heights lately? If not, you will be surprised at the wonderful progress that has taken place in that section. Builder Llewellyn Davis has improved this property in a very fine manner, and as all of the properties are protected by reasonable building restrictions, it will always remain an excellent residential section.

The lots on Morgan Heights are rapidly disappearing from the market, and we would advise prospective buyers to consult Mr. Davis at once relative to homes or building sites. A good deal of interest has been manifested lately in Highland avenue south of Cleveland avenue.

There are indications that this highway will, in the near future, be put in very fine shape and it might do well for our readers who are thinking of locating on Morgan Heights, to seriously consider this portion of the development. —Advertisement.

The annual supper, roll call and business meeting of the Central Baptist Church were held in the social rooms of the church on Monday evening, November 27th, when encouraging reports were received from all societies and committees of the church. The total budget for the church, benevolent and current expenses was $10,485.

The following officers were elected: president, Clarence T. Yerkes; clerk, Henry Stiles; treasurer, Charles H. Pascoe. Deacons, Frank Sterling, C. C. Green. Trustees, Walton Taylor, David Wood, B. Rush Stevens. Deaconesses, Mrs. C. C. Green, Mrs. Walton Taylor, Mrs. Horace Sycklemore, Mrs. Thomas Branson, Mrs. Arthur Bowker, Mrs. Emma Kane. Music committee, Mrs. Charles W. Williams, Mrs. Caroline Hirsch, Miss A. Mae Brown, Mrs. James Ryan, Thomas Branson, Joseph Abdill, A. J. Brooks. For permanent council, Henry Stiles, William McConnell.

RIVERTON HOMES ARE RANSACKED

Fur Coats and Jewelry Form Loot at Mechling's and Porter's

Sometime before eleven o'clock last Saturday night, the residence of B. S. Mechling, on Bank avenue, and William G. Porter, on the Westfield-Riverton Road, were broken into and thoroughly ransacked in search of valuables. At the Mechling home, two fur coats, a string of pearls, a small ring and fifteen dollars in cash were taken. At the Porter's, the burglars secured five dollars in cash, two rings and a bottle of perfumery. In both cases the entrance was made by forcing a window. The work very much resembles the Hollingshead and Yeager robberies some months ago. The curtains were pulled down and the floor littered with cigarette stumps and matches.

The robberies were reported to the police department when the Mechlings and Porters returned home about eleven o'clock Saturday night. Chief of Police John C. Geiss took charge of the case and immediately sent a description of the articles to all the neighboring police departments.

County Detective Parker detailed his assistant, Clifford Kane, to assist in the investigation. Kane came to Riverton Sunday morning to look over the field, and again in the afternoon to make copies of fingerprints.

Thanksgiving Music

The "Song of Thanksgiving" by Maunder will be rendered by the choir of the Epworth M. E. Church on Sunday evening, December 3, at 7.30. The soloists will be Mrs. Augustus L. Wilson, soprano; Mrs. Ralph Rivers, contralto; Augustus L. Wilson, tenor; and H. William Dillon, baritone.

This cantata was very ably rendered by the Epworth choir last season, and is being repeated upon request.

In this work Mr. Maunder calls upon the people to rejoice with thanksgiving to the Lord in the strength of their salvation, bringing out very emphatically all the material things for which we should be thankful, the mountains, the streamlets, the mighty sea and the echoing hills.

Then his promise that while the earth shall remain he will develop all these things for the good of man.

The fulfillment of this promise in the leafy trees, the blooming flowers, the ripening grain and the harvest.

For all these things the people should rejoice in the strength of their salvation and praise the Lord for all his manifold greatness.

Everybody invited to hear this real musical treat.

Christmas Fair

Concerning the breathing apparatus of the whale an eminent naturalist says: "The windpipe does not communicate with the mouth; a hole is, as it were, bored right through the back of the head."

RIVERTON BEATS THE DARBY RAMS

Fine Game at Field Club Grounds Results in 3-0 Score

Last Saturday the loyal rooters who journeyed down to The Field Club grounds, and braved the cold west wind to watch a football game, were rewarded by seeing one of the best games that has been played this season, when the Riverton team defeated the strong Darby Rams by the small score of 3 to 0.

The first half of the game was a mighty evenly matched contest, neither side being able to make a first down, but in the second half Riverton started off like a whirlwind, and after receiving the kick, managed to advance it by a couple of first downs, and a long forward pass to within scoring distance, only to lose the ball when a forward pass was grounded behind Darby's goal line, but after an exchange of kicks Riverton intercepted one of Darby's forward passes and again were within scoring distance, missing a try for a field goal by a narrow margin, but Riverton was not to be denied a score, and again they intercepted a couple of Darby's forwards and were in possession of the ball on Darby's thirty-five-yard line, where J. Hylton dropped back and kicked a field goal for the only score of the game.

Moorestown Father and Son Banquet

Judge Harold B. Wells was the speaker at this annual occasion promoted by the local YMCA Board in Moorestown Thursday evening, November 23rd, with Harold E. Page, chairman of the YMCA Board, presiding. Other speakers were Henry F. Stockwell, Rev. W. J. Cusworth, a representative from the High School faculty, and J. Porter Ashbrook, part-time member of the secretarial staff of the Burlington County YMCA. Mr. Alfred Deyo led the singing.

Judge Wells pointed out that once Johnny and his dad have set out to find each other they will so enjoy their fine comradeship that a habit of being pals will become established. Many boys will discover that dad is warm-hearted and human, something more than a meal ticket or the wielder of a wicked shingle; many fathers will be surprised to learn that Johnny has aspirations, ideals, and hopes, as well as an insatiable appetite and a smaller regard for the three R's than for the three F's—fun, fighting and fishing.

A little poem that the Judge uses is by Allen A. Stockdale, "I've Got a Dad."

I've got a Dad. The other guys
Have only things that money buys,
And lots of things the others 'haint
(I should say 'aint)
And some have bikes and radios
And hear the bands and great solos
And knows the things that fellers knows
But I've got a Dad.

I've got a Dad—a jolly chum,
Say, fellers, that is goin' some,
And listen to me, eee, that's what (Some kids 'aint got)
Sometimes there is a guy you know
That lives around the house and so
They call him Pop—but, gosh, he's slow
But I've got a Dad.

I've got a Dad—he married Maw
But that 'ain't why I call him Pa.
For he's a regular Scout I got (Like some 'haint got)
There's kids, that if they had a chum
Would keep from getting on the bum
Believe me I am tickled some Cause I've got a Dad.

I've got a Dad, oh gee, he's swell,
We're just old pals—I'm here to tell
A Dad's a thing that can't be bought
(Or hadn't ought)
And when I say my prayers at night
And things are dark and out of sight
I tell the Lord he used me white
To give me a Dad.

The Inasmuch Bible class of the Epworth Sunday School will meet at the home of Mrs. M. J. Quinn Tuesday evening, December 5th.

Mrs. Harry Ellis spent Monday in Camden with her son.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN IN NEW STRAW VOTING

Ballots Come in Slowly, But Inquiries Show Citizens Are Making Their Selection

While great interest has been shown in The Weekly News "election" for the officers of the new borough form of government which is to go into effect next spring, comparatively few ballots have been turned in as yet.

Several folks have inquired as to the details of the proposition and announced their intention of submitting their choices for Mayor, Councilmen and the other offices to be filled, but few of their ballots have arrived.

The Weekly News expected this situation, inasmuch as the plan is a novel one, and probably has never been tried before in this vicinity.

Some of our readers apparently have not considered the proposition thoroughly and others want to look over the field before making their selection. It was for this reason that The Weekly News decided to run the "nomination" blank for several weeks.

In order to get the most representative results, however, it will be necessary to get ballots in as quickly as possible, in order that some of the names of the nominees may be printed. The printing of some of these names will stimulate interest and also serve to suggest other names for the offices involved.

The purpose of The Weekly News in conducting this "election" is to give the people themselves an opportunity to put forward the names of men they want for the borough offices. The American election system is designed to enable the voters to choose the men they want, yet is so often works out at primaries that the choice can only be made among various candidates who have put themselves forward, while the men the people would really like to see nominated are not in the race at all.

Send in your ballots quickly and at the end of a few weeks The Weekly News will select the names receiving the largest number of votes and print them on a ballot for a final elimination vote.

Ballots thus far received contain the following nominations:

For Mayor—
George N. Wimer
Wilbur F. Crane

For Council—
Frank A. Snover
Herbert Trout
Albert N. Stewart
J. Horace Finney
Wilbur F. Crane
James H. Hartley
James B. Rustic

For Assessor—
John W. Shade
George W. Shaner

For Collector-Treasurer—
E. A. Griscom
Paul H. Powers

Lehigh Makes a Proposition

Rejection of the modified terms of the Lehigh Valley Railroad by which it would surrender the Morris Canal to the state was urged by representatives of Newark and Paterson upon the Morris Canal Commission at sessions held in Newark and in Paterson. In addition, Corporation Counsel Congleton of Newark suggested that if the present attempt at settlement fails the state should bring suit to determine what rights the Lehigh Valley has in the Big Basin and Little Basin in Jersey City and its equity in the water rights. Mr. Congleton also urged a legislative investigation to find out what connection there is between certain water companies of North Jersey and the railroad.

When asked later what he had in mind by urging a legislative inquiry into the relations between the Lehigh and water companies, Mr. Congleton replied he did not care to say anything further about it at this time.

"The Lehigh Valley knows what I mean by it," he added.

The Canal Commission, through its president, Frank H. Sommer, announced there would be no settlement on the terms suggested by the railroad, including the modification. While he did not disclose the terms of settlement made by the commission, he said the railroad had not gone far enough in its offer for the property it wishes to keep. Unless there is a shift in the negotiations next week the commission will prepare its report showing a disagreement with the railroad on the attempt to settle. The negotiations must be completed December 1, according to the terms of the act under which the commission was created.

Corporation Counsel Explains

Explaining the moves he proposed, Mr. Congleton said that if condemnation of the property had to be resorted to, the state ought to be in a position to know just what the Lehigh has to give. For that reason, he continued, an action by the state to determine whether the Lehigh Valley is making a proper use of the basins in Jersey City in accordance with the provisions of the charter granted to the Morris Canal & Banking Company, which leased the canal to the Lehigh, would be in order. The reported claims of the East Jersey Water Company and the Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures were also referred to by Mr. Congleton.

"When Newark assisted in framing the bill under which the present effort at settlement is being made, it was given to understand that the Lehigh Valley sought such an opportunity to settle and would respond with a fair offer to the state," continued Mr. Congleton. "The Lehigh is not dealing fairly with the state or the municipalities along the route of the canal. If the modified offer is the best the Lehigh intends to make, the city of Newark urges upon the commission that it shall not accept."

Merchants Ask Rejection

For the Chamber of Commerce, E. W. Wollmuth, secretary, and Mossa Plaut, a member of the chamber's Morris Canal committee, backed up the stand taken by Mr. Congleton. It was Mr. Wollmuth's observation that "the Lehigh will have to draw some better cards" than the present offer represents. He was in favor of a suit by the state to compel the Lehigh Valley to perform its obligations under the charter and at the same time have settled what equities the Lehigh has in the water rights and canal basins.

"I've been living on this canal for forty years," said Mr. Plaut, vice-president and treasurer of L. S. Plaut & Company. "One of the members of the chamber's canal committee is dead and I'm afraid we'll all be dead before this thing is settled. Judge Stickel, who is a member of the committee, has also considered the modified offer with us and is of the opinion that it should be rejected and suit started by the state to determine the questions which have held up a settlement."

Additional Concessions by Railroad

Additional concessions which the railroad would make were announced by E. H. Boles, vice-president and general counsel of the company. When the commission started its hearings in Jersey City, Mr. Boles said the Lehigh would agree to let Jersey City have 2,000 feet frontage of the Little Basin. The railroad would also agree to widen the entrance to the Tidewater Basin at Jersey City from 150 to 200 feet. The entrance to Tidewater Basin separates the Big and Little basins.

The railroad would also agree to secure the outstanding canal stock and turn the securities over to the state as a whole. In addition it offered to maintain the canal, after settlement, until next July, and agreed to withdraw the protests under which it has paid state tax rates on the canal for about thirty years.

When these modifications of the railroad's offer were explained at the meeting here in the court house, Mr. Plaut said he did not believe that this was a proper time to grant special concessions sought by municipalities. The commission was appointed to act for the state, he said, and if the canal property was acquired the state could determine the merits of the various claims put forth by the cities.

Hague Wants Settlement

Jersey City also was not in favor of the railroad's latest offer, although Mayor Hague indicated he would like to see the problem settled on the amended terms of the railroad. Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Brogan held that all of the Little Basin should go to Jersey City and he insisted it had legal rights to the property. The Jersey City Chamber of Commerce was against any settlement in which the state did not retain the two basins.

There was another shift in the official attitude of Jersey City shown in a memorandum by Mr. Brogan, sent by messenger to the commission at its hearing when held in Paterson. This document called attention to the $500,000 claim which Jersey City has on the hands as a result of the water works contract made with the late Patrick H. Flynn in 1899, when it withheld that sum, charging nonperformance of contract. There is a suit under way to compel the city to pay the $500,000 to the estate.

Flynn was unable to secure water without the consent of the Lehigh Valley, and was forced into bankruptcy, dying shortly afterwards. The contract was completed by the Jersey City Water Supply Company, which later sold out to the city.

In communication to the Canal Commission, Mr. Brogan gave it as his opinion that the $500,000 claim should be paid by the Lehigh Valley as part of the canal settlement. The memorandum was received after the Paterson meeting had been adjourned and no action was taken upon it.

Paterson Stand Explained

City Counsel Edward F. Merrey told the commission that Paterson was against a settlement on the terms suggested and declared them unfair. An end should be put to the open sewer called the canal, he said, and he supported one way to accomplish that was to bring state action against the Lehigh for non-compliance with charter provisions. Mr. Merrey said Paterson had all of the detriments of the canal and no benefits. He called attention to the fact that if the waterway were abandoned Paterson would have to build a storm sewer to take up the surface water from Garret Mountain, which now runs into the canal. The sewer system needed would cost about $63,000, said Mr. Merrey.

The Paterson Chamber of Commerce was also against a settlement on the Lehigh terms, said James Witt, president of the chamber. He was against the granting of part of the Little Basin to Jersey City, unless it was to be done by the state after it had acquired the property. As to the canal strip through Paterson, Mr. Wilson added, it should be determined whether the property reverts to the city when it no longer is maintained as a canal. If Paterson has no reversionary rights, he added, it should be given a preference in its purchase.

"Those who call it a canal now are dealing in legal fiction," said Mr. Wilson.

The commission was reminded that the property owners at Greenwood Lake were much concerned in the settlement, as the canal draws from that waterway. Robert M. Ekings, representing property owners at the lake, said they were anxious to make certain that the present level of the lake would be maintained. Mr. Sommer replied that to insure protection of such water rights as those in Hopatcong and Lake, the commission had sought to obtain all the stock of the canal company, thus maintaining the corporate existence and protecting the charter. The Greenwood Lake residents are to take their latest petition to the Legislature if a settlement were made.

Birds and Trolley Wires.

The biological survey says that small birds are seldom killed by alighting on a trolley wire, even though it carries a heavy current of electricity. This is because there is not a complete circuit. If a larger bird were to alight on a wire, and one of his wings touched another wire, it would be apt to cause death. Eagles have often been killed in this way.

The Society Editor

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

THERE'S no use denying it, the society editor of the city men work in ruts; that the editorial writer never reports an item, no matter how much he knows of it; that a reporter is not allowed to express an editorial view of a subject, even though he be well qualified to speak; but on our little country daily newspaper it is entirely different. We work on the interchangeable point system. Everyone writes items, all of us get advertising and job-work done, it comes our way, and when one of us writes anything particularly good, it is marked for the editorial page. The religious reporter does the racing matinee in Wildwood, park, and the financial editor, who gets the market reports from the feed-store men, also gets any church news that comes along.

The only time we ever established a department was when we made Miss Larrabee society editor. She came from the high school, where her graduating essay on Kipling attracted our attention, and after an office council had decided that a Saturday society page would be a paying proposition.

At first, for the months after she came to the office, Miss Larrabee devoted herself to the accumulation of professional pride. This pride was as much a part of her life as her pompadour, which at that time was so high that she had to tiptoe to reach it. However she managed to keep it up was the wonder of the office. Finally, we all agreed that she must use chicken-fence. She denied this, but as has inched to the good nature about it, and, as an office joke, the boys used to leave a step-ladder by her desk so that she could climb up and see how her top-knot really looked. Nothing ruffled her spirits, and we soon quit reading her and began to admire her work. In addition to filling six columns of the Saturday's paper with her society report in a town where a church social is important enough to justify publishing the names of those who wait on the tables, Miss Larrabee was a credit to the office.

She was always invited to the entertainments at the homes of the Worthingtons and the Conklins, who had stationary washtubs in the basements of their houses and who ate dinner instead of supper in the evening; and when she put on what the boys called her trotting harness, her silk petticoats rustled louder than any others at the party. One day she suddenly dropped her pompadour and appeared with her hair parted in the middle and doomed over her ears in long, undulating billows. No other girl in town came within a quarter of an inch of Miss Larrabee's dare. When straight fronts became stylish, Miss Larrabee was a vertical menace, and when she turned up her sleeves and organized a country club, she referred to her shoes as boots and took the League to task for the rule. But with it all she was no mere clothes-horse. We drilled it into her head during her first year that society" news in a country town means not merely the doings of the cut-glass set, but that it means as well the doings of the Happy Hoppers, the Needle-Bed Trash, the Knights of Columbus, the Rathbone Sisters, the King's Daughters, the Epworth league, the Christian Endeavorers, the Woman's Relief corps, the Ladies' Aid and the Home Missionary societies, Miss Nelson's Dancing class, the Ketchem's Dancing class, the Ketchem-men's Annual ball—if we get their job-work—and every kindred, every tribe, except such as gather in what is known as "kitchen sweats" and occasionally send in call for the police. When Miss Larrabee got this into her head she began to groan under her burden, and by the end of the year, any church she had great pride in her profession, she affected to loathe her department.

Weddings were her especial abomination. When the first social cloud appeared on the horizon indicating the approach of a series of showers for the bride which would culminate in a combined shower and tea-party, Miss Larrabee would begin to ramble like distant thunder and, as the storm grew thicker, she would flash out, developing a child-frightening imprecation on the heads of the young people, the fathers and mother and uncles and aunts. By the day of the wedding she would be yelling a steady diapason of polite, unadorned, expurgated, ladylike profanity.

While she sat at her desk writing the stereotyped account of the event, it was like picking up a live wire to speak to her. As she wrote, we could tell at just what stage she had arrived in her copy. Thus, if she said to the adjacent stenographer, "What a shower!" we knew that she had written, "The crowning glory of a happy portion of social gatherings found its place when——" and when she hissed out, "Mortgaged clear to the eyes and full of installment furniture!" we felt that she had reached a point something like this: "After the ceremony the gay party assembled at the palatial home." In a moment she would snarl: "I am tired of seeing Mrs. Mc-rtman's sprawly old fern and the Bosworth palm. I wish they would stop lending them!" and then we realized that she had reached the part of her write-up which said: "The charcoal rail was banked with a profusion of palms and ferns and rare tropical plants." She always groaned when she came to the "simple and impressive ring ceremony." When she wrote: "A distinguished company came down to offer congratulations to the newly-wedded pair," she would rip as she sharpened her pencil-point: "There's nothing like a wedding to reveal what a raft of common kin people have," and we knew that it was all over and that she was closing the article with: "A dazzling array of costly and beautiful presents was exhibited in the library," for then she would pick up her copy, blue the scissors, and jab them on the hook, as she finished: "Another great American pickle-fish exhibit ended."

In the way she did two things Miss Larrabee excited the wonder and admiration of the office. One was the way that she kept tab on brides. We heard through her of the brides who could cook, and of those who were beginning life by accumulating a bright little pile of tin cans in the alley. She knew the brides who could do their own sewing and those who could not. She had the single girl's sniff at the bride who wore her trousseau season after season, made over and fixed up, and she gave the office the benefit of her opinion of the husband in the case who had a new tailor-made suit every fall and spring. She recited young married troubles from afar, and we knew in the office when her folks were eating upon her, or her people were edging upon him. If a young married man danced more than twice in one evening with anyone but his wife, Miss Larrabee made faces at his back when he passed the office window, and if she caught a young married woman flirting, Miss Larrabee regaled us by telling with whom the woman in question had opened a church news that comes along.

The other way in which Miss Larrabee displayed genius for her work was in describing society editor. She came of four times a year, when there are large social gatherings, we print descriptions of the women's gowns. Only three women in our town, Mrs. Worthington, Mrs. Conklin, and the second Mrs. Markley, have more than one new party dress in a twelve-month, and one does not have to remember whether or not the refreshments were "delicious" at the Jones party when he sees the word in connection with the words at the Smith party. No two parties were ever "elegant" the same week. No two events were "charming." No two women were "exquisitely" gowned. The person who was assigned the adjective "delightful" by Miss Larrabee might stick it in front of a luncheon, pin it on a hostess, or use it for an evening's entertainment. But he could use it only once. And with a list of those present and the adjectives thereunto appertaining, even a boy could get up a column in half an hour. She had an artist's pride in the finished work, however much she might dislike the thing in making, and she used to sail down to the press-room as soon as the paper was out, and, picking up the paper from the folder, she would stand reading her page, line upon line, precept upon precept, though every word and syllable was familiar to her.

During her first year she joined the Woman's State Press club, but she discovered that she was the only real worker in the club and never attended a second meeting. She told us that too many of the women were white linings and low shoes, read their own unpublished short stories, and regarded her wide-shouldered shirtwaist and medramatic openwork hosiery with suspicion and alarm.

As the years passed, and wedding after wedding piled after her pets, she complained to us that she was beginning to be called "aunt" in too many houses, and that the stock of available, young men who didn't wear their handkerchiefs under their overlars at the dances had dwindled down to three. This reality forces every girl who lives in a country town. Then she is left with two alternatives: to go visiting or to begin bringing them up by hand.

"Miss Larrabee Made Faces at His Back When He Passed the Office Window"

Miss Larrabee went visiting. At the end of a month she wrote: "It's all over with me. He is a nice fellow, and has a job doing 'Live Topics About Town' here on the Sun. Give my job to the little Wheatly girl, and tell her to quit writing poetry, and hike up her dress in the back. My adjectives are in the left-hand corner of the desk under 'When Knighthood Was In Flower.' And do you suppose you could get me and the grand keeper of the records and seals a pass home for Christmas if I'd do you a New York letter some time?

"They say these city papers are hog tight!"

Dogs' Tails.

When I was a small boy an elderly doctor said to me:

"Watch the dogs. If you see a dog with a white hair on his body he is sure to have a white hair right on the end of his tail."

I have watched hundreds, perhaps thousands of dogs, and always have found the white hair on the end of the tail.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

None Too Hot.

During an art exhibition one of the artists was receiving the benefit of a friend's criticism.

"This canvas," said the friend, indicating a violent bit of impressionalism "Do you not think, after all, the atmosphere is too warm?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Footprints.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben "leaves footprints in de sands of time, and others merely scatter dehr tracks around neighborin' chicken coops."

Herrick's Daffodils.

Herrick was the true flower poet, however, and he has the most beautiful thoughts and fancies about them. He hated them to fade, even to close, and his verses "To daisies—Not to close so soon" are charming. He wrote of the primrose, the tulip, the violet, of "sainsbery beds," "bands of cowslip" and "crowns of honeysuckle." His lines "To Daffodils" are among the gems of the English literature.—From "Flowers in Literature" in John o' London's Weekly.

Old-Time Wedding Custom.

In Tudor times women went bareheaded to be married, with bagpipes and fiddlers before them, and they covered the church by the great door only. In some places they carried wheat sheaves on their heads and even set cakes in their faces, with shouts of "plenty! plenty!"

Uncommon Sense
By JOHN BLAKE

MANAGE YOURSELF

A GREAT singer, who has to spend about eighteen hours a day taking care of his health and his voice, which are his capital, needs a manager, and has one.
A great actor, whose every minute is required to continue being a great actor, also needs a manager.
We take it that you are neither a great singer nor a great actor, because you belong to the vast majority of human beings.
Therefore, while you need a manager, too, you don't need to hire one. You can be your own.
This is true, whether you are your own boss, or what the socialists call a wage slave.
If you are a wage slave you will to some extent have to submit to the management of the man who is set over you.
But he can only manage you in working hours, and he can't manage your mind at all. And it is your mind and the way it is managed, that will make or break you before you get through.
Take over that Job yourself. If it is an unruly mind, make it law-abiding. If it is a rooming mind, given to wandering over all sorts of subjects when it ought to be confined to one, discipline it.
Keep it on the Job it ought to be doing. Teach it to concentrate and make it practice this new accomplishment.
If it is a lazy mind, force it to work and to work hard. If it objects and acts as if it might crack under the strain, don't worry about it. Keep it working and it will soon learn to do its work without getting fazzed.
While you are managing your mind manage your body, too. Make it control its appetites, and take cold baths and tackle hard work without flinching.
Don't let it overeat or neglect to get plenty of sleep, or do any of the foolish things that bodies will do if they are permitted to have their own way.
Mind and body well managed will soon be worth more to your boss and consequently, more to you. If your boss won't pay the extra value, get another boss; but be sure first that the extra value is there. It is easy to think you are worth more than you are, and to underestimate the boss' judgment in that respect.
After you have been managing yourself for a while you will know how to manage others. Then, when you get a chance, you will be able to improve it. You will find the Job difficult at first, but pleasant and profitable afterward. Try it and see if this isn't true.

FESTIVAL NOW ALL AMERICAN

Though Its Origin Was Pagan, Thanksgiving Is Peculiarly of This Country.

Everyone who do not enter-torm their sense of humor startling to read history have had many a chuckle over the Pilgrim and Puritan festival of Thanksgiving. These early settlers of New England were so militantly Christian that they could not bear any suggestion of an earlier event. They objected to Christmas as "heathenish," because it contained—as it still contains—so many relics of pre-Christian days. Having done this, they turned around, seized on the most thoroughly pagan of all celebrations, that of the gathered harvest, and made it an institution that has grown and spread for three centuries, is the indictment drawn by a writer in an eastern magazine.
But the joke is not all on the Pilgrims. They, when sent back to a festival which has been held ever since man began to plant and gather crops but they made of it something peculiarly modern, Christian, and, at the last American.
They gave a religious character to a celebration which for ages had been a purely material jollification, and made it a part of the community's public policy, an occasion for coming together in common gratitude, hope and gratitude. All the changes and developments of the last 300 years have not been able to change the essential character of the Pilgrim Thanksgiving. How many inventions of today will last so long?
The first Thanksgiving feast, held in the fall of 1621, was not ordained by formal proclamation. The colony was too small to need such a notice. But the circumstances under which the celebration was held are told in Governor Bradford's history in a way well worthy of quotation:
"They (the colonists) begane now to gather in the small harvest they had, and to fitte up their houses and dwellings against winter, being all well recovered in health & strength, & had all things in good plenty; for as some were thus employed in affaires abroad, others were exercised in fishing, about cod, & bass, & other fish, of which they tooke good store, of which every family had their portion. . . . And now begane to come in store of foule, as winter approached, of which this place did abound when they came first, but afterwards decreased by degrees. And besides water foule, there was great store of wild Turkies, of which they took many, besides venison, &c. Besids they had about a peck a meale a weeke to a person, or now, since harvest, Indean corne to that proportion. Which made many afterwards write so largely of their plenty hear to their friends in England, which were not fained, but true reports."
Excepting small boys, one can hardly imagine the folk of a modern community boasting about their plenty under the stimulus of a "peck a meale a weeke to a person," plus such game as could be trapped, or shot with flintlock firearms. But such things depend mainly on the point of view, and that may not have improved so much in the last three centuries as we think. We of today know more of a thousand things than did governor Bradford and his companions, but it is not so certain that we know more of the basic business of living.
"Excellent hearts had our fathers of old," and for steady, cheerful courage, the Pilgrim colonists never have been surpassed.
Twelve years later, the colony had grown so much that a formal proclamation seemed necessary. The first one was issued on October 1, 1633, and the Thanksgiving celebration was held two weeks later, October 16. The custom soon spread throughout New England. Then, on October 3, 1789, the new President of the new nation, George Washington, called on the American people to assemble on Nov. 26 and give thanks, among other things,
"For the signal and manifold Mercies, and the favorable Interposition of His Providence in the course and conclusion of the late War . . . for the peaceful and rational manner in which we have been enabled to establish Constitutions and Governments for our safety and happiness; and particularly the national one now lately instituted."
Washington, it might be deduced from this alone, was a nationalist, with no leaning whatever toward state sovereignty, and with a perfect readiness to make his preferences manifest, in prayer as well as in any other way. An amusing instance of the frankness occurs later in the same proclamation, where he asks the people to pray heaven, "To protect and guide all Sovereigns and Nations (especially such as have shown kindness to us)."
An honored lineage, that of this best-beloved festival. It started in the days when the Neolithic dweller by the lakes of Switzerland finished bringing in his scanty harvest and settled down to a secure winter. It is close akin to the Dionysiac feasts of ancient Greece and the "barley night" of rural England. But it has a peculiarly American flavor and substance; and for this, one must thank the sturdy Pilgrims, whose iron courage was tempered by a fine humanity, and who proudly mulled into their beards when over their supper of small soup, they thanked God, "who had given them to suck of the abundance of the seas, and the treasures hid in the sands."

Book Exhibit at Westfield Friends' School

For the purpose of informing parents of the best books to give their children to read, the Westfield Friends' School will have an exhibit of several hundred volumes on the afternoon of Wednesday and Thursday, December 6 and 7, at 3 o'clock.
On the latter afternoon Mrs. Earl Barnes, as authority on Children's Reading, will speak on this subject.
None of the books exhibited will be for sale, although information as to where they can be obtained will be supplied.
Mrs. Naomi Bausman, principal of the school, has had such frequent requests as to what books are best for children of this or that grade, that it was decided to present the subject in a compact and authoritative manner.
There are many editions for instance, of John Hood and King Arthur, only a few of which are suitable for little folks of certain ages.
It is designed to have the exhibit a community affair and everyone is invited, whether a patron of the school or not.
For the benefit of the men who may not be able to attend the afternoon exhibit, an authoritative talk on Wednesday evening, December 6, from 8 o'clock until 9.30.

The annual Thanksgiving entertainment of the school was held Wednesday morning, November 29, and was largely attended by parents of the pupils and their friends.
All of the classes, from the first to the sixth grades inclusive, took part in the songs, recitations and plays.
Eloise Iloyer, of the sixth grade, president of the school league of honor, presided over the exercises and announced the different features. Charlotte M. Parry acted as secretary.

Y. W. C. A. Club Banquet

The Club Membership Banquet of the Burlington County Y.W.C.A. held last Saturday evening in the Burlington Baptist Church was a splendid success. There were 240 members present representing twenty-one different towns and twenty-seven clubs, all having come together by means of auto, trolley cars, autos and trucks.
A delicious supper was served by the Ladies' Aid of the church in the basement hall, which had been beautifully decorated with the "Y blue" crepe paper and candles by two Burlington grammar girl scouts.
The clubs vied with each other all through the dinner in singing, toasts and shouting cheers, each trying to make it well known that they were there in full force, with "all girls' short cuts, fat girls and thin, and that they will be had brought them all in."
Mrs. Henry Allertson, chairman of Girls' Work, was mistress of ceremonies. The program of the evening was full of inspiration beginning with the word of welcome given by Mrs. Collins, the county president, and ending on through to the splendid talk given by Mrs. John Dorey, of Moorestown, on "Service as the Real Test."
Those who, unfortunately, were not able to attend certainly missed a great treat and now know what they have to look forward to in the spring when the next "get-together" will be planned. Begin to talk about it and plan for it now!

THE GREATEST ART

IF YOU will look around you with unbiassed vision, without prejudice in your heart, and with a mind bent upon getting at the truth quite regardless of the pang it may entail, before very long you will discover that the greatest art of all arts is the art of pleasing others.
And that art, though simple as it may appear on the surface, is the most difficult art in the whole world of human practice.
It means at the very beginning of its acceptance the subjugation of spirit and passion, the combination of will, talent and effort to the free reception of others who shall every day, year in and year out, be your employers, you will discover that the greatest art of all arts is the art of pleasing others.
And that art, though simple as it may appear on the surface, is the most difficult art in the whole world of human practice.
It means at the very beginning of its acceptance the subjugation of spirit and passion, the combination of will, talent and effort to the free reception of others who shall every day, year in and year out, be your employers. You will discover that the greatest art of all arts is the art of pleasing others.
Like you, the judges are human, but their judgment, however it may affect your purse or temper, is final, and if it fails to please others no body will praise or buy it. And you proceed to nurse your disappointment and the bitterness of spirit that the painting is deficient somewhere in color, drawing or atmosphere or the quality that gives satisfaction.
But the true artist, in whatever field of human endeavor he may be seeking success, turns each failure to account by studying it good-humoredly and cheerfully, up its defects.
He turns the first canvas to the wall and begins to paint again, carefully avoiding previous mistakes.
And it is in such action as this that there is shown the true mettle of the man or woman who is determined to forget self by pleasing others.
It may be a difficult lesson to learn, and it may take years to comprehend all its intricacies and minute details, but when it is once mastered, old heartaches disappear like the hoary frost in the shining morning sun.
To please others ought to be the chief purpose of every young man and woman dependent on his or her physical or mental effort for livelihood and success.
Though an extremely trying thing to do, calling for patience and sometimes great humility, it frequently bestows upon those who have the fortitude to overcome rewards far in excess of their greatest expectations, and a joy whose gladness cannot be expressed in words.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL
Facts about your money; its history; amassing; whence it was derived; significance; lucky and lucky found.

JESSIE

CURIOUSLY enough, Jessie is really said to be the diminutive of Janet, although it is now considered a separate name, and from it Shake speare probably named his Jessica, "his most sweet Jewess." It has been a favorite with royalty and many of the queens of early times were so called in spite of its defects.
But misfortune has usually attended the royal ladies who bore this name, while the Jessees, the masculine counterparts, have had more auspicious careers. Vieux Jessee, or Jessee, reigned in Naples in disgrace and misery and her Spanish counterpart, Juana la Loca of Castile, went through a royal seige of melancholy madness.
Two heroines were so called; Jeanne of Flanders, or Jannedis la Flamm, as the Bretons called her, and the heroine of Henbonne, and the much more noble Jeanne la Pucelle of Orleans. Two saints gave Jessie and her derivatives a flavor of sanctity—Jeanne de Valois, daughter of Louis XI and foundress of the Annonciades, and Jeanne Francois de Chantel, the disciple of St. Francis de Sales.
Whether Shakespeare's lovely heroine of "The Merchant of Venice" was an improvement upon Jessie as short for Janet, or was really the feminine of Jesse, the father of David, is open to conjecture. However it may be, Jessie signifies "grace of the Lord."
Her tailless gem is the amethyst, which preserves its wearer from contagion and protects soldiers from harm in battle. It has a soothing effect upon one of light or frivolous mind. Saturday is Jessie's lucky day and 4 her lucky number. The primrose is her flower.
Jessie has always been a favorite name with the poets, especially the Scottish poets.

TEARS

TEARS are sad, there's little doubt,
But well to let them out,
And direct their scalding flow
To the drowning of your woe;
And perhaps before they stop
There will rise a little hope
That will fall upon some space
Wasteful a flower of grace
Beautifying some new day
That in your tears was slay.

The Friendly Path By Walter L. Robinson

LIFE INSURANCE

Life insurance is one of the greatest blessings of mankind.

That it has gained the approval and support of nearly all men of wisdom and prominence in the country is a just cause for rejoicing. No one must be very old to recall the days when a large number of people believed life insurance something which required one to die to win. Today, it is looked upon as offering an exceptional opportunity for saving, as well as protecting dear ones while men and women labor to provide the necessaries of life.

Life insurance companies' statements of distributions to policyholders or their beneficiaries usually are considered dull reading. But they would become intensely interesting to every intelligent person if he were to give them sufficient study and thought. Viewed either as a safe means of saving or as a legitimate means of protecting the welfare of wives or children, the cold figures take on new meaning which ought to increase the joy along life's pathway.

Contrasting the old belief that life insurance was a "die to win" proposition, the statement of one of the country's biggest companies shows that this corporation during 1920 paid out more than twice as much to living policyholders as it did to beneficiaries of those who had died. The exact figures are $79,300,938 paid to living policyholders and $35,455,758 to beneficiaries.

The work of selling life insurance isn't nearly as disagreeable as it used to be. But there are still a great many who should carry insurance who do not, and others who should carry more than they do who lack the courtesy or good taste to treat insurance salesmen with respect. Nevertheless, the salesmen, comprising a valuable army in the United States, are a brave body and, to their credit it may be said, are, as a rule, perfect gentlemen. They are trained to smile when rebuffed.

Those who give them the "glad hand" and buy a reasonable amount of insurance, just as they buy other necessities or as they place loose change in savings funds, will find more joy in following their daily paths.

YOUR HAND ¶How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Possibilities of Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

ILLNESS SHOWN IN THE HAND

CHRONIC indigestion, or digestive troubles, are marked in the hand by a wavy line of health. This sign is intensified by a poor and narrow line of the head and an island on the line of life shown at which period of life the trouble may be feared.

Kidney troubles are shown by puffy, watery-looking skin, with a star on the mount of the moon and ailments of the liver by a livid or yellow line of the heart, with a wavy or discolored line of the head having a bluish spot and a wavy line of health. Danger to be feared in maternity is seen in a line running from the upper part of the mount of Venus (or ball of the thumb) to the mount of Saturn, underlying the middle finger.

Chronic melancholia is threatened if there is a grill or gridiron on the mount of the moon, which lies toward the outside of the palm, near the wrist. If the line of the head is broken in small sections, giving the appearance of small squares, there is peril of loss of memory.

Opposite the first, which presented no difficulty, she wrote in the amount. And opposite the second, after a little coy hesitation, she wrote the word "Semele."

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

Has a Man Like This Proposed to You?

Symptoms: Bully chap, good heart, good looking, dark, well set up, blue eyes and reliable purse. Always notices every scenic effect everywhere, theatre, your clothes, sunsets, girls' faces in carmine decked, always rearranges your furniture and ornaments. Always wears odd colors, always a quaint little hanky sticks out of his breast pocket, purple socks, green silk shirt, of crepe de chine, silken collars, soft hats, and always advises you to change the things you have for other things regardless of your hard-earned cash. He likes you because you listen to his colorature ravings and he thinks that he can make a scene out of you.

IN FACT

He may!

Prescription to His Bride:
Learn your colors so that you, too, can talk. Talking colorature is in this case wiser than singing 1,000 trills.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 3

JESUS SENDING OUT MISSIONARIES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:1-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth laborers into the harvest.—Luke 10:2.
REFERENCE MATERIAL — Matthew 9:35-41.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Sends Out Seventy Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Sends Forth Seventy Missionaries.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC —Heralds of the Kingdom.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC —Our Home Mission Work.

1. The Seventy Sent Forth (vv. 1, 2).

1. Appointed by the Lord (v. 1). Only those should go forth who are appointed by the Lord.

2. Sent Forth Two by Two (v. 1). The purpose of this was that they might mutually help, counsel and support each other.

3. Reason for Their Appointment (v. 2). The harvest was great, but the laborers were few. The task before the Christian church after nearly 1900 years is still great.

4. Pray the Lord to Send Forth Laborers (v. 2). The realization of the prodigious task before us will cause us to pray to the Lord to send forth more laborers.

II. Instructions Given (vv. 3-16).

1. He Reveals the Dangers Confronting Them (v. 3). They were thrust forth by the Lord to proclaim His name, though so doing would expose them to deadly peril, even as lambs surrounded by hungry wolves. It matters not what the dangers are if the Lord sends forth.

2. Free From All Incumbrance (v. 4). The mission was urgent, so all that would in any way hinder the speedy execution of the task was to be left behind.

3. Distraction of Social Intercourse to Be Omitted (v. 4). Eastern salutations were long-drawn affairs. To go into such formalities would delay Christ's messengers.

4. Behavior in the Homes Where Received (vv. 5-9). (1) Offer the peace of the gospel (vv. 5, 6). This is to be done regardless as to whether it will be received or not. There is a reflex blessedness in preaching the gospel. Even when the message is rejected the effort is not wasted, but comes back to the one who has made the effort. (2) Do not shift quarters (vv. 7, 8). Missionaries should remain in the home where they have been received, content with what is given them. They should not demand better food and more comfortable quarters than what is commonly provided. However, that which is given should be gratefully received, for the laborer is worthy of his hire. (3) Healed the sick (v. 9). These disciples were given power to heal the sick. The ministers of Christ should seek to give relief to those in distress and use every opportunity to proclaim the gospel message.

5. The Awful Fate of Those Who Reject Christ's Message (vv. 10-16). Their case is more hopeless than that of Sodom. Those who reject Christ's messengers reject Christ.

III. The Return of the Seventy (vv. 17-24).

1. Their Report (v. 17). They were richly elated. They seemed to be agreeably surprised. They not only found that they could heal the sick, but cast out demons also. They seemed to be filled with self-satisfaction. It is easy even in Christian service to be spoiled by our successes.

2. Jesus' Answer (vv. 18-24). (1) He told them it was no surprise to Him (vv. 18, 19). With prophetic eye He saw their success as indicating that a time when the prince of this world would be overthrown (John 12:31). By virtue of His mighty triumph over Satan He assures them that they need have no fear of what should befall them. Nothing could harm them; nothing could prosper which opposed them. Indeed, nothing can harm the servant who goes about His Master's business. (2) Real cause for rejoicing (v. 20). He promptly rebuked them, telling them that their chief joy should be because of their heavenly relation, not because of these miraculous gifts. That above all which should provoke gratitude is the fact that God has chosen in Christ and saved us, inscribing our names in heaven. (3) Jesus' exultation (vv. 21, 22). The conscientious that soon the victory would be won because God had committed all things unto Him, and that only as men received Him could they know the Father, caused Him to rejoice in what was being accomplished. (4) Congratulates the disciples. (vv. 23, 24).

Things That Ye Shall Do.

A PARTY IN KITTOWN

MRS. PUSSUMS sent an invitation to all the kittens and every Puss in the village, for she wanted her daughter to have the very largest party that had ever been held in Kittown on her birthday.

Everyone was glad to come, and, anyway, as Pussy Pussum's father was the one that governed the neighborhood, they felt bound to be present, and so all day there were great preparations going on, all trying to look their best at the wonderful birthday party. It was to be an outdoor affair and the barn was to be used for games, and as soon as it was dark Mrs. Pussums and her daughter stood by the garden gate to receive their guests.

They could see them coming from all directions. "There comes Miss Tibbens wearing that old three-colored dress, and if there isn't Mrs. Tabby in her old tiger calico. Why she does not wear a red ribbon with that dull colored dress is more than I can tell."

"Oh, dear, here comes Mr. Snookums," said Pussy, holding her fan in front of her face to hide her blushes. "I do hope father will not start a quarrel with him; he never does a thing, but father does not seem to like him. I think he is a very fine mannered cat."

"Hush," said Mrs. Pussums, "here comes Mrs. Persian. My dear, our party is a great success, for never has she attended a social affair in Kittown before. She is late, of course, but that is so every one will be able to see her beautiful dress. Isn't she sweet, dressed all in fluffy white?

Of course, I think your dress looks better with that touch of black, but everyone does not have the same taste in dressing, of course. Good evening, Mrs. Persian, so glad you could come, and now we must begin the party right away. We were waiting for you, my dear."

By this time the lawn was well filled and the Cat Brothers' orchestra struck up a lively tune from the top of the back fence, and off whirled the dancers, making merry in the moonlight.

But Pussy Pussums was not with the dancers, and when her father went to look for her, what did he see but Pussy and Mr. Snookums sitting side by side on the back steps.

Mr. Pussums growled and humped his back, but Snookums did not run. He knew it was now or never, so he jumped up and growled back, but he stepped toward Mr. Pussums and not away from him.

"You are just as big as he is," whispered Pussy, "and you may as well tell father tonight as any time."

When Pussy's father saw that Snookums was not going to run he dropped his back and stopped growling. "You youngsters better join the dancers," he said sweetly. "This is your party, Pussy, you know."

Pussy and Snookums ran toward the whirling couples, and there they all danced until someone tossed a bottle over the wall and broke up the party, but everyone voted it the best affair ever given in Kittown, and Pussy Pussums and Mr. Snookums told the guests that the next big affair would be their wedding.

They Told the Guests.

Tabby with her nose in the air," said Mrs. Pussums. "Well, she won't be as airy after she sees our beautiful party; and I do believe she has a beau at last, for Mr. Tompkins is trotting along beside her. Well, he isn't much of a catch, for he is old, but then it is her last chance, so she can't be fussy.

"And there is Mrs. Yellow Cat. Isn't her dress a fright! If I had only that yellow dress to my back I would never go to a stylish party. A white collar would improve it, but she hasn't even that."

Mrs. Pussums stopped talking long enough to welcome each guest as they trotted by, but as soon as she could she began again. "Here comes dainty Miss White, and I do believe Mr. Tom Black has her by the arm. Well, they will make a good-looking couple. "Oh, do look, Pussy, there is Mrs.

A MAN'S NAME

A BUSINESS man said the other day that it was a serious error for a would-be business man, especially a salesman, to forget the name of the unimportant little Mr. Nobody-in-Particular from Not-Much-of-Anywhere with whom he was trying to do business. No man likes to have you forget his name. If the man is important and is used to receiving attentions then he doesn't notice your oversight so much, but the small man who gets little notice in the world feels specially sensitive about it and is especially gratified when you go out of your way to remember him.

Often, however, when you are introduced to strangers it is physically impossible to get their names. This is partly due to the fact that we Americans are prone to speak indistinctly. Now the best thing to do when you have not heard a man's name distinctly is to make amends for this failure within a short time. Ask some one who knows the man what his name is. Better still go to the man in question and say: "I didn't quite understand your name. Will you set me right?" It is better to do this than to wait until you have to introduce the stranger to some newcomers and then to have to pause in making your introductions to ask the newcomer what his name is anyway.

A salesman who remembers customers' names is always an asset. And don't believe there is any special knack about it. It simply requires a little attention. Just think about the name the first time you hear it. Think about the name in association with some certain feature of the one to whom it belongs. A celebrated detective has a phenomenal record for remembering faces and in telling them under different disguises makes a point to remember some one distinctive, unusual characteristic. If you wish to remember names try associating the name with some one strong characteristic of the face. It is a matter of habit more than anything else and you will find that it will make you popular and may eventually lead to striking success.

THE KING OF BOYVILLE

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the McClure Co.

BOYS who are born in a small town are born free and equal.

In the big city it may be different; there are doubtless good little boys who disdain bad little boys, and poor little boys who are never to be invited under any circumstances. But in a small town, every boy, good or bad, rich or poor, stands among boys as his fellows. The son of the banker who owns a turning-pole in the back yard, does homage to the baker's boy who can sail on the top and drop and catch by his legs; while the good little boy who is kept in wide collars and curls by a mistaken mother comes through the white paling of his father's fence at the troupe looking for the swimming hole, and pays all the reverence which his dwarfed nature can muster to the sign of the trapeze. In the social order of boyville the in country towns, a boy is not conspicuously fat because he can do, and by what his father is. And so, Willie Jones, Pennington, whose boy name was Piggy Pennington, was the King of Boyville. For Piggy could walk on his hands, curling one foot gracefully over his head, and pointing the other straight in the air; he could walk on his heels on a piling trapeze; he could chin a pole so many times that no one could count the number; Piggy could turn a somersault in the air from the level ground, both backward and forwards, he could "tread" water and "dog-fish" his hair; he could hit any marble in any ring from "taws" and "knucks down,"—and better than all, he could cut his initials in the ice on skates, and whirl around and around so many times that he looked like an animated shadow, when he would dart away up the stream, his red "comfort" flapping behind him like a badge of defiance. In the history books such a boy would be the son of a widowed mother, and turn out very good or very bad, but Piggy was not a story book boy, and his father kept a grocery, and whooping at the top of his voice.

The next morning, Piggy Pennington astonished his friends by bringing a big armful of red and yellow and pink and white roses to school.

He had never done this before, and when he had run the gauntlet of the big boys, who were not afraid to steal them from him, he made straight for his schoolroom, and stood holding them in his hands while the girls gathered about him teasing for the beauties. It was nearly time for the last bell to ring, and Piggy knew that his Hearts Desire would be in the room by the time he got there. He was not mistaken. But Hearts Desire did not clamor with the other girls for one of the roses. Piggy stood off their pleadings as long as he could with "Shes," "Why naw, of course I won't," "Naw, what I want to give you one for," and "Go away from here I tell you," and still Hearts Desire did not ask for her flowers. There were but a few moments left before school would be called to order, and in desperation Piggy gave one rose away. It was not a very pretty rose, but he hoped she would see that the others were to be given away, and ask for one. But she—his Hearts Desire—stood near a window, talking to the freckle-faced boy. Then Piggy gave away one rose after another. As the last bell began to ring Piggy tried to make some sign to let his feelings be known, but every time he had failed. Lying in wait for her with a bouquet suddenly breaking upon her with a glory of backward and forward somersaults, he had received the jeers of his heart. So only one heart beat with but one single thought, and the oth- ers dark day. When all the roses and lilies and red apples and picture cards and other tokens of esteem from Piggy Pennington had been delivered to her of thoughts, entirely immaterial, to the uses of this narrative. But, three Hallowe'en days take to the enchantment of corn silk cigarettes and tattan and grapevine quoits; and the Piggy ahead would blush when birds about the "Gypsy's Warning," and The Child and the Grave Writing Mother," and "She's a Daisy, She's a Darling, She's a Dumpling, She's a Lamb" whenever he was in hearing distance of his heart's desire, in the hope of conveying to her some hint of the state of his affections; but it was useless. Even when he tried to whistle plaintively as he passed her house in the morning glories for him brought forth no responsive echo.

One morning in the late spring, he spent half his time between breakfast among his mother's roses, which were just in first bloom. He had taken out three all the wire from an old broom, and all his kite string. His mother had to call three times before he could tear himself away from the flowers that morning. The courters saw plainly that his majesty was troubled.

After this first day he still kept at it. At dusk, when the evening chores were done, Piggy Pennington walked past the home of his Hearts Desire, and howled out a doleful ballad which began:

"You ask what makes this darkey wee-eep,
Why he likes others an not gay."

But a man on the sidewalk passing, said: "Well, son, that's pretty good, but wouldn't you just as lief sing as to make that noise?" So the king went to bed with a heavy heart.

He took that heart to school with him the next morning, and dragged it over the school ground, playing crack the whip and "stink-base." But when he saw Hearts Desire wearing in her hair one of the white roses from his mother's garden—the Pennington's had the only white roses in the little town—he knew it was from the wreath which he had given her, and so high was his boyish heart that it was with an effort that he kept it out of his throat. There were smiles and smiles that day. During the singing they began, and every time she came past him from a class, and every time he could spy his own, the freckle-faced boy reply, or her grammar, a flood of gladness swept over his soul. That night Piggy Pennington followed the girl from the schoolhouse to the post office, and in a burst of enthusiasm he walked on his hands in front of the crowd, for nearly a block. When his Hearts Desire said:

"Ah, ain't you afraid you'll hurt yourself, doing that?" Piggy pretended not to hear her, and said to the boys:

"Aw, the smallpox! I come down to my barn, an' I'll do somepin that'll make yer head swim."

He was too exuberant to contain himself, and when he left the girls he started to run after a stray chicken that hung around the alley, but he was out of breath. He did not mean to run in the direction his Heart's Desire had gone, but when he saw her, and came up with her suddenly.

Her eyes beamed upon him, and he could not run away, so he stopped. She made room for him on the sidewalk, and he could do nothing but walk beside her. For a block they were so embarrassed that neither spoke.

It was Piggy who broke the silence. His words came from his heart. He had not yet learned to speak otherwise.

"Where's your rose?" he asked, not seeing it.

"What rose?" said the girl, as though she had never in her short life heard of such an absurd thing as a rose.

"Oh, you know," returned the boy, stopping irregularly, to make the thing of his toes come on the cracks in the sidewalk. There was another pause, during which the girl pulled open a pebble and threw it at a bird in a treetilla heart was sinking rapidly.

"Oh, that one?" said his Heart's Desire, turning full upon him with the enchantment of her childish eyes. "Why, here it is. I'm going to put it in my Corned Beef Hash.

Chop two parts of cooked potatoes and one part corned beef very fine, season with plenty of pepper and salt, heat thoroughly, adding a little butter and a grated pepper shredded. Spread thickly on salt slices of beef tired toast and slip a poached egg on each; sprinkle with pepper and salt and minced parsley.

Oatmeal Rolls.

Take one-half cupful of hot mashed potatoes, add one cupful of scalded milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. When lukewarm add one-half of a yeast cake. Four cupfuls of flour, one and one-half cupfuls of rolled oats which have been scalded with one-half cupful of boiling water. Knead to a smooth dough and set to rise in a greased bowl for three hours. Knead down, cutting well with knife as it rises repeat the cutting down, then when risen turn out and mold into rolls. If prepared in the afternoon the rolls may be set in the icebox over night, then brought in and allowed to rise and be baked for breakfast. Bake 45 minutes in a hot oven.

WHY ?

IS LEAP YEAR CONNECTED WITH FEMININE PROPOSALS OF MARRIAGE

THE English "Illustrated Almanac," first printed in 1865, is authority for the statement that the ancient Parliament, about the year 1228, passed a law in which it was ordained that "during the years of the King's blessed majesty, Margaret, each maiden lady, of both high and low estate, shall have the liberty to speak ye man she likes during ye lepe year. If he refuses to take her to bee his wyf, he shall be mulcted in his arms or gowne-handkerchiefs, or less, as his estate may be, except and always if he can make it appear that he is betrothed to another woman, then he shall be free."

So far as is known this is the first official recognition of the removal of the privileges of proposal during the leap-year, and the idea probably grew out of the unmarried condition being that during this period women had the right to "leap" or throw themselves at a husband, while by law it considered unmaldenly at other times. An early reference to this custom occurs in a work on "Courtship, Love and Marriage" published in 1606 which states that "no man will be entitled to the benefit of clergy who doth in any wise treat a leap-year proposal with slight or contumely."

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"BOYCOTT"

DEFINED by the dictionary as "to extract/ate the refusal of all dealings with a person or persons," "boycott" belongs to that class of words which had their origin in a real person.

Captain Boycott of Connemara, Ireland, was in 1880 the agent of Lord Earne, an Irish land owner. The captain was a hard, severe master and refused to remits petitioned Lord Earne to remove him. But the landlord refused to pay any attention to the complaints and the tenants and their friends took a leaf from the book of the South Sea islanders and "laid a taboo" upon Boycott. They not only refused to work for him but prevented others from doing so. His servants and his farmhands deserted him and any merchant who would sell him goods was immediately ostracized by the neighborhood. When he went to market, Boycott found that no one would buy his goods, no matter how cheaply he priced them, and it was finally necessary for the armed troops to harvest the crops.

It was as a result of this action that the word found its way into the English language, being originally spelled with a capital "B" but being so frequently adopted by the masses, it lost even this distinguishing mark of its origin.

MANY NAMES MENTIONED FOR OFFICE

Nomination Blanks Now Coming in Rapidly in Weekly News Straw Vote

Nomination ballots began to arrive in greater numbers during the past week in The Weekly News straw vote for officers of the Borough of Palmyra.

While it is somewhat early yet to pick out the leaders, George W. Harris easily the favorite thus far for Mayor, although a number of votes have come in for James H. Hartley. A number of other names also have been mentioned.

For Council the votes are more scattered and quite a variety of candidates have been mentioned. Finney, Hartely, Stover, Trout and A. E. Fowler are among the leaders.

Some of the new ballots were marked for Thomas Leonard. Two others named W. H. Cook for Mayor, and Nelson Wallace, Jr., and Frank Grassman for Council. Other "West End" candidates for Council have also been named are Lewis Wood, John DeWitt Morris and M. J. Quinn.

Early in January a ballot with the names of the leading candidates will be printed. One of these ballots will be placed in some of the central stores and at the post office. YMCA Scholarships Available to Ex-Service Men

With a record of more than 100,000 scholarship awards to ex-service men in the past three years, the YMCA announces that by December 31, 1922, it will have completed the distribution of awards up to the limit of the Educational Service Fund of the Association's National War Work Council. The expenditure involved in these awards up to the present is in excess of $5,125,000.

The announcement is made at this time by the Extension Division of the United YMCA schools as a final reminder to ex-service men who may wish to share in the awards. These last scholarships will be distributed on the basis established when a supplementary fund of $600,000 was made available a year ago, namely 50% of the cost of the courses in which the ex-service men have taken enrollments. Nearly 19,000 men have taken awards under this plan. The number who obtained full scholarship awards totalled 87,660.

The courses from which the ex-service man can make his selection during these closing weeks of the fund cover, as heretofore, every line of training of a practical nature and for general culture, and may be taken by correspondence or by residence work in schools at more than 1,200 points in the United States and Canada. Forms for application for the awards may be obtained from the office of Guy C. Hendry, secretary of the Burlington County YMCA Committee, 117 Main street, Mount Holly, N. J., or by application to the extension division, United YMCA Schools, 347 Madison avenue, New York City.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because — you cry at a sad play? Hasn't the strain of trying to keep back your tears spoiled many a good play for you, because some one with you giggled or remarked about your "softness," "chicken-heartedness," etc? Never you mind, the fellow that can weep is a bigger soul than the one who cannot. So be glad if you are in the class where sadness touches you. It means that life has really meant something to you, that beautiful things and beautiful ideas have done something for you. That sort of person would not cry when on the stage a child is seen dragged from its parents? If you don't cry then you are a little soul, if you do you are a real human being. If you weep alone your loneliness is the right kind.

SO

Your Get-away here is:

That you've done exactly what the writer of the play wanted you to do.

Wifely Ornaments.

An old paper which dates back to 1403 states: "Thre ornamentys belonge prynceply to a wyfe: a ryngo on hir fynger; a broch on her brest, and a garlond on her hede. The ryngo betakene the true love, as I have seyd; the broch betokene the cleenesse in herte and chastyre that she oweth to have; the garlond betokene the gladnesse and the dygnytye of the sacrament of wedlock."

Rushes Signify One's Welcome.

The saying "not worth a rush" dates back to the days before carpets were invented, and the floors were strewn with rushes. When an honored guest was expected fresh green ones were cut and spread, but people of little consequence had to be contented with rushes that had been used, while still other folk put down straw.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; silence it was dubbed; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

DEBORAH

THE quaintest of Puritan names is Deborah. The quiet, industrious efficiency which seems to represent puritanical standards is best represented in the bee and Deborah is the feminine personification of that busy little gatherer of honey, since the name comes from a verb meaning to hum or buzz.

A perfect aroma of sanctity surrounds Deborah from her Biblical source, also, for the Deborah who is best recorded in history was the faithful nurse of Rebekah, wife of Isaac the Patriarch. So lamented was Deborah when she died that the tree beneath which she was buried was known as the oak of weeping.

Since Deborah is derived from a word meaning to hum or buzz, the name came, in later times, to signify eloquent. For that reason, it is believed that a child christened Deborah will be gifted with exceptional fluency and persuasiveness.

Unfortunately, Deborah's association with the English Puritans and their unpopular doctrine, caused the name to be much ridiculed by the literary lights of the times, and brought it into usage more by the peasantry than by the higher classes. Its appearance in this country with the advent of the Puritans, however, brought it speedily into permanent vogue.

Amber is Deborah's talismanic jewel. It will ward off ill luck and disease and is said to promote bodily strength. Saturday is Deborah's lucky day for her lucky number.

Ranking high on the list of charming, "movie" stars is handsome Mae Busch, who is known to the patrons of the picture houses as one of the strongest players and one who pleases the majority of people perhaps as much as any other actress on the screen.

"What's in a Name?"
By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

JANET

JANET, sometimes spelled Janette, I learn no relationship to Jane, parodoxical as it may seem. As early as the Thirteenth century, Genets appeared as a feminine proper name, long before Jane, Joan, or Johanna were known to us. In the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries, Gennet made her appearance and by a process of evolution there came Janets, Janette and finally Janet, though the latter is by far the most modern form of the name.

History, which records innumerable instances of Janet and her derivatives being used with extreme popularity in those early times, likewise chronicles the amusing and almost unbelievable story of one Willelmus Richardson and his wife Christiana who had a family of eighteen children but became so destitute for names for this extraordinary brood that they had only two Johannes, two Willelmuses, two Christinas, and three Janets. Strange to relate, this was not an unusual custom of duplication in those days.

Genlda was an old Frankish form of Janet which was exceedingly popular, indeed, it is thought to be so direct a forerunner as to be conclusive proof that Janet sprang from it and from Genets—not from any form of John. Genetla is another early form that appears in old Frankish chronicles. Undoubtedly Janet was left behind in France and became confused with Jean, hence erroneous modern belief that the two names are interchangeable. Like its offspring Jessie, Janet means "grace of the Lord."

Her talismanic stone is onyx, which unless it has some mystic significance for the wearer, as in this instance, should be avoided, since it cools the ardor of love, provokes discord and seventeen other evils. Any one who has a mystic right to it, a happy marriage is promised. Monday is Janet's lucky day and six her lucky number.

An unforgettable poem was written by an early poet to "Janette":

"Your eyes had a swimming glory, Janette,
Revealing the old dear story—my pet.
They were gray, with that chastened tinge of the sky.
When the trout leaps quickest to seek the fly,
And they matched with your golden hair—my pet."

"HUMBLE PIE"

THE expression "to eat humble pie"—meaning to humiliate or abase oneself or to make an abject apology for a fault committed—dates back to the days of medieval England, when the forests of the nobles were well stocked with deer, and venison pie was a distinctly common article of diet.

The refuse of the deer, together with the other portions of the animal which were considered unfit for the consumption of the nobility, were known as the "umbles" and were given to the poor, who, in turn, made pies of them in imitation of their masters in the castle. "Umble-pie" therefore became suggestive of poverty, of the acceptance of favors and was later applied to degradations of other kinds in a metaphorical sense. In time, possibly through the Cockney habit of using h's where they don't belong, the word "umble" became "humble" and, as such, is in general use today—though the vast majority of people would see no connection between it and the refuse left after cleaning the carcass of a deer.

Has a Man Like This Proposed to You?

WINTER MORNING

By WILL M. MAUPIN

WHEN the frost is on the fodder,
And a tingle in the air;
When the pumpkins have been gathered
And the corn is shucked with care;
When the grease is on the griddle
And the batter's in the crock,
Life's worth living where contentment
When you rise at 6 o'clock.

When the cakes are on the griddle,
And the sirup's in the jug;
When the coffee has been settled,
And the fire is warm and snug;
When you smell the breakfast ready,
And you hear the "get up" knock,
There's a lot of joy in living,
Though you rise at 6 o'clock.

When the buckwheats reach the table,
Mountain high and piping hot;
When with sirup and with butter
They glide to the proper spot;
When you've eaten all you're able,
Full of "bucks" your wife has sent,
You can hike off to the office
Full of grub and sweet content.

Talk to me of pate de fol gras!
This of sauces, puddings, pies!
Talk of table d'hote and cuisine—
Not from me they'll get a prize.
Give to me the smoking buckwheats,
Stacked up high and piping hot!
Maple sirup, golden butter—
Ah, that hits the proper spot!

By JOHN BLAKE

KEEP YOUR PROMISE

IN BUSINESS the man whose ratin among his associates is the highest is the man who keeps his promises. Promises in an up to date game, must be kept. If they are not there is no more credit for the gentleman who makes them.

But business is not all promises to pay. There are promises to enter into contracts and there is the shipment ready at a certain time; promises to make business engagements.

And the man who is more prodigal of promises than he is of remembrance to keep them soon is regarded with distrust and suspicion.

A man who has been immensely successful in the manufacturing business is regarded by his associates as "hard boiled" in the matter of promises.

It is almost impossible to get one out of him. But once his promise is given, performance is assured, even though the performance may mean a heavy financial loss to him.

He has discovered that it is just as profitable to him to keep his promises at par as it is to keep the stock of his creditors at par.

You may not be in business, or connected with business, save in the capacity of a fellow employee.

But you will find that the value of your promises is just as important to you as the value of your employers' promises are to him.

You will learn if you are observant that you are judged not by making promises but by keeping them. And after you have tested your promises as found to be good you will be trusted. When a man is trusted he has made an excellent start.

It is always well to consider the matter of a promise before you make it. This applies as much to a promise to take lunch at a certain time or a certain day as to fulfill an important business engagement.

If you make no promises that you are not reasonably sure to keep, you will come to regard your word as worth something. If your friends know that they will not need to call you up and remind you of a promise your value will increase in their eyes.

The promise-breaker is a worthless bunch and word-breakers have no standing. Think well of your word and you will keep your promises. And as soon as this is established the world will think well of you.

(Copyright by John Blake.)

Mistaken Policy.

People shouldn't be so savin' with their smiles. The more you give the more you git, applies to pleasant looks. The feller that looks like he had a pain in his equator when he greets you is cheatin' himself outen the joy of life.—Thomas Jefferson Putnam.

Mother's Cook Book

There is an old refrain which runs: "Ask me no questions, I'll tell you no lies." I am inclined to think that it is full of metal philosophy. Most of us probably, have put up our hardest fights for veracity on occasions when questions have been asked us, that never should have been asked.—Katherine Fullerton Gerould.

WHAT TO EAT

Deviled Chicken.

Make a sauce of salt, pepper, dry mustard, grated lemon peel, a dash of cayenne, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a few drops of tabasco. Add a lump of butter the size of an egg when the sauce begins to boil. When very hot add cubes of cold cooked chicken. Veal, pork or beef may be used in the same way.

Fried Chicken.

Cut up the chicken and pound each piece of fat with a potato masher or mallet. Season, dredge with flour and fry in butter or drippings.

Chicken a la Maryland.

Cut up a tender chicken, season with salt and pepper, dip in egg and crumbs and arrange the pieces close together in a buttered baking dish. Dot each piece with butter, cover with a dripping pan and bake in a hot oven until brown. Make a cream sauce and put all the crumbs and bits of chicken from the pan into the sauce. Pour the sauce over the chicken.

Escalloped Chicken.

Use any kind of cold cooked chicken, freed from skin, fat and bone. Make a cream sauce. Put a layer of the sauce in a baking dish, then a layer of chicken, cut fine, then a layer of crumbs, then sauce, and repeat until the dish is full, leaving a layer of buttered crumbs on the top. Bake in a moderate oven until well browned, adding a little milk and water occasionally if it seems too dry.

Chicken Goulash.

Cut into dice two medium-sized raw potatoes. Into a hot frying pan pour two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and add the diced potatoes. Stir to keep from burning and cook five minutes. Add a dash of paprika, a cupful of boiling water, a crushed bean of garlic, a cupful of cold cooked chicken, chopped, salt and a handful of mushrooms. Cover and cook until the potatoes are done.

Packing Furniture.

When packing furniture for moving, old stockings will be found invaluable for wrapping legs of chairs and tables. They will not tear or leave exposed places for scratching, as paper does.

Not Well to Be Too Observing.

A person who is too keen an observer of the business, of the crowd, like one who is too close in observing the labor of the bees, will often be stung for his curiosity.—Pope.

When the Last Trump Sounds.

The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first.—I Thessalonians 4:16.

Such as I Love.

Such as I love, I rebuke and chastise. Be zealous, therefore, and do penance.—Apocalypse 3:19.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 10

THE STORY OF THE GOOD SAMARITAN

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Lev. 19:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Showing Kindness to a Stranger.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of the Good Samaritan.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being a Good Neighbor.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Who Is My Neighbor?

1. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-28).

1. The Lawyer's Question (v. 25). "Lawyer" here means one versed in religious law—the Scriptures. This does not mean lawyer in our modern sense of that term. It would more nearly correspond to a theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trap Jesus—to induce Him to take such a stand as would weaken His influence as a teacher. He expected Jesus to set forth some new requirements which would conflict with or disparage the law.

2. Jesus' Question (v. 26). Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer He did not evade his question. He sent him to the law—the field which was familiar to him. He thus was foiled of his own weapon.

3. The Lawyer's Reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man. This expresses the whole of human duty.

4. Jesus Reply (v. 28.) This straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had or can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. Man's failure to measure up to this requirement is his condemnation. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and convicted of guilt.

II. Who Is My Neighbor (vv. 29-37).

1. The Lawyer's Question (v. 29). This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the meaning of words.

2. Jesus' Answer (vv. 30-37). Christ's reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the parable of the Good Samaritan He makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor, or what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor. He thus was convicted of not having been a neighbor.

(1) Who is my neighbor? This desolate and wounded man left on the highway by the robbers is the man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door or on the outside of the world. Those who have the Spirit of Christ can see their neighbors on every hand. (2) What being a neighbor means. Our supreme concern should not be "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is (a) to see those about us who need help (v. 33). Love is keen to discern need. We should be on the lookout for those in need of our help. (b) Have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as He came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. All those who have His nature will be likewise moved. (c) Give to those in need (v. 34). Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy, but are unwilling to personally minister to them. Many times the personal touch is more important than the material aid. We should give ourselves as well as our money. (d) Bind up wounds (v. 34). (e) Set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is proof that love is genuine. Christians will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those who have need. This kind of sympathy is greatly needed today. (f) Bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. Much Christian service is spasmodic, helps and then leaves a man to take care of himself. (g) Give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God His only Son. It cost Christ His life. May we go and do likewise!

A Jazzy Warning.

There are those who refuse to accept the conventional, no matter how expressed. Take the matter of the warning signals now common on the backs of motor cars. Usually they flash readily the one word, "Stop," but the other evening on Fifth avenue, when a light four was brought to a standstill, the command, "Hail, Kid," flared into view.—Detroit News.

The Labors of Map-Making.

To map 43 per cent of the United States, the topographic engineers are estimated to have tramped an aggregate of approximately nine million miles; for the average amount of walking varies from five miles for every square mile surveyed in ordinary country to ten or more miles in rough country.

Whale Meat is Jap Delicacy.

The Japanese consider salted whale meat a delicacy. The whales are caught off the coast of Korea and the flesh and blubber are cut up and sent to Japan for sale as food.

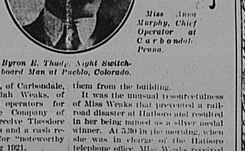
Medals for Services in Fire, Wreck and Flood

Miss Keziah Weeks, Night Operator - in - Charge at Hatboro, Penna.

Miss Anna Murphy, Chief Operator at Carbondale, Penna.



Byron E. Thady, Night Switchboard Man at Pueblo, Colorado.

Miss Anna Murphy, of Carbondale, Pa., and Miss Keziah Weeks, of Hatboro, Pa., both operators for The Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, will receive Theodore N. Vail Silver Medals and a cash reward of $250 each for "noteworthy public service" during 1921.

These two names appeared in a list of nine silver medal winners and one gold medal winner announced by the trustees of the Theodore N. Vail Memorial Fund, the gold medal and $500 going to Byron E. Thady, a night switchboard man for the Mountain States Telephone & Telegraph Company at Pueblo, Colorado.

Miss Murphy's opportunity for noteworthy service came when she was on a train leaving Honesdale. Looking out of the window she saw flames pouring from a store immediately beneath the Honesdale telephone office. Without hesitation she jumped from the moving train and after rushing into the railroad station and sending a telegram to the Traffic Superintendent at Scranton she hurried to the burning building.

She found the operating room filled with smoke. The operator-in-charge was playing a fire extinguisher upon the flames, so Miss Murphy took a position at the switchboard. She telephoned to the Scranton headquarters and remained at the board until the smoke became so dense that she ordered the girls to leave, following them from the building.

It was the unusual resourcefulness of Miss Weeks that prevented a railroad disaster at Hatboro and resulted in her being named as a silver medal winner. At 5.30 in the morning, when she was in charge of the Hatboro telephone office, Miss Weeks received a call from a train dispatcher at Philadelphia asking her to reach the station agent at Hatboro.

A fire had seriously damaged the railroad bridge near there and a train, due to leave Hatboro in fifteen minutes, was about to pass over the structure. After vainly trying to reach the station agent, Miss Weeks called a neighbor and asked her to send someone to the station to warn the train crew. Thus a wreck was averted.

Mr. Thady's service was rendered in Pueblo during the flood there in June, 1921. He was only 20 years old. The evidence shows that he worked untiringly throughout the night for the comfort of the thirty nine operators who were marooned in the telephone building. He wished time after time, waist deep in water—in imminent danger of being trapped by the swift current which swept through the lower floor of the building—to rescue records which were essential to the prompt restoration of telephone service in the devastated district. He stuck to his post after all others had been carried to safety.

Something to Think About
By F. A. WALKER

THE ROAD TO FAME

How often in your dreams have you passed over this hard-worn, densely packed road, reached the goal and stood there in pride listening to the enthusiastic cheer of the adulring throngs around you!

In your youthful days, when new visions, like beautiful flowers, were born over night; when hope had not yet become familiar with dejection; when to picture an achievement was to realize its full accomplishment, you soared to the hilltops on the sure, swift wings of an eagle, commanding the world to kneel at your exalted presence and do your bidding.

You put forth your hand and nations obeyed.

You lifted up your voice and thousands cheered.

You girded on your armor and armies followed your fearless leadership without questioning your authority or doubting your ability.

Every youth has had such dreams. Every boy has set himself a king and ever girl has been his queen!

The dream of honor, glory and fame is the dream of every human being possessed of high spirit and lofty aim.

It is to this dream some of us turn in later years, and gaze at the purple vasts beyond, shorn of wings, with a sensation of illness in the bones and blood, a weakness in the breast, a sickening fluttering in the heart, and an emptiness in the brain.

And it is this same, old youthful dream which keeps the faithful on the road with their packs upon aching backs, as they slowly wend their way to the clearer atmosphere, and manage sometimes to reach out their trembling hands and touch the god of Fame, too weak and worn to enjoy the fruits of their gathering.

Dream on, young man and woman, and keep climbing, with imperishable ardor.

Let nothing daunt your enthusiasm, dim your vision or diminish your courage.

The greatest things in life, the finest in art, music and literature, had their birth in the dreams of an inspired mind.

The magnificent lines and proportions of architecture came from the brain of a dreamer, who traced them upon paper, then built them in stone and steel.

It is the dreamer who, when once he puts his foot on the road to fame, refuses to turn back.

Those without vision falter and perish!

The council was organized under the leadership of State Committeewoman, Mrs. Alice E. G. Sherman, and by vote of those present will be composed of the president and chairman of the entertainment committee of each unit.

The following officers were elected: president, Mrs. Darrell Medford smit; vice president, Mrs. Worrell, Mount Holly unit; treasurer, Miss Smith, Burlington unit; secretary, Mrs. Shelmire, Moorestown unit.

The Bowling Tournament at the Country Club

The fall tournament at the Country Club will end on December 22nd, to be followed on the night of the 23d with a bowlers' dinner at the club house at which time the prizes for the first and second teams and for the highest individual game will be awarded. The present high game record is held by Douglas Clark with a score of 231 pins, but as some of the other cracks are going strong, there is a chance that this score will be topped before the tournament ends.

Staunton's team, which has been way out in front from the beginning, has been gradually overhauled until they now are only leading Boehme's team by a couple of games, with Wright, Ayres and Willits's teams right on their heels. The genial captain of the leading team is still wearing his celebrated smile, but it does not appear to be quite as broad as it was a few weeks ago. The rest of the teams are also smiling, but the old saying still applies that "he laughs best who laughs last."

The standing of the teams for the week ending December 1st was as follows:

		Won	Lost
1	Staunton	22	8	.733
2	Boehme	19	11	.633

COST OF SCHOOLS AT HIGHEST POINT

Jersey Commissioner of Education Reports Heavy Increase in Annual Outlay.

MORE BUILDINGS ARE NEEDED

State Board Finds Charges Against County Official Unfounded—Those Who Do Pay Their Taxes Bear Fair Share of Burden.

Trenton.—Costs of maintaining the schools of New Jersey have nearly doubled, according to the annual report of State Commissioner of Education John Enright, submitted to the state board. For the year 1917-1918 the expenses were $31,741,295.87. Since then there has been a constant increase, until last year's total of $42,856,195.63 was reached, representing an increase of $3,777,884.55 over the previous year.

The past year, Commissioner Enright states, has been one of exceptional success, one of the outstanding features being the attendance record. Because of strict compliance with the compulsory school law this has almost ceased to be a problem. There has, however, developed an extremely acute problem in the inability of municipalities to provide adequate facilities for the large number of pupils crowded into the public schools.

The total enrollment of all departments of the schools for the year was 678,784, an increase of 37,000, and the teaching force numbered 20,874. The children were housed in 2,176 buildings, an increase of 85 over the year before. Teachers received an average salary of $1,427.72 during 1922 as compared with $948.39 in 1918. The total valuation of school property of the state amounts to $133,111,171.67.

Upon recommendation of its advisory committee the state board of education confirmed the appointment of Louis J. Kaser as superintendent of schools of Burlington county. The filling of this recommendation of the committee reported that it has made a thorough investigation of the numerous charges brought against Mr. Kaser by residents of the county and they had been found to be without merit. The opposition to the reappointment of Mr. Kaser became so pronounced that it was considered advisable to conduct an investigation. Hearings were held at the state house by the advisory committee, of which Dr. John C. Van Dyck of New Brunswick is chairman, and they were attended by scores of the superintendent's bitter opponents. They charged that Mr. Kaser neglected his duties, viewed his office merely as a side issue and devoted his time largely to real estate activity and to the study of law in Philadelphia.

In the report of the advisory committee to the state board Dr. Van Dyck said that the inquiry revealed the fact that the opposition had been due to his fulfillment of the state's policy of consolidating schools wherever possible and held that the superintendent should not be penalized for carrying out the desires of the board. The charges, the committee found, were trivial in character, unsubstantiated by evidence, while the defense was not controverted in spite of the fact that those who desired to do so were given opportunity to cross examine him.

The state board confirmed the reappointment by Commissioner Enright of Daniel T. Steelman as superintendent of schools of Gloucester county and referred to the advisory committee the nominations of Jason S. Hoffman of Flemington and H. C. of Salem as superintendents of Hunterdon and Salem counties respectively.

Mrs. Wesley A. O'Leary was confirmed as state supervisor of home economics at an annual salary of $4,000, part of which is paid by the federal government under the provisions of the Smith-Hughes act. Mrs. O'Leary is the wife of Assistant State Commissioner O'Leary, who received $6,500 a year.

Great Wealth Escaping

While the public schools of New Jersey need more money to keep them going than is being spent on them, the need being "imperative," as he says it, State Commissioner of Education John Enright believes that some other way must be found to provide it than by digging deeper into the pocketbooks of those who already pay heavy taxes on real estate. This was the substance of his remarks before the annual conference of the New Jersey Federation of District School Boards.

"I used to think the state should furnish all the money for schools," said the commissioner. "I have changed my mind. My memory goes back to the time when the state did furnish all the money. On a fair basis, considering all things, we should not relieve the local school districts of a proper share of the responsibility for maintaining the schools.

"The tax put on realty has reached its limit. We dare not go farther. We have almost gone too far. Farmers this year are unable to pay their taxes. There is $400,000,000 in bond issues of the state, county and municipalities which are tax free. I am not going to question the constitutionality of this inhibition against imposition of taxes on these bonds. I do say there is great wealth outside the realty rate tables of the state and this should be utilized in some way."

Emphasizing the necessity of putting forth every possible effort to develop in school children high physical standards, former Governor Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania told the members of the federation that 53 per cent of the eligible young men inducted into the army in the world war were to deficient physically that they required the services of an army of physicians. He also declared that 11 per cent, or approximately 400,000 men, of the country's military forces were totally deficient in the English language.

Persons who, through ignorance or indifference, fail to learn the ways and the speech of the country in which they live should be deported, he maintained, and he advocated a similar disposition of "reds" and other radicals, who, he insisted, are just as much of a menace to the country now as they were during the war.

Stokes on Tax Reduction

The proposal of Governor Elect Silzer to make tax reduction one of the chief aims of his administration has called forth action in behalf of the Republicans, who will control the next legislature. Realizing the importance of the subject and political value of "getting in," State Chairman E. C. Stokes has prepared a bill, which has been forwarded to Speaker Elect William W. Evans for introduction, to make it unlawful for any governing body to exceed the interest tax rate up to 1927, when the rate shall conform to that to be fixed by the legislature.

The proposed bill provides:

"It shall be unlawful for the governing body of any county or municipality to exceed the tax rate of 1922 for the year 1923. It shall be the duty of every county or municipality governing bodies to reduce the amount received from taxes on real and personal property (assessed at true value); in 1925, when there shall be a reduction in the tax rate by at least five points on property assessed at true value; in 1925, five points less than in 1924; in 1926, five points less than in 1925; in 1927, five points less than in 1926, and to continue a reduction equivalent to five points until the tax rate in any county or municipality shall have been reduced to —— on the hundred dollar valuation."

Taxing and collecting officials in some sections of the state do not consider the Stokes plan feasible because of the very pressing needs of some of the municipalities, especially the smaller towns and townships, for better school facilities. State Commissioner of Education Enright called attention to the enormous increase in the cost of conducting the public schools and declared that some other method than that now pursued for raising the necessary funds would have to be adopted sooner or later. The program of education cannot be curtailed in the opinion of men and women of keen judgment, and the demands for larger appropriations are incessant. Many sections of the state have been unable to provide adequate school facilities to keep pace with the growth of population, and with the completion of the Hudson river tunnel and the Delaware river bridge, it is conceded, this demand will be much more insistent.

Projected schools have been reject ed by the voters in a number of instances because of the already high tax rates in the communities. Educational officials have been completely bewildered by the problem, but have accepted the inevitable conclusion that the people cannot and will not bear any heavier tax bills.

It is generally conceded, therefore, that the large and outstanding feature of the coming session of the legislature must be that of tax reduction by one means or another, and attention will be focussed upon the inaugural messages of Governor Elect Silzer, who projected the issue into his campaign and forced the Republicans to recognize it. It is not likely that the governor elect will give air to his plan prior to his inauguration. He will no doubt give it very exhausting investigation and deep thought before he is ready to make it known to the law making body, but it is expected to place the matter in such light as to compel action.

Edge for Hobart Act Repeal

United States Senator Edge hopes that the 1923 legislature will repeal the Hobart state prohibition enforcement act. Also, Mr. Edge intends to aid any effort to have Congress modify the Volstead act, but he does not expect favorable action until the recently elected members of the national legislature take office in March.

The views of the senator were expressed in a letter sent to J. F. Smith, secretary of the Chelsea League, the Fourth ward Republican organization of Atlantic City. The position of Mr. Edge on the Volstead act has been well known, but his declaration concerning the Hobart act is his first public utterance in opposition to this.

"Permit me to assure you that I am in hearty accord with the program of Senator Richards in connection with the prohibition laws," said Mr. Edge. "I propose to do everything possible in Washington to help alleviate this situation, although I am afraid it will have of necessity to come through the local Congress as the present Congress has gone on record as decisively dry."

State Canal Control

Stock control of the Morris canal will be obtained by the state January 20, according to the terms of the agreement signed by the Morris Canal Commission and the Lehigh Valley railroad. Most of the stocks and all of the bonds of the Morris Canal and Banking Company, owner of the canal, are held by the Lehigh Valley, which will transfer its controlling interest to the state.

A large number of the agreements concern the rights granted by the canal company for the laying of electric wires for power, telephone, lighting and other uses, pipe lines and numerous other connections.

Wisdom.

Every triumph is the product of obstacles surmounted, of failures, each of which taught us something. Every force that pushes us back may be made to cause a rebound in the right direction; a defeat should be but the bending of a springboard, the recoil of which will throw us higher as we jump.—Bolton Hall.

Explaining the "Matchmaker."

It is the natural instinct that makes every woman a matchmaker. She works blindly toward the baby. If she cannot have one directly, she will have it vicariously. The sourest of old maids is thus doomed to have a hand in the production of the race. —William J. Locke.

There Is No Substitute for Quality

When you buy a house you make sure that the foundation, the walls and the roof are constructed for permanence. Buy a motor car in the same way.

The sturdy body of the Studebaker Light-Six Sedan is an admirable example of substantial body-building. It is constructed of the finest materials and with a high degree of craftsmanship to give years of satisfactory service to make shift constructions merely to meet a price.

Eight stout ash pillars, from floor to roof, insure permanent strength and rigidity. The four side-opening doors are a real convenience in getting in and out. Broad windows provide clear vision in every direction.

Seats are of generous proportions with deep springs to give lasting comfort. The upholstery is of mohair velvet plush, as durable as it is attractive. The heater will give warmth and comfort on cold days.

The Light-Six Sedan proved its reliability on the highways of the world. The ample power, quietness and remarkable flexibility of its motor are a source of continuous satisfaction. It is easy to handle in traffic. Constant because it throttles down to a walking pace in high gear. Vibration, which is so annoying in closed cars, is virtually eliminated.

The low price is due to complete manufacture by Studebaker in one of the most modern automobile plants in the world. Middlemen's profits are eliminated and the savings are passed on to the buyer.

MR. BOYER'S LIVELY REPORT

Relates His Experiences and Impressions at Meeting of State Federation

At the meeting of the Riverton Board of Education Monday night of this week, Murray C. Boyer rendered a spicy report of his attendance at the annual meeting of the State Federation of District School Boards of New Jersey, held at Trenton, December 2.

Mr. Boyer said in part:

As requested by the Board, I attended this annual meeting. Ex-Governor Brumbaugh, of Pennsylvania, made a very good address and there is no doubt but that, from an educational standpoint, he has a great deal of knowledge and a great deal of good sound sense.

Following this address the business meeting of the Association was held, and this was of the same old order. I understand that the Secretary had been asked in a number of pertinent questions regarding the organization, so he read a history of the organization and the alleged work of the Federation, some of which was probably true.

Following this, election of officers was in order and, as was expected, the old crowd was returned to power.

Mrs. Seymour Cromwell, a member of the State Board of Education, and also president of the local Board of Education at Mendham, N. J., then addressed the Federation and took occasion to criticize very forcibly the character of the questionnaires sent out by the Federation and the manner in which the Legislative Committee functioned. She charged that the questionnaires were not truthful in the first place, and that they were deliberately colored in the second place. As she was able to quote book, chapter and verse, in making this charge, it was not successfully controverted, although both the secretary, Mr. Morse, and Mr. Dater, of the Legislative Committee, endeavored in language not particularly polite, to tell Mrs. Cromwell that she was not speaking the truth. As a part of the criticism related to matters to which Mrs. Cromwell had been a party, her statements were not successfully refuted.

Mrs. Cromwell also complained about the manner in which the officers were elected by the small body of delegates, representing but a small number of the District Boards, and suggested certain changes in the Constitution. She expressed the thought that notice might be sent out at the proper time for the nomination of officers by postal ballot. She also criticized the manner in which the Executive Committee functioned under the present Constitution.

It is needless to say that her remarks were received without favor. I endeavored, however, to do as much as I could along the lines of her discussion.

Immediately following her remarks, one of the delegates—a lady from the upper part of the State, made a motion that whereas the present Constitution and By-Laws might have been highly successful in 1913, it is not as satisfactory as it might be, and proposed a committee of seven to revise the Constitution and By-Laws, which motion I immediately seconded. This was objected to by a delegate who urged that the carriage of such a motion would be a mandate upon the Committee to change the Constitution, and he proposed an amendment that the committee of seven be appointed to consider amending the Constitution. I strongly urged and endeavored to have the President appoint this committee at this meeting, but he finally declared my suggestion out of order. I have no doubt but that a hand-picked committee will be appointed and will report at the May meeting that no changes in the Constitution are felt desirable.

It seems to be a positive fact that the members attending these meetings are satisfied with their junketing type and I am more than skeptical that any good will ever come out of the State Federation of District Boards. Certainly not, with its present organization.

I can say, however, that there were a number of delegates present who believed as I did, and I was strongly urged by the delegate from Bernardsville to stick, with a view of changing this organization. I know that Mrs. Cromwell is very serious in her determination, and it may be possible to get something through the minds of the present officers, but it will be a long, hard struggle and with grave possibility that in the final analysis, members of the District Boards of Education now working toward this end will have passed off their local Boards, leaving the old guard still entrenched and conditions as they are.

Respectfully submitted.
MURRAY C. BOYER.

The district clerk reported one application for admission to high school which was granted.

Miss Chew, Miss Lucas and Mr. Sylvester were appointed to attend the convention of the New Jersey Physical Training Association, to be held at Atlantic City Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Miss Chew will also attend the convention of County Superintendents and City Supervisors of Cape May, Salem and Burlington counties, at Atlantic City, ing of the County Boards of Education at Burlington on December 13.

The report of Miss Chew showed that the girls led in both attendance and promptness during the month. The highest percentage of attendance was made by the sixth grade, 98%. It was also reported that the necessary legal steps had been taken in the matter of absence from school of one of the pupils in the fifth grade, and that the attendance is now satisfactory.

On November 23 the school entertained the Burlington County Supervisors' Association, and gave an exhibition of work and methods for the visitors.

Miss Chew reported that the Riverton Free Library is again cooperating with the school this year, having sent a number of reference books to be used by the teachers and pupils.

A special Thanksgiving program was given on the afternoon preceding the holiday, and a special thank offering taken for the Smyrna Relief, amounting to $60.

ABSENCE

By WILL M. MAUPIN

HOW big a little house can be
When all hearts are away
And left no one at home but me!
How dreary, grim and gray
The shadows are at eventide.

When lone and tired I come
And have no one to sit beside Me when at last I'm home.

The hall seems leagues of distance wide,
Each room a vast estate;
Dark forms in dusky corners hide
And terrors lie in wait.
Deep silence reigns, and over all
The lonesome shadows creep;
I list to hear a soft footfall
From out the silence deep.

No welcome laugh, no smiling face,
No eager, running feet
To meet me at the open place;
No kiss from lips so sweet.
A barren isle in widespread sea
A rock in desert wide;
No hands that beckon unto me
Near home at eventide.

And yet, ere morning sun awakes
I feel a presence sweet;
I warm faces dream fancy breaks
And bring a joy complete.
I feel the touch of little hands,
See smiles of childish glee;
And as from far-off Fairyland
My children come to me.

O'er low-flung hills and valleys wide,
Far from the city's strife,
Midst country scenes where joys abide
Are children dear and wife.
So what care I if dark and drear
The cottage seems to be,
If brown and strong my kiddies dear
Soon hasten home to me!

Christmas Music
By Mary Graham Bonner
(©, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

BRENT had grown away from his family. Brent was a successful man. He played a violin in a big city orchestra. He belonged to the union and the union backed him up and he never played a minute more than he had to play. It had become such a business with him that he never played now when he came home.

He came home once a year. Something handed down to Brent from his parents made him do this, although when he was home he often was cross. On the last homecoming he remembered his mother had talked to him about the coziness of a home and had spoken of the attractive house she had seen a picture of in the paper. She wished Brent would marry and have a nice home like that instead of an apartment. He had answered that he was as far from being a home. He had explained to his mother that such a "home" was beyond the income of ordinary city people and that if she wanted him to be as cozy as that she'd have to get him the business of millions.

For it took a millionaire to own a real "home" in a city.

How foolish his mother had been not to have realized all that. She knew so little of city life, of business, of anything, outside her own small groove.

But Brent was coming home for Christmas and that was happiness for the parents. Only they did wish Brent was more like the boy he had promised to be. There was something so hard about him. He had told them the time before of a friend of his who was getting a divorce from his wife.

"But my friend is so honorable," Brent had said. "He wants the divorce as he's bored with his wife. Though still she loves him, but he is having her secure the divorce and is paying all the expenses, for it is only fair to a divorce to have the divorce secured by her. He really never wanted to marry her. He became tired of her soon after they were engaged. But it was his high sense of honor which kept him from telling her—to have a man break the engagement would have been dishonorable."

And Brent scorned her opinions. He regarded them as old-fashioned.

There was a man in a town some little distance away who wanted to see Brent's father on business and it was arranged that a meeting should take place at the man's home. Brent's mother and father was going to sell much of the land, which had become a burden since Brent had gone away.

And he arranged the meeting so that he would be able to come home for Christmas.

Brent greeted his father with reserved affection. "So you've brought the fiddle," Brent's father exclaimed. Brent never brought his violin with him any more because he would be asked to play by old friends who didn't realize that music was his business.

"Yes," Brent said, "I have to play right after Christmas and the town I'm to play in is nearer here, so I'm going there directly."

There was nothing more said. But at the next station a group of youths got on and at once began to play the mandolins and guitars which they had with them.

Brent's father nudged him.

"Don't insult me," Brent whispered angrily.

"No son, I only wondered—I didn't mean you—I wonder if I could play your fiddle with the boys. You know it's a good many years since you brought yours with you and I haven't touched one—I'll be careful of it. I used to play as a boy, you know. They said you got your music from me."

And Brent's father did play and became a boy again. All the Christmas tunes they played—and the people in the train sang and there was merry making that recalled to the aged man the happy days of long ago, despite the fact that his fingers were stiff.

Brent watched at first, rather disgusted at such a display of friendliness, for many of the people were strangers, and then he saw his father's eyes and the expression there—the expression which the music gave him and which he had denied him. What a cold, conceited, heartless person he had been, severe with his parents, keeping his music solely for pay, denying it to one frail. Brent's father told his mother as they got home.

"And we're going to have it here too," Brent added. "I've made music my business, but Dad has put music into his life. And somehow I've changed and his voice had a new affection in it, that Christmas music on that dingy, local train, and the singing of those cheery people just got at my heart—somehow," he repeated.

Rickety Coaches are Censured at Chamber of Commerce; Voted for Extra Services

The Rev. Charles B. DuBell, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Camden, was the speaker at the meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday evening.

The Rev. Mr. DuBell traced the history of mankind from its beginning and pointed out various stages of progress which the human race had made throughout the ages.

He showed that each century had brought some improvement and that man now stood at the highest point yet reached, the modern day sense of morality, duty and aspiration to higher things being more marked than ever before.

To combat the assertions of those who say the world is growing worse, he gave concrete illustrations of improved moral standards as contrasted with those of even a few generations ago.

In the regular business session of the Chamber, C. W. Davison called attention to the sale by the Pennsylvania Railroad of old, rickety wooden cars on some of the commuters' trains and declared that no other division was treated so badly in this respect and believed that the condition existed because no organized complaint had been made. He suggested that the Chamber of Commerce go on record in the matter and pass on to join Palmyra in a protest to the railroad.

The matter was referred to the Utility Commission with power to act.

Immediately following this, C. W. Horer called attention to the new train which the railroad was to put on the next morning and also to the fact that the Public Service Company is dividing 15-minute service from Elm avenue during the rush hours of 5 to 6 morning and evening. He moved that a vote of thanks be extended both to the railroad and the company for this extra service. This motion passed unanimously.

A nominating committee composed of A. S. King, James T. Wyatt and Charles K. Irvine was elected unanimously to nominate officers to be elected at the annual meeting of the Chamber in January.

Mr. Wimer reported that a special "feed" be provided on this occasion, and a committee was named for this purpose as follows: E. F. Patterson, Frank Mathews, Sr., and W. E. Jenkins.

The coal situation was brought up again. Although no new supplies have received from representations made to the State Commission, it was reported that conditions in Palmyra and Riverton were improved, that all the dealers were receiving their quota of coal, and it was thought that if householders would be content with action at a time, all could be supplied, and no one would suffer.

It was pointed out that conditions now are better here than in Camden and some other cities.

Captain Rond, of Berkeley avenue, was elected a new member of the Chamber.

At the meeting of the Borough Council Thursday night of this week Fred P. Hemphill, treasurer, reported a deficit of nearly $2500.00, the first time such a thing has happened for many, many years. Mr. Hemphill said that this was due to the fact that a great many people had failed to pay the taxes due December 1 now. SCHOOL BOYS REPAIR TOYS

Children Made Over Toys, Dad Helped, and Mother Dressed the Dolls

The following interesting article was taken from the December issue of the Child Welfare Magazine:

Teachers and pupils of the William Carr School (Moline, Illinois) started something two years ago which has had amazing results, when they asked for broken and discarded toys and made them over. The display at the close of the work season was one which roused the admiration and wonder of all who saw, for there were brightly painted wagons which ran delightfully, made from little junk heaps, and also from boxes made by some of the older boys, as well as dollies made as good as new after being cast aside by the William Carr Hospital.

These toys were distributed at Christmas time where they would do the most good—and they accomplished two purposes—made the recipients happy and made the ones who had worked for their restoration more efficient and ready to become good citizens.

Last year the work was doubled and from Thanksgiving until nearly Christmas mothers and fathers of the district also gave time on Monday and Tuesday evenings to this work. Every seventy-thirty grownups present and the discarded things, dolls that were narrowly escaped the ash heap, mechanical toys, were passed on to the children for their work. Some made "just as good as new and a little better" is the comment of the mother dressed the "dearest" little dollies, while the fathers made the toys that the children were just as dear to the tiny girls who received them.

Through this was a wonderful community spirit has grown up and now the William Carr district is a district always to be relied on to work together for all good things. So much have the people become that they want to start the work very early this year so that much more will be done.

In addition to the joy given the little folks who received the toys, the work of repairing and reconstructing them called for initiative and ingenuity on the part of the young workmen which would never have been developed by the routine "manual training."

Our own K.K.K. is coming soon.

LOCAL INTEREST IN BRUNEN CASE

Murdered Man's Daughter, One of State's Chief Witnesses, Now Living in Riverton

The Brunen murder trial is being held at Mount Holly this week and is of considerable local interest, owing to the fact that the murder occurred at Riverside, and also because the daughter of the murdered man, Miss Hazel Brunen, as well as other members of the Brunen show troupe, has been living on Linden avenue, Riverton, for some time.

"Honest" John Brunen, chief owner of the Col. Ferrari and Mighty Doris shows, a combination of travelling carnival and circus, was shot and killed in the kitchen of his home along the trolley line in Riverside on March 11th last.

After several weeks of investigation County Detective Ellis Parker obtained a confession from Charles M. Powell, a former member of the show, that he had killed Brunen, following him from the window with a shot gun. Powell said Harry Bixby, Mrs. Brunen's brother, had promised him $1,000 for the deed, and in a later confession implicated Bixby in the plot.

Much of Brunen's domestic difficulties were said to have arisen at the Riverton home of Mrs. Brunen's mother, Mrs. Mary Dilworth, several days before a quarrel a few weeks before his death, that he would sell out the show by trying to "ruin" his daughter and with being responsible for the breaking up of the happy home of the circus troupe.

Powell said he was driven from the scene of the murder by Bixby, who drove through Palmyra and throwing parts of the gun into the Pennsauken Creek.

It also developed that Hazel Brunen had gone with Bixby to Mrs. Brunen's step-mother, through the Palmyra post office under the name of "Mrs. Bixby." Bixby had been enlisted at the court house this week. Powell and Miss Hazel Brunen are the chief witnesses for the State. Mrs. Mohr is said to have been with Miss Hazel during the latter's testimony.

Our Taxes

he tax problem in New Jersey is especially different from the tax oblem in any other State. Housebusiness and manufacturing propy, personal and capital assets, have been more or less embarassed by tax burdens. The last five s increase in tax burdens, caused by Federal and local jurisdiction, is directly traceable to the war can only be brought back to normcby an honest effort on the part everyone. Taxes are only the reion of the costs of Governmental ice. There are two factors that reduce taxes: i. e., less service or neral return to normal conditions. ew Jersey has the most simple effective and least costly taxing em of any State in the Union. local officials who are generally ped with imposing taxes are helpin reducing same unless the people are willing to have less governtal service. Their field of discreis exceedingly limited. Such ls have discretionary jurisdiction less than ten per cent of the tax bill, and salary schedules are the most part fixed by civil service legislative enactment or the w under the referendum. hile our taxing machinery is of best, much of the just criticism esults is traceable to faulty asments or inequitable valuations as een one taxing district and anr, or as between one county and her. This fault, no doubt, sometraceable to the system of elecassessors, which prevails in the a majority of our taxing dis together with the apparent ose of certain sections of our to keep their assessments as as possible in order to escape county and State tax burdens. e unsatisfactory feature of New y's taxing system, which is also t cause of complaint the country is the inability to get anything a proper assessment of personal erty. Students of taxation are d that the personal property tax ncorporated in New Jersey's tax is impractical and is also incapof just and equitable administra-

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

By "BUXOM"

WHEN Milton, in "Paradise Lost," speaks of "winging lently the buxom air," it is at ce apparent that the word BUXOM" must have had some aning at that time different om the currently accepted one rosy and plump. We might fer to a strong healthy woman buxom, but we would never ply the adjective to the air.

In Milton's time, however, the ord had just changed its spelling from "boughsome," a form hich gives a clue to its primary aning of yielding or bending ke the "boughs of a tree." uxom," to Milton, was practically the equivalent of our esent-day "pliant." The first ange, merely one of form, thus makes the "gh" began to ose its guttural sound and ough" was elided into the sinle letter "u." Then, after the pass of a number of years, a radual alteration of the word began to take place, probably e, as Doctor Johnson suggests, s too liberal construction of bride's promise in the old nglish marriage ceremony to be obedient and buxom (or yielding) in bed and in board." In on, therefore, it came to be applied to full-blooded women who were erroneously thought rely to be careless of virtue. ence it now means plump, sy, alluring, and is applied only women who combine these alities of figure, face and exression.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

BERTILA

BERTHA, signifying bright, has an extraordinary ecclesiastical flavor. In old German chronicles the feast of Theophania is translated by a word meaning brightness; right, and the root of that word is "peraht." How Perahta, or Berchta, became an individual character is too involved for space here, but it is sufficient to say that Perahta, or Bertha, was a sacred being, called, in an old Alsatian poem, the mild Berchte, in whose honor all young farmers danse, ring cattle bells and blow whistles throughout the night of the feast.

She is pictured as an old, whitehaired woman, with a long nose, who creeps into nurseries and comforts little children neglected by their nurses. In other stories, she is used as a figure of terror to frighten children and is the avenger of idle spinners. From Bertha is undoubtedly the impersonation of the Epiphany, though there is an effort to connect her with the old mythical Hulde, and other etymologists believe her to be another name for the Goddess Freya, wife of Odin.

One of the most famous Berthas was the wife of Pepin and mother of Charlemagne, known as "Bertha aux grands pieds." Another Bertha of historical fame was her daughter, sister of Charlemagne and wife of Orlando, who, being in great want, succeeded herself spinning until her son won recognition from his powerful uncle.

Because of Queen Bertha of Switzerland, the name has always been very popular there. It has also had great vogue in England since the Norman conquest, and even before that time it was in use, being named the daughter of Chilperic, king of Paris, and wife of Ethelbert of Kent, who smoothed the way for St. Augustine's mission. It is used quite commonly in France and Germany, and in Dante's time was so frequent in Italy that he places Monna Berta with Ser Martino as the chief of the gossips. Southey gave it additional vogue in England by so-calling one of his heroines, and it even penetrated Greece by the marriage of a German princess of that name to a Greek emperor.

Bertha's talismanic stone is the beryl, which is said to keep its wearer amiable and with incomparable charm. Wearing a beryl will reawaken love in married people. Sunday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number.

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

THE HARSH VOICE

HARSH voices are usually strained voices, for very few persons know how to raise their voices above a certain pitch without straining them. So, if you would keep from having that harsh voice that is now no less than it was in our grandmothers' days frequently looked upon as a sign of bad breeding and lack of culture, see that you do not raise your voice above a certain conversational pitch, that is unless you know how to manage it.

It is almost invariably true that the children who are brought up in the congested city tenement sections where their only playground is the street and where they must shout and call above the deafening clatter of the traffic, grow up to have voices cracked or harsh. This can be helped, doubtless, if these children are reminded to modulate their voices.

But sometimes it is in the country where an overloud voice is cultivated. The housewife, used to having a large country house to herself, with no neighbors to think of, acquires the habit of calling, yelling, in fact, at her children in a way that the city woman would not think of doing. She calls upstairs and down, and she calls outdoors and in. And too often it happens that when she is in more confidential moods she goes on with her high-pitched voice just the same. And her children are quite apt to pitch themselves in tune with hers.

Now remember that while it is necessary always to speak loud enough to be heard easily, you should never speak any louder than is necessary to make your voice reach all your audience. If you are speaking for people in the room don't speak loud enough to be heard in the next room. Modulate your voice and you will be sure to keep it from becoming harsh.

Mrs. William C. Nield

Annie M. Nield, nee Rourke, wife of William C. Nield, a former resident of Riverton for many years, died at her home on Tuesday, December 4th, after a short illness. Mrs. Nield will be remembered here by her many friends when she and her sister Emma carried on the dressmaking business. She was a member of the Sacred Heart Church, and it was at her home that the visiting priests took their meals before the rectory was built. Mrs. Nield is survived by her husband and one daughter, Miss Marie Nield. She was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Albert Pauncz, of Riverton, and an aunt of Harry Bradshaw, of Palmyra.

The funeral took place on Saturday last with High Requiem Mass at St. Monica's Church, 17th and Ritner streets, Philadelphia, with interment in Holy Cross cemetery.

Something to Think About
By F. A. WALKER

YOUR PERSONALITY

IN A general sense, that subtle power or superiorities which you possess, and which exerts so potential an influence upon others for good or bad, is your personality.

And this personality, from whatever vantage you may look at it, is the determining factor of your success or failure.

You may be well educated, your outward appearance may be satisfactory, but if you lack a pleasing personality you will find in your dismay that you are handicaped in every sphere of endeavor into which you may venture, regardless of your good looks and qualifications.

The best old apple woman on the corner, with her stooping shoulders wrapped in a faded shawl, notwithstanding her lowly position in life, is making a success.

She is sending her children to school and every week she is putting a few dollars in the savings bank. Everybody within convenient reach of her person and very many units once or twice a day to buy a dimpled pippin.

He does this because in addition to the luscious fruit he invariably finds piled up in shining rows, he is conscious of a sort of spiritual sunshine which cheers him up and sends him on his way in a lighter mood, better equipped to solve his own perplexities.

Being in a hurry, he does not stop to seek the cause of this pleasurable sensation, the effect of which tingles his nerves and makes of him temporarily a better man.

The secret of this experience is that the wrinkled old woman has an agreeable personality, a treasure which money cannot buy, gleaming in the darkest days like a precious gem in the sunshine, and sending its cheering rays down to the somber recesses of the heart.

Wealth, talent, power and pomp stop, stoop and doff their hats to the man or woman of an amiable individuality, not knowing perhaps why they do so, but keenly sensible all the while of receiving something in return for which their souls are starving.

And so it is with the world at large, calling today for young men and women to fill the high places, which are always open for those fortunate persons whom the gods have blessed with a pleasing personality, which for a better term may be called the essential quality of leadership in all the walks of human enterprise.

Mother's Cook Book

Life is significant and happy much in proportion as it is interesting and becoming worthy in proportion as it is interesting.—Margaret Baldwin.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

A MOST wholesome and economical dish is prepared from the following: Wash one-half pound of dried peas and boil in three pints of water. Add a ham shank weighing about two pounds, or less; boil three minutes, then simmer one and one-half hours. Remove the shank before the meat falls from the bone and reserve for Westphalia roll. Put through a fine sieve and serve the puree with bread cut into cubes and fried in the fat cut from the ham shank.

Westphalia Roll.

Remove the rind from the ham shank and chop it very fine. Chop the meat, season with any desired seasoning. Add one and one-third cupfuls of boiling water to one pound of cornmeal, one-half teaspoonful of salt; mix and spread on a cloth 18 inches square, having a margin at ends and sides of two inches. Place the ground ham in the center and fold over the cloth so that the meat is completely covered. Fold and place, the folded end down, in a colander. Steam for two hours and serve hot. Corn bushes may be substituted for the cloth when they are available. Season highly with cayenne and the dish will be a ham tamale.

Creole Sauce.

Mince fine three onions, one green pepper, one red pepper, one-half cupful of sliced mushrooms, two tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup and one tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Cook gently for ten minutes, rub through a sieve, season and serve.

Tomato Soup.

Cook one tablespoonful of rice in three cupfuls of boiling water, until tender; to this add two cupfuls of strained tomatoes, one teaspoonful of onion juice, salt, pepper to taste, and cook fifteen minutes longer. Serve with croutons of bread.

Potatoes au Gratin.

Chop potatoes cooked in their jackets and peeled. Put a layer into a buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of well-seasoned white sauce; add a tablespoonful of grated cheese and repeat with another layer of each. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are well browned. Serve hot.

The Tramp (at the back door)—Lady, will you please give me a glass of water, I'm so terribly hungry that I don't really know where to spend the night.—Paris Le Rire.

To Standardize Fire Hose Couplings

The work of standardization of fire hose couplings in Mercer and Burlington counties will be started on Tuesday, December 19, 1922, at 10.30 a. m., at the Water Department store house, corner Sweets avenue and Reservoir street, Trenton, under the auspices of the New Jersey State Fire Chiefs' Association, which is making a campaign of standardization.

Many of the hose couplings and hydrant butts in cities and towns in Mercer and Burlington counties are not standard. It is urged that municipal officials send to this meeting the chief of the fire department and a mechanic or plumber so that they may learn how to use these tools properly and later make the conversion to standard couplings for their own town. Officials of private water companies and municipal water departments are urged to send representatives also.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because — By Ethel R. Peyser

You Are Tactless? This always hurts, for the person that is tactless is generally very kind and sensitive and tactlessness is often due to a lack of knowing and also a swiftness of action that gives you no time to think. Don't suppose that you can never learn to be tactful. Although it is often a thing you are born with, you can learn. For example, when you are laughed at you can realize that the laughter is right, and that will be the first step to a cure-all.

Organization to Fight for Better Distribution of State School Funds

At a meeting of the Burlington County School Boards Association held in the auditorium of the Wilbur Watts High School, Burlington, on Wednesday, the distribution of State School funds was earnestly discussed. It is believed that there is less opposition to a program of redistribution at the present time than two years ago. The Legislative Committee appointed in April 1921 to consider the question of distributing State School Funds has never made a report, although it held a number of public meetings to permit discussion of this subject. It was seriously urged that the State Federation of District School Boards is opposed to any program of redistribution of State School Funds and has, in fact, dominated the Legislative Commission. The attitude of the State Federation was deplored, and after considerable discussion the following resolutions were adopted.

"Resolved, that this meeting go on record as favoring an organization of members of District School Boards and others locally interested in the cause of education in the State of New Jersey, and that definite steps be taken looking to the speedy creation of such organization throughout the State with a view of pushing legislation respecting the redistribution of State School funds."

"Resolved, that notice of this action be given the Associated Press in order that it may be published in all the papers of the State, and that a similar notice be given to all local papers published in the State of New Jersey."

Dr. Dager's Lecture

The lecture Monday evening, under the auspices of the men of the Lutheran Church, at which time Dr. Dager spoke on "Shams of Society," was well attended by a very appreciative audience. Dr. Dager was at his best, and was humorous from the very beginning of his talk to the end. Those who missed this opportunity to hear him certainly missed a treat.

Habit of Catfish.

Some South American catfish have a remarkable way of getting upstream. Being encased in a stiff armor, they cannot jump. So they deliberately leave the water, using their side fins which have sharp spines, like feet; and crawl around the falls, entering the water on the other side.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm.

ILLNESS SHOWN IN THE HAND

AS HUMANKIND is subject to the affliction of very many varieties of disease, so are the signs or marks many and varied.

A line rising from the line of life and ending in an island on the mount of Saturn, beneath the middle finger, is a sign of pleurisy. Rheumatism, or a tendency toward that widespread disease, is shown by a skin that has a satiny feel. A fork at the termination of the line of life is also a sign with fine lines crossing downward at the commencement of the line of the heart.

Scarlet fever is shown by a small square on the line of life, the square bearing on its inside an upright cross. Very narrow and curved nails show danger of spinal disease. Peril of sunstroke is shown by an island on the line of the head under the mount of the sun, that is, at the base of the ring finger. If the hand shows a long and wavy line of the heart, with a line of health that is also wavy, and has the second phalanx of the fingers relatively longer than the other, the subject will suffer from poor teeth.

County Wide Drive for Burlington County Hospital Successful

The drive for funds for the Burlington County Hospital which occurred during the week of October 1st to October 7th, was very successful.

The object of the County-Wide Drive and of a more thorough canvass in this way was not only to raise more money, which was very much needed, but also to increase the number of persons who would be interested in the work of the hospital. These objects of the drive seem to have been accomplished.

The total amount collected through out the county was $30,997.91. The amount and number of contributors from the different sections of the county as compiled to date are as follows:

Beverly	$2,659.43
Bordentown	136.75
Brown's Mills, New Lisbon, Vincentown	582.10
Burlington	1,927.13
Chairswood	106.85
Chesterfield	65.00
Columbus	1,903.40
Cross-wicks	235.00
Delanco	124.55
Fieldsboro	53.77
Florence	1,437.15
Johnstown	151.25
Lamberton	675.80
Marlton	200.50
Medford	1,054.89
Moorestown	2,574.10
Mt. Holly	6,864.20
Mt. Laurel	100.35
Palmyra	344.41
Pemberton	622.10
Rancocas	146.75
Riverside	373.85
Riverton & Cinna. Town	1,230.40
Roebling	592.55
Vincentown	567.00
Wrightstown	284.75

The money was collected and paid to the treasurer of the hospital without any deduction for expenses of any kind. The names of all contributors will be published in the annual report of the hospital. Because of a system of receipts with stubs it is hoped that no name will be omitted, but the team captain in any district will be glad to have his attention called to any name which might be omitted by mistake.

There were also many contributions of supplies for the hospital, including such items as jellies, preserves, potatoes, vegetables, pork, and in one or two instances, even live pigs. These gifts are very useful and as much appreciated as those of money.

The management of the hospital and committee responsible for the drive wish to thank all those who contributed for their very generous response. It is considered that the most gratifying feature of the drive has been the greatly increased number of those who were sufficiently interested in the hospital to make a contribution.

As was understood at the time of this drive there is to be no other to raise money by collection until about the same time next year. And while the total money raised is greater than in any previous year, it is now believed that even with the most careful management this sum will all be needed, together with all other sources of income that the facilities of the hospital may meet the needs for its services during the coming year.

TOWN PESTS

The Henpecked Husband is a pest of the First Water because he can't Do Nothin' nor Say Nuthin' without first asking his Wife. If the Poor Fish'd only Grow a Backbone, instead of Bleating Plaintively about the Wife, his Friends wouldn't feel So Much like Knocking Him for a Row of Ash Cans every Lodge Night.

Somewhat Monotonous.

Some men are too methodical in their habits, and so are some horses. Twelve months ago a horse fell with its owner near Blanchview, Queens land, and the rider fractured his left thigh. The other day the same horse fell again at the same spot and the rider fractured the same thigh.

LESSON FOR DECEMBER 17

JESUS AMONG FRIENDS AND FOES

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:38-42; 11:14-54.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.—John 15:14.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Luke 7:34, 36.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus in the Home of Friends.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Among Friends and Foes.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Friends and Enemies of Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Methods of Dealing With People.

1. Jesus in the Home of Friends (Luke 10:38-42).

There is no place where true character is so clearly revealed as at home.

1. His Reception (v. 38). Martha was the head of the house, therefore she received him. It would be a fine thing if all homes were open to receive Jesus.

2. Mary Sitting at Jesus' Feet (v. 39). She, of fine spiritual discernment, knew that sitting at the Lord's feet and hearing His Word was that which would please him most.

3. Martha Cumbered About Much Serving (v. 40). Both sisters loved the Lord. It would be impossible to say which loved the more; but Martha was bent on providing a fine meal for Him. She was trying to do so many things that she was on the verge of distraction. This had so completely got on her nerves that she found fault with Jesus for permitting Mary to leave the kitchen to listen to His teaching. Not only did she criticize her sister and Jesus, but she assumed the authority to command Him to send Mary back to the kitchen to help.

4. Jesus' Answer (vv. 41, 42. (1) Rebuked Martha (v. 41). He did this tenderly, for He knew that she loved Him sincerely. (2) Defends Mary (v. 42). He declared that but one thing was needful, and that Mary had chosen that good part which could not be taken away from her.

II. Jesus Among Foes (11:14-28; 29-32; 37-54).

1. Charged With Being in League With the Devil (vv. 14-23). Being unwilling to receive Him as the Son of God, and yet unable to account for His mighty works, they declared He was casting out demons through Beelzebub, the chief of demons. Jesus exposed the fallacy of their reasoning by showing that in that case Satan would be arrayed against himself, and therefore would destroy his own kingdom.

2. Refused to Believe His Miracles (vv. 29-32). They asked for a sign, to which He replied that they would have a sign from heaven in His death and resurrection. He reminded them, however, that their request showed unbelief surpassing that of the heathen queen of the South, and the wicked people of Nineveh.

3. Wickedness Denounced (vv. 37-54). He pronounced six woes upon those who were opposing Him and seeking His destruction.

(1) The Pharisees (vv. 37-41). These He denounced for (a) punctiliously observing some minute rites and at the same time breaking the Ten Commandments. They carefully tithed the small herbs of the garden while practicing injustice to their fellowmen and withholding love from God. He pointed out to them the folly of attending to these external acts while the heart was filled with wickedness. (b) Desiring public recognition (v. 43). This is a common sin today. (c) For feigning humility (v. 44). He compares their hypocrisy to graves which are on a level with the ground and may be stepped upon unconsciously by someone, and thus defiled. We can avoid those who make their vanity known by boasting, but some are filled with this same wickedness who do not thus make it known.

(2) The Lawyers (vv. 45-54). Jesus' strictures on the hypocritical Pharisees aroused the lawyers, one of whom indignantly declared: "You are insulting us also." In replying to this Christ pronounced three woes upon them: (a) for placing burdensome requirements upon the people to which they themselves would not submit (v. 46). (b) For the murder of God's prophets (vv. 47-51). He showed that their attitude toward Him was the same that was shown to the prophets by their fathers. (c) For keeping back the knowledge of God by false interpretation of the Scriptures (vv. 52-54). There is no wickedness perhaps so great as that of supposed teachers of God's Word who keep its precious truths from the people by perverting its meaning.

Seek Ye.

But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6:33.

Reaping Iniquity.

Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten the fruit of lies.—Hosea 10:13.

Final Permanence.

Character attains final permanence, and final permanence can come but once.—Joseph Cook.

Wants to Share His Joy.

The man who, after passing you by for ten years, suddenly greets you by our name hasn't been reading an editorial on courtesy. He has just been nominated for something.—New York Tribune.

Squirrels Supply Brushes.

The camel has nothing to do with the camel hair brushes so beloved by artists, for they are made principally from monkey's hair.

How could you give a more useful or entertaining gift—than one of these "wonder boxes"?

Daddy's Occupation.

It was the first day of school and the teacher was taking the names of the children, those of their fathers and the business of each one. Small Lucy gave her name and that of her father, but hesitated and became silent when it came to his business. Urged by the teacher, she blushingly said: "He is just Jane that does the washing for the beauty culture parlors of the newspapers."

Skillful Workers With Gems.

One of the most interesting features of Manila industrial life is the wonderful skill of its women lapidaries and gem setters whose tastes and workmanship have far surpassed the powers of the men.

Reassuring.

Proud Wife (to nervous friend in automobile)—I feel so safe with George driving, now that he has joined the Red Cross. He is learning first aid, and knows where all the hospitals are.—London Opinion.

Explaining Ship's "Log."

In olden times the speed of a ship was measured by pulling a piece of wood through the water. The cable "log" was stuck to the mechanical device now used to measure the speed of a ship.

Up to You.

The world owes you a living, but it demands that you acquire some ability as a collector.—Boston Evening Transcript.

Grows as It Moves.

What the reader and poetic youth dreams today, and conjures up with inarticulate speech, is tomorrow the deep-seated result of public opinion, and the day after is the character of nations.—Emerson.

Scarce but Useful Compound.

The Left-Over Doll

By Christopher G. Hazard

(c, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

WHAT was the left-over doll thinking about as she hung on the topmost twig of the Christmas tree all alone? Perhaps about all the other gifts that had been taken off by loving hands and given to the boys and girls. Maybe she was wondering whether there would be a Christmas tree every winter, bearing such nice fruit in such a strange season, if there had not been such a great gift from God as come on Jesus' birthday. More than all, however, she must have been asking herself why she was left over, why nobody wanted her, why the name that was pinned on her dress had not been called.

She was as good a doll as ever was made. Her eyes would open and shut, she always had a smile upon her face, her cheeks were rosy, she did not have a pug nose, and her dress was beautiful. When they put her on the tree she thought her name would be the very first one. She could hardly wait to hear it, and she wondered if they would never get through singing carols. Now it was all over and she wasn't wanted at all, not by anybody, not even by Sally Wiggins, who had no doll—no, not even one. She wasn't wanted! Oh, it was too bad, and her eyes tried to wink out two tears.

So they put her in the basket with the other unwanted things, and there the minister found her the next Sunday. She was lying there fast asleep, with a little carpet sweeper near her, and a box of candy close by, and a looking glass by her side. At her feet there was a spruce cone that had fallen off of the tree, and the bit of paper that had told who she was meant for, but her eyes were shut—she had retired from the world, no one wanted her.

There she still when the minister came into the room the next Sunday morning. But now her eyes were wide open, only she wasn't looking at the presents in the basket. She was awake, but turned away, and still trying to squeeze out some tears because she was left over. And every time the minister took her up she would shut her eyes and go to sleep again, unless he held her up pretty straight, and then she seemed to be sad, and to be dreaming about being left over, even while she was awake.

She wasn't awake even on children's day until little baby Mower came in to get ready to be baptized, but as soon as he held her up she opened her eyes, and when she saw what a pleasant little boy he was she looked pleasant and hopeful again. Then he put her down, and she went to sleep and slept until Christmas time again!

With a new Christmas there she was upon a tree once more, and they were singing carols again and getting ready to call off the names. This time she was sure that somebody would want her, for she had been patient a whole year, and she hadn't made any fuss even though she had felt so sorry. Besides, this was the very best tree they had ever had, and so many had come to see it. It was full of gifts—not like the little tree that the minister saw in the corner of a house parlor—the mother said, "It's most all tree and paper, but it's a tree"—there were go-carts, and everything, and an Indian tomahawk to go with a boy's warwhoop, and some fringed pants to be put on with them, and a picture of a little girl in red, under a big umbrella, in a snowstorm, and "Ain't this a nice snowy day?" written under the picture, and lots of things, and the left-over doll, looting so friendly and nice—nicer than ever.

Well, they began to call the names, and almost the first thing somebody took down the left-over doll and gave her to Polly Rankin! Polly is just the dearest child I know. It was Polly who had said that she wished she had a doll to pet and bring up right. I am sure that Polly will do it. She will make the left-over doll feel very much wanted. She will teach her to be always cheerful. She will find her very obedient, and even nicer than she looks, and she will be kind to her. I hope that when the left-over doll is grown up she will be just like Polly!

"Santa Claus."

"Santa Claus" is a corruption which originated apparently in Flanders or possibly among the Dutch, of the name St. Nicholas, a saint noted for his love of children and his boundless charity. His "day" was perhaps December 8, originally, but since the displacement of Old Father Christmas, the British representation of the Christmas spirit, he is celebrated almost universally as the Christmas saint.

UNHAPPY

You look unhappy, old man.

I am. I am almost as unhappy as a woman with a secret that nobody wants to know.

Veterans Perform Like Youngsters

Nine Studebaker Big-Six Touring Cars, with a total of one million miles to their credit, recently participated in an economy-reliability contest conducted by the Studebaker dealer at Los Angeles.

All came through with perfect scores except two—one had dirt in the gasoline pipe, the other required a slight adjustment of brakes.

This is the most convincing demonstration of motor car reliability of which we know.

The run was from Los Angeles to Big Bear Valley and return—220 miles, of which 90 were on steep, rough mountain roads that necessitated stamina in every part. Yet the Big-Sixes reached every checking station on time.

One of these old veterans has piled up the amazing total of 351,000 miles of practically uninterrupted service of two trips daily between Los Angeles and Santa Barbara.

Another has 250,000 miles to its credit, and so on.

No such group of cars was ever before assembled for such a strenuous proof of endurance. Their entry in competition, over one of the most difficult of Southern California's mountain roads, was an expression of confidence of the owners in Studebaker everlasting goodness.

The dependability of the Big-Six Touring Car, its low cost of maintenance, its comfort, fine appearance and complete equipment makes it the most desirable seven-passenger car on the market. Its price is way below cars that do not even approach it in value.

The name Studebaker is your assurance of value and satisfaction.

National Christmas Seal Banner Contest

The National Tuberculosis Association has offered three banners for States having the highest per capita sale of Christmas seals in 1922. One banner will be awarded to Class A, with a population of over 3,000,000; another to class B with a population of from 1 to 3,000,000; another to class C, with a population under 1,000,000. On the banner of royal blue silk, in gold, will appear the words "For the Health of the Commonwealth." Awarded by the National Tuberculosis Association to the State Association which secured the highest per capita seal sale of any State of similar population."

This means that New Jersey with a population of over 3,000,000 will compete with California, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas. According to last year's sale California and New Jersey each had a per capita sale of a little over five seals which was the highest in the group. New Jersey on the east, will this year run rival to California on the west for the National banner. California is noted as a health resort while New Jersey is an industrial State. Both California and New Jersey are working along similar lines to blot out the White Plague. Each has its State Association and local branches with its hospital, sanatoria, clinics and nurses, open air schools, preventoria, nutrition classes and educational work.

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs.

ON GLOOMY DAYS

JUST as when days are chill and bleak
The warmth of crackling hearths you seek,
So when the hours of gloom appear
Then is the time to turn to cheer,
And grip its glow fairly out the chill
Of worry, care, and present ill.

MEN YOU MAY MARRY

By E. R. PEYSER

Has a Man Like This Proposed to You?

Symptoms: Good style, good looking, looks unlike anything but a clergyman, yet he is one; he is the irregularist regular fellow you ever knew. Awfully funny, awfully jolly, quite flirtatious, wears good looking civilian togs, doesn't want to put a damper on people when he comes around, says he, "I would never have my wife mix up in parish matters. She must have her own job and not take mine over even as is the case with a broker's wife." Talks of his Paris gambols and your future trips with him.

IN FACT

His pre-wedding notions are ideal.

Prescription to His Bride:

Get an antidote for Parish K Green. You'll need it. It will be your constant duty to help in parish affairs.

Not Quite What He Meant.

Many examples of baby English are published from time to time, but an advertisement that appeared in the columns of an Indian paper must be among the best. Here it is, word for word: "Mahomed Osman, hair-cutter and clean shaver. Gentlemen's hair cut with very sharp razors with great care and skill. No irritating lotions afterwards. A trial solicited."

Pathetic Russian Plaything.

A very primitive doll can be found in Russia. It is the nose doll, and it expresses the poverty and loneliness of Russia's forest regions. It is roughly made of wood, with a face of pathetic sadness, and is dressed in hood and clothes of forest moss. The male doll is distinguished from the female only by the hatchet which he carries.

A man is like a tack; he can go only as far as his head will let him.

Handsome "Katie" MacDonald, the "movie" star, was born in Pittsburgh in 1895. She received her early education there, afterward attending Blairsville college. Her screen career began, without previous stage experience, in support of Douglas Fairbanks in a popular production. She is five feet, eight inches tall, weighs about 134 pounds, has light hair and large blue eyes. She is considered one of the most beautiful women in America, being known as "The American Beauty."

GOOD ROOM TO LEARN

Render therefore to all their dues.—Bible.

IT HAS come to be the general custom in business, when employees are not paid by check, to place the amount of their wage or salary in small envelopes. Even when a man's office force consists only of a stenographer and an office boy, their weekly stipend should be placed in an envelope in this way. The man who pays his employees by dealing out the required amount from his pocket is certainly behind the time and decidedly inconsiderate. It is likewise a custom in business that the amount an employee receives shall be more or less confidential, unless the employee wishes to make it otherwise, and the amount therefore not written on the outside of the envelope.

The woman in the home who employs several servants should be similarly considerate, even if it is convenient for her to pay by check, but where it is not she should show as much consideration as the business man. Any employer who delays payment of wages so that the employee has to ask for them is surely both unbusinesslike and ill bred.

In many small towns, especially, the custom of paying almost all obligations by check prevails. Thus the housewife would carry almost no money on hand, and would even pay the woman by the day for a day's work by check. If the woman had no checking account herself, it would be a simple matter to have the check cashed, either at the bank or by some business man to whom she was known. But in a large city it often causes inconvenience to the one paid to use checks for such small amounts.

Some people seem to think that postage stamps are legal tender, and although, as a matter of convenience, some business concerns receive them in payment for small sums by mail, they should never be used in this way, save where there is the understanding that they are acceptable. If you owe a friend any money, save a few cents, the use of stamps in this way is inconsiderate. Such a debt should be paid either by check or by money order—never should you send a bill in a letter. If you send a check, make sure that you either include the exchange fee in the amount for which the check is made, or that there is no fee between your bank and the one of the person to whom it is sent.

In transacting business with a large concern out of town, you need not include the exchange fee, as it is quite likely that a good many checks between the two places are handled weekly and the amount of the exchange would be inconsiderable.

Christmas Violets

By Mary Graham Bonner

(© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.)

HAROLD had been told by his mother that big cities were full of designing women. Harold did not know whether his mother was right or not. But he did know that in his city boarding house there was one of the dearest little girls who had ever lived.

Harold was not selfish. He was far from being a miser. His idea of a miser was a chap he had known in his home town. He had never spent any money which he could possibly avoid spending. He always ate with his friends and rarely paid for a meal. He was always out of cigarettes and so smoked his friends' cigarettes.

He had made a good living and never failed to talk of his poverty.

He had been accused of worshiping money and he had replied: "Not a bit of it. I have great respect for money. That is the difference."

Harold despised that kind of person. And yet perhaps, wouldn't the "dearest little girl" think he was mean? He had never given anything but a smile to the boarding house for six months now. Did she think he was mean? That was what bothered him. She had told him of a person she had known whom she considered a miser, and she had told him of a joke upon this "miser." For he had bargained with a little shop dealer and had obtained an article marked a dollar for fifty cents, and then had walked down the street a little farther on and had seen the same article in another window for twenty-five cents. And finally he had seen it in a ten-cent store for a dime—well, he had almost considered life useless, while everyone else had rejoiced that it had been a good one on the "miser."

One of the reasons that made him feel that she thought, perhaps, he was mean was because she knew others who were generous. Or, at least, one other.

Every Saturday she had received flowers. She had taken a card out of the box as they had sat at the boarding house table at breakfast. The other boarders teased her about her admirer and she seemed to enjoy it. Only he felt uncomfortable and could say nothing.

And Helen, whom he called to himself the dearest little girl, had been receiving these flowers for quite a few weeks now.

Finally he could stand it no longer. His mother needn't tell him anything more about the city's designing women. He was not going to lose the dearest little girl, if there was any chance, because of his mother's warnings to keep to himself.

And, besides, Christmas was coming, and Christmas was a time of year when everyone felt happy. He was going to make a tremendous fight to be happy!

And he sent her violets, beautiful deep purple violets, with a pink rose in the center.

Never had he seen her so happy as she was over his violets. How differently she acted about his than about the others. And then he asked her if she would take a walk with him. So far, they had had all their talks in the boarding house.

"I wonder," he said, "if you'd think it was awfully sudden if I made a little suggestion?"

She was thinking how nice a ring would look on that left hand of yours—as a Christmas present—and an engagement present, if I may be so bold, and if you're not already promised yourself to the other fellow? Or, maybe you could learn to like me better."

"What other fellow?" Helen asked.

"The one who has been sending you flowers all along."

"Oh," Helen said, "I'll have to tell you the truth. I sent them to myself. You were so shy, you seemed to like me and yet couldn't go about telling me or asking me out, and I thought maybe I'd make you curious or jealous or something."

"And you've cared for me all along as I have for you?" he queried.

She nodded. And then he told her the warnings he had been given by his mother.

"I don't know out what's she's right," Helen said. "I made designs for you, she could truthfully say."

But neither of them thought of the past, only of the glorious future ahead.

And Helen wore more violets on Christmas day and a ring with a stone which sparkled so beautifully. And they had dinner by themselves—a real Christmas dinner, for it was not only Christmas day—it was their wedding day, too!

Bamboo a Good Food
The bureau of plant industry says that natives of the Far East have eaten grass in the form of edible bamboo sprouts for many years. This tender sprout can be prepared for the table in the same manner as asparagus and is deemed by some to be a delicious spring vegetable. Bamboo, according to scientists, is not a tree but a giant grass. It grows like asparagus, the new plants forming from the original roots.

Lecture on Children's Books at Westfield Friends' School

An interesting lecture on the subject of books for children was delivered Thursday afternoon, December 7th, at the Westfield Friends' School by Mr. Earl Barnes. This lecture, which was largely attended by patrons and friends of the school, was held in connection with an exhibit of several hundred children's books which were on display Wednesday and Thursday.

Mrs. Barnes considers no habit, outside of the moral habit, so valuable as that of the reading habit. The mechanics of the art must be learned in school, but practice and love for reading good books depends on the home. She urged that children be encouraged to read poetry; and warned against the danger of reading too much on Sunday, rather than have the child read for himself.

The proper books for children of various ages constitutes a perplexing problem in many households where children, beginning at an early age, devour all sorts of books. The selection of the best editions must also be considered. Wrong ideals are not nearly so apt to be formed from books, even of a questionable nature, as those impressions given by moving pictures.

Mrs. Barnes divided children's books into four groups; those for children under six years of age, those for children from six to nine, from nine to twelve, and from close of childhood to beginning of youth.

Among those attending the lecture were the teachers of the Cinnaminson public school and of the Riverton public school. The books on display were obtained from the American Baptist Publication Society and Strawbridge & Clothier, of Philadelphia. More than a hundred books were brought by the children of the school from their own book shelves to add to the exhibit.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Westfield Friends' school children will be held Friday morning, December 22, at 8:45. Everyone interested in the school is invited.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

REAL COURAGE

"To be feared of a thing and yet do it, is what makes the prettiest kind of a man."—Robert Louis Stevenson.

IF YOU have read "Mudsaped" you remember the quotation. It was spoken by Alan Breck, after the boy, David, had stood for a minute terrified, on the brink of a roaring torrent, and then, still sick with the fear of it, leaped across.

To Alan Breck, the leap meant little. It required no courage for him to make it, for he knew very little fear. But for the boy, who did the thing he feared as he feared death, it was a real act of heroism.

The only real courage consists in doing the thing we are afraid to do. The hulking prize-fighter of the John Sullivan type, who has as much imagination as a grizzly bear, is not brave. He is sure he is going to win. It takes no courage to go into a winning fight.

The bully is never brave. In fact he is always a coward. Feeling sure that his superior size will carry him through, he picks quarrels as a pleasant method of passing his time.

Put this same bully into the ring with a large hungry tiger, face him with a man who looks as if he enjoys shooting bullies as much as the bully enjoys thrashing his physical inferiors, and all the courage oozes out of the bully.

You will never know whether you are brave or not till you find yourself in a position where you are afraid to do something that ought to be done.

If you do it, you have courage. If you quit you have not.

Never mistake a physical willingness to take a chance, to attempt some dangerous thing, for the kind of courage that counts.

"It is not a brave but very foolish man who walks a tight rope over Niagara falls. It is a brave man, who not wanting to die, and knowing that an operation may send him out of the world, cheerfully goes to the table, to take the one chance that may mean his continued support of his wife or his dependents.

Often the timid school boy, who fears to quarrel, and tries his best to keep his peace with his fellows, gets the name of coward. But when this same boy has to fight for what he thinks is his honor, or to save a little boy from a bully, he becomes a very dangerous fighter.

Real courage is not daunted by pain. The boy or the man who fights when he is afraid to, stops being afraid of anything, pain or a black eye, or punishment. He fights because he has courage, and he usually wins.

There is more real courage in this world than you fancy. It is behind all great achievement. If you have it, you are fortunate. But don't be sure, either that you have or that you haven't it till you have done or refused to do something you were afraid to do.

Stray Bit of Wisdom.
A man's manners are a mirror in which he shows his likeness to the intelligent observer.—Goethe.

The Lighted Candle

By Christopher G. Hazard

(© 1921, Western Newspaper Union.)

"I'M SORRY for anyone who has to be out tonight," said Mrs. Gentle as she drew down the window shades and stirred the hearth fire, shutting out the light in and the darkness out and sending a host of sparks up the chimney to scare away the storm. The disappointed wind howled in its rage and shook the house, the panes whirled about and heaped itself up, the cold tried to get in at every crack and crevice, but Nelly and her mother were as snug and safe as any Christmas eve could wish to find them. The Christmas tree looked all ready for the youngsters who were fast asleep upstairs and dreaming about it, with its bundles and gilded balls it fairly twinkled in the firelight, like the star of hope that guided those wise people that brought gifts to the Christ Child long ago.

"Mother," said Nelly, "this is as comfy as it can be with father away in the wild sea, but I don't quite like to have the outside of the house all dark; I like to think lighthouses when it storms and of our home as a kindly guide in the dark."

"Well," answered her mother, "suppose we do as they did in that lovely story we read the other day, and put a candle in the window to guide the Christ Child through the storm, and FOR the bang up asobed looking, in case he should come."

So the four stockings by the chimney corner became a shade more uplifted a little to give a glimpse of the pleasant room, and the lighted candle sent its beams out into the stormy night, looking for any little wanderer who might be astray. The cheering rays played with the snowflakes and they seemed to feel invited in as they pressed upon the window panes.

While they sat there listening and looking, there came a step on the stair and there was Tommy, in his nightgown and peeking through the partly opened door. Failing to see Santa Claus, he was about to flee up to his room again, but Nelly caught him and said that he must sing them a song first, as a punishment for his flurry. Tommy had just learned a new song, so he was willing enough, and this was it:

Five little brothers set out together
To journey the lifelong day;
In a curious carriage, all made of leather,
They hurried away, away.
One big brother and three quite small,
One was real fellow, as also at all.

The carriage was dark and not too roomy,
They could not move about;
The five little brothers grew quite gloomy,
"This is too bad!" they pouted.
"The biggest one whispered,
"What do you say?
Let's leave the carriage and run away."

So off they scampered, the five together,
Far away they sped;
When somebody found the carriage of leather,
Oh, my! How she shook her head!
"Twas her little boy's shoe; as everyone knows,
The five little brothers were five little toes.

Then, with a bow, Tommy was off to his dreams again.

The fire was burning low and so was the candle, so it was time to go upstairs and get out of Santa's way, but just as Nelly and her mother were about to do so there came a little face up against the window pane and they heard a small voice, so faint that they could not know what it was saying. It took Nelly but a moment to throw open the door and bring the little stranger in, but it was longer than that before they could cuddle him up into comfort and warm his cold little toes. It was not until Christmas morning that the searchers found at where the little boy had wandered to and when they came to Mrs. Gentle's house he was happily busy in opening his stocking, and did not want to go home. After he had gone away with his stocking under his arm and sandy marks all over his face, Nelly said, "Mother, I think there is a good deal of truth in that story about guiding the Christ Child to your house with a lighted candle."

Mother's Cook Book

We climbed the heights by the zigzag path,
And, when darred why—sent!
We understood it was made zigzag
To break the "force of the hills!"

I read straight up would prove too steep
For the traveler's feet to tread;
The thought was kind in its wise design
Of a zigzag path instead.

HONEY DISHES—

THOSE of us who are not bee keepers will not feel that it is economy to use much honey in cookery, but rather as a sweet, and as an occasional treat; however, those who have it in abundance will enjoy a few of the dishes made famous by the wife of Maurice Maeterlinck who has written very entertainingly of the bee and its habits.

Honey and Sour Milk Ginger Bread.

Blend one cupful of honey, one-half cupful of sour milk and one-half cupful of butter; two well-beaten eggs, two cupfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, the same of salt, one and three-quarters teaspoonfuls of soda, one-half teaspoonful of ginger. Heat the honey and butter and when just at the boiling point remove from the fire and add the sour milk and the eggs and dry ingredients. Bake in a sheet and coat with a thin icing.

Baked Apples With Honey.

Core large apples, fill each cavity with honey and top with pieces of butter. Bake in a moderate oven, basting occasionally.

Pears are also delicious (using lemon juice with the honey) baked in this way.

Ham Cured With Honey.

To every 50 pounds of ham use a brine of four pounds of coarse salt, one ounce of saltpeter, two pounds of honey and two gallons of water. Blend well, pour over the hams and let them stand for six weeks. They will be found delicious in flavor.

Oatmeal Honey Bread.

To a cupful of rolled oats add three cupfuls of hot water, half a cupful of honey, a tablespoonful of butter, a teaspoonful of salt. When cooled to blood heat add a dissolved yeast cake. Stir in flour till a suitable dough for kneading has been made. Raise again and make into two loaves. Raise again and brush with one teaspoonful of honey and two tablespoonfuls of milk just before going into the oven.

Honey is a natural sweet and should be given to children to satisfy the craving for sweets which is natural to childhood.

Fresh preserves are quite different when prepared with honey instead of sugar. Quinces are especially delicious when preserved with honey. Served with whipped cream they make the most delectable dessert.

BURNING THE BRIDGES

EVEN from an entirely selfish point of view it is always well worth while to keep on the best possible terms with the people.

People who live in small communities learn this lesson very quickly. For there is hardly a person whom you meet who cannot do you an injury later on if he chooses. For instance, there is Mrs. Smith, who, you feel, slighted you at Mrs. Brown's card party and Mrs. Smith's husband is president and chief executive of the small local bank. Now if you attempt to punish Mrs. Smith by neglecting to invite her to your card party, although you invite all her friends, you may get a certain sort of satisfaction out of the independent attitude you have taken.

Later it will happen that your husband, who is starting a new enterprise in that community, wishes to have the pleasantest sort of relations with that bank. He tells you of this and says that he would like to have the Smiths, old friends of his family, come in for supper some day. It is a perfectly permissible mingling of social and business relations. But by that little tiff you put between you and Mrs. Smith has deepened and deepened. Every one knows of it although by this time you have forgotten wonder whether Mrs. Smith really meant to snub you. She is very blunt, anyway, and is apt to be very direct. And of course you cannot invite the Smiths to supper and your husband cannot see his relations with the bank [illegible] on a pleasant social footing with his old friend.

But the small community is not the only place where your social relationships are apt to rise up and smite you. When you accumulate a slight lack of friendliness, dwell upon and cultivate it, you are burning your bridges behind you. You make it next to impossible to re-establish the pleasant relations that may be very much to your interest to have existing.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Lines and Marks or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

CARRIAGE AND MOTIONS OF THE HANDS.

SOMETIMES a palmist or a student of palmistry is called upon to read the hand of a person who enters the room with his fists tightly clenched, the elbows bent and the arms carried in what one authority calls "bow-legged" fashion. This is typical of a person of pugnacious disposition, and one must be careful and diplomatic in reading the hand and telling one's conclusions therefrom.

Many of us have met the Uriah Heep type, who seems to be continually rubbing one hand on the other in a sort of wiping motion. Here, also, one must be careful, for slyness, slothfulness, and even hypocrisy and untruthfulness are seen.

The proud, stately person carries the left hand hanging at the side with the fingers held together, but loosely. Often the right is bent at the elbow, with the palm held upward and the fingers closing loosely over it. We have here a person who is impressed with his own opinions, his or her dignity.

The Casting Out of Jimmy Myers

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

IT SEEMED a cruel thing to do, but we had to do it. For ours is ordinarily a quiet office. We have never had a libel suit. We have had fewer fights than most newspaper offices have, and while it hardly may be said that we strive to please, still in the main we try to get on with the people, and tell them as much truth as they are entitled to for ten cents a week. Naturally, we do our best to get up a sprightly paper, and in that the Myers boy had our idea exactly. He was industrious; more than that, he tried with all his might to exercise his best judgment, and no one could say that he was careless; yet everyone around the office admitted that he was unlucky.

We took him from the college atmosphere of town. He had been running the college paper for a year, and knew the merchants around town fair, and well; and, since he was equipped as far as education went, he seemed to be a likely sort of a boy for reporter and advertising solicitor.

One of the first things that happened to him was a mistake in an item about the opera house. He said that a syndicate had taken a lien on it. What he meant was a lease, and as he got the item from a man who didn't know the difference, and as the boy stuck to it that the man had said lien, not lease, we did not charge that up to him. A few days later he wrote for a town photographer a paid local criticizing some one who was going abroad the county peddling picture frames and taking orders for enlarged pictures. That was not so bad, but it turned out that the peddler was a big woman, and she came with a rawhide and cowped in the office for two days waiting for Jimmy, while he came in and out of the back door, stuck his copy on the hook by stealth, and traveled only in the alleys to get his news. One could hardly say that he was to blame for that, either, as the photographer who paid for the item didn't say the peddler was a woman, and the boy was not a clairvoyant.

One dull day he wrote a piece about a gang who played poker at night in Red Martin's room. Jimmy said he wasn't afraid of Red Martin, and he wasn't. The item was popular enough, and led to a raid on the place, which disclosed our best advertiser sitting in the game. To suppress his name meant our shame before the town; to print it meant his—at our expense. It was embarrassing, but it wasn't exactly the boy's fault. It was just one of those unfortunate circumstances that come up in life. However, the advertiser aforesaid began to hate the boy.

He must have been used to injustice all his life, for there was a vertical line between his and that parent's trouble. The line deepened as he went; and further into the morning's mail he went, and further into the afternoon's business and gossip he waited, but no one who is unlucky has less to fear handling dynamite than he has writing local items on a country paper.

A few days after the raid on the poker room Jimmy, who had acquired a particularly legible hand, wrote of a bunch of "The hen of her skirt was trimmed with pink crushed roses," and he was in no way to blame for the fact that the printer accidentally put an "h" for the "t". The skirt, though the woman's husband chased Jimmy into a saloon under Main street and kept him there most of the afternoon, while the cheering crowd informed the injured husband whenever Jimmy tried to get out of either pair of his pantaloons.

The printer that made the mistake bought Jimmy a new suit of clothes. We managed to print an apology that cooled the husband's wrath, and for ten days, or perhaps two weeks, the boy's life was one round of joy. Everything was done promptly, accurately and with remarkable intelligence. He whistled at his work and attacked up more copy than the printers could set up in type.

He told us in confidence that he never felt festive and gay that something didn't happen. He was not in the building that evening when the paper went to press, but after it was printed and the carriers had left the office he came in singing: "She's My Sweetheart, I'm Her Beau," and sat down to read the paper.

Suddenly the smile on his face withered as with frost, and he handed the paper across the table to the book-keeper, who read this item:

Died—Mrs. Lillian Gilsey.

Prepare for the hot weather, my good woman. There is only one way now; get a gasoline stove of Hiram & Co., and you need not fear any future heats.

And it wasn't Jimmy's fault. The foreman had merely misplaced a head line, but that explanation did not satisfy the bereaved family.

Jimmy was beginning to acquire a reputation as a joker. People refused to believe that such things just happened. They did not happen before Mr. James Myers came to the paper—why should they begin with his coming and continue during his engagement? Thus reasoned the comforters of the Gilseys, and those interested in such domestic pitfalls. The day that the "Statesman" wrote a burning editorial denouncing us "for an utter lack of all sense of common decency" that permitted us "to violate the sacredest feeling known to the human heart for the sake of putting a ribald laugh from the unthinking." We were in a week explaining that the error was not the boy's fault.

The summer wore away and the dog days came. The Democratic state campaign was about to open in our town, and orators and statesmen assembled from all over the Missouri Valley. There was a lack of flags in the dry goods stores. The Fourth of July celebration had taken all the stock. The only materials available were some red bunting, some white bunting, and some blue [illegible] with stars upon it. With this bunting the committee on reception covered the speakers' stand, wrapping the canopy under which the orators stood in the solid colors and the star spangled blue. It was beautiful to see, and the pride of the window-dresser of the Golden Eagle Clothing store. But the old soldiers who walked by nudged one another and smiled.

About noon of the day of the speaking the city clerk, who wore the little bronze button of the G. A. R., asked Jimmy if he didn't want someone to take care of the Democratic meeting. Jimmy, who hated politics, was running his legs off to get the names of the visitors, and was glad to have the help. He turned in the contributed copy without reading it, as he had done with the city clerk's articles many times before, and this is what greeted his horrified eyes when he read the paper:

"Under the Stars and Bars"
Democracy Opens Its State Campaign
Under the Rebel Emblem Today
A Fitting Token
Treasonable Utterances Have a Proper Setting

And then followed half a column of most violent abuse of the Democrats who had charge of the affair. Jimmy did not appear on the street that night, but the next morning, when he came down, the office was crowded with indignant Democrats "stopping the paper."

Jimmy had a peculiar knack of getting up little stories of the town—just exactly news stories, but little odd bits that made people smile without rancor when they saw their names in the eminently turned items. One day he wrote up a story of a little boy whose mother asked him where he got a dollar that he had. Nothing on his return with his father on the visit to Kansas City. The little boy's answer was that his father gave it to him for calling him uncle when any ladies were around. It was merrily spun, and showing that it would not make John Lee, the boy's father, mad, we published it, and Jimmy put at the head of it a roguish line of Kipling's: "Mine is the Larrabee, at the bottom of her society column, announced the engagement of a prominent young people in town. The Saturday paper was unusually readable. But when Jimmy went to work on Monday he found the town stirred. Somehow the item had been

Camp No. 22, P. O. S. of A.

A meeting full of the old-time pep is that of last Monday night. The Boosters were made happy by some new reservations to that Producers' Banquet and "Dad" stated he had his eye on a Christmas tree that would hold all that was brought for it.

Therefore bear in mind that the last meeting of the year will be held Tuesday, December 26th, in the auditorium, and that a gift, cost not to exceed one dime, is expected from all who attend.

NOTE—The first meeting of the New Year will be held in the Camp room January 1, 1923.

A class initiation is staged, the Boosters will outline some plans for the coming term and there will be a big evening.

Let us start the New Year with a rush.

The donation to the Home at Chelsea was liberal; those who were not present can send their contribution through Brother C. Kenneth Davis, Riverton.

Twelve entries were received for the pinochle tournament and secretary Reeves would like applicants to register promptly.

Quarter night and election AND the CHRISTMAS TREE, Tuesday, December 26th, 1922.

Publicity Committee.

Mrs. P. Hansen is greatly improved after suffering with symptoms of la grippe.

Its Body Is as Sturdy as Its Chassis

Lasting satisfaction with a closed car depends not only upon the dependability of the chassis but upon the durability of the body.

In the Special-Six Sedan, Studebaker offers an admirable co-ordination of these vital requirements.

Step in at our showroom and see this Sedan. Stand off and get a three-quarter view of it. Note its striking beauty. Step inside and relax in the nine-inch seat cushions. Note the great roominess and the completeness of the equipment.

Take a ride behind its 50-horsepower motor. Try the wheel yourself. Put it to any test—every test. Try its acceleration, speed, power. Ask yourself if you ever handled a car that steers so easily—that responds so satisfactorily with just what you want, when you want it.

The body is a product of Studebaker skill and craftsmanship which have been developed through more than two generations of vehicle building. Highest grade of materials and workmanship have produced a body as beautiful as it is enduring.

This Sedan is a good investment because of the saving in the initial outlay and the moderate cost of maintenance. The price is possible because Studebaker builds three distinct models with only one manufacturing and marketing cost and because middlemen's profits are virtually eliminated.

The name Studebaker stands for stability of body as well as chassis.

Camp No. 23, P. O. S. of A.

More applications received on the last meeting night of the year gave evidence of a good attendance at that Producers Banquet. The meeting nights are left in which to get in with the bunch.

Initiation resulted in few changes; Brother Melvin Davis succeeds Brother Jones as financial secretary. Brother retires on account of pressure of business, but remains active in the fraternity. Brother Hutchinson succeeds Brother Davis as trustees.

The following officers were adopted: Brother David and Brother David Brother Hutchinson, P. P. and other officers were elected by unanimous vote.

The year just closed has been one of activity in the lodge. Active in membership and much credit is due for their efforts.

Christmas tree for the children of the members will be held in the lodge room on Christmas eve, when there will be a treat for the children. Start right at 7 o'clock.

TREAT FOR KIDDIES

Youngsters Entertained and Given Presents at Community Christmas Party

One hundred and forty-five youngsters were entertained by Santa Claus and given a bountiful turkey dinner Wednesday evening at the "kiddies' night" held under the auspices of the churches of Palmyra and Riverton in the gym of the Epworth Methodist Church.

The dinner was served under the direction of Mrs. Howard Dillon. Santa then distributed stockings to each guest. The gifts included handkerchiefs, toys and a pair of storm rubbers.

Music was furnished by Lee's orchestra and the kiddies sang a number of appropriate songs.

A beautifully decorated Christmas tree stood in one corner of the gym.

Each child was brought to the gym and taken home again in automobiles furnished by various generous citizens of the two towns.

The balcony was filled with spectators throughout the evening.

Thanks to All

William T. J. Purnell, kiddies' night treasurer, wishes to thank all who so generously responded to the call for contributions to defray the expense of the community Christmas treat to the children of Palmyra, Riverton and vicinity. It was a good cause and funds in abundance were provided.

COUNTY DEMOCRATS ELECT

George R. Lippincott, of Moorestown, Heads Club

At a meeting of the Burlington County Democratic Club, held in Mount Holly on Monday night the following officers were elected:

President, George R. Lippincott, Moorestown; vice president, Reeve W. Stewart, Mount Holly; secretary, William H. Abaslem, Mount Holly; treasurer, Francis H. Reid, Mount Holly.

Members of Executive Committee for three years—Richard W. Lamb, Mount Holly; William D. Cowperthwaite, Medford; W. Emerson Haines, Maple Shade. Executive Committee for two years—Clifford Emmons, Pemberton; Highard Hughes, Burlington; Ralph W. Haines, Vincentown. Member of Executive Committee for one year—William Fromhager, Edgewater Park.

Plans were completed for participation in the inaugural parade in Trenton on January 16.

Staunton Wins Bowling Tournament

After one of the closest finishes in the many bowling tournaments that have been held at the Country Club, team No. 13, captained by E. P. Staunton and assisted by the following teammates: N. Lane, jr., H. Kleckefer, D. W. Sager, J. J. Custer and E. W. Kelley, succeeded in winning out by two full games. Right behind the winners were four teams tied for second place, and on Wednesday night these four teams fought it out for the undisputed title of the second best team in the league.

After two extra-hot games, Oliver Willits' team gained the coveted position of second place by beating out Bob Ayres' team by eleven pins. Bechtel's team was third, with Wright's team fourth. The final standing at the end of the tournament was as follows:

1.	Staunton
2.	Willits
3.	Ayres
4.	Bechtel
5.	Wright
6.	Coe
7.	Vaughan
8.	Long
9.	Davis
10.	Murray
11.	Graff
12.	Evans
13.	Hiles

The second tournament starts on January 2d, and finishes May 7th. As there is a number of the men bowlers who have not kept up to their averages during the last tournament, there has been a general lowering of averages to be made by each individual with the result that every team has a good chance to win out during the next round.

Each captain has assured his men that it will be soft for his team from now on, and the only thing that seems to be unanimous among the captains is that team No. 13 will not be allowed to repeat.

Douglas Clark won the prize for the highest individual game with a score of 231.

marches the Morgan Heights development. Builder Davis has certainly accomplished wonders with this beautiful property, and every week finds some improvement to the locality that guarantees to the purchaser an ideal residential community for all time.

We understand that Builder Davis is at the present time making arrangements for the erection of homes on Highland avenue and Parnell avenue, to the south of Malone street. Do not overlook the fact that this property is rapidly disappearing from the market, and if you have any desire to live in a nice community, in good environments, where the air is pure, the time to make your arrangements.

Why not talk to Builder Davis about the homes he is erecting on Cleveland avenue opposite the handsome home property of Mr. W. J. Purnell, president of our local bank. It is not to say that one has the opportunity to purchase at reasonable prices a home with such a wonderful outlook.

I do not trot with those who hold
That Christmas gifts should be

It matters not to me.

I'll merely pass it on.

IC KUICK LIC K

By K. K. K.

Of Klans and Cliques there's been much talk,
Here in this town of ours,
When 'ere two men, or ladies, take a walk,
Before the dial has passed last hours,
Folks say "Another Clique."

Should a man aspire to Township job,
Or form a club to boost the town,
As sure as he's made up his mind,
And fan the humor bustles 'round,
Here is "Another Clique."

The wish is father to the thought,
What folks talk of they must wish,
So here's a column that can't be bought,
But we hope it'll be a savory dish,
For it's "Another Clique."

THE WANDERING JEW

There must have been a twinkle in my eye as I stood gazing at the sign in the window of the post office (not the American Legion) said "What do you think of our home?" when I saw him it the American Legion had been in the building as he said "our" home. You see it was this way: One night last winter the officers of the V. M. C. A. decided to hold a meeting and one of the members brought up the question as to what they were going to do with the old building. After a long discussion one member said, "Look here, the American Legion has outgrown its home and many towns much smaller than Palmyra have donated them a home, why can't we deed this building over to them?" In this way we can help them beyond measure and show them that we are interested in them and this will be an incentive to them to do good work which will help us all in our own community. For after all this building was put up by our own people and there is just a small mortgage against it which we can take up easily. Another thing is, these are our own boys that we sent away with a tear in our eye, and we were so proud of. Let us do our little bit for them now, as they did for us."

"One of the other members of the board then asked, "Can we do that according to law?" The other member replied, "I do not know, but I have it looked up." So this member of the board went to see a young attorney, who was well versed in the law, and asked his opinion. He was told him that it could be done and that the matter was very easy to handle. So at the next meeting the matter was brought up, and this young lawyer was there, and explained to the members in detail and told them that the matter was very easy to handle one and that they could without any trouble or expense deed the building over to the local Post of the American Legion and give them a clear title.

After a lengthy discussion one of the members stood up and suggested that the building be deed over to the American Legion. This motion had the unanimous consent of the entire board, and we were proud to be a party to it.

After having this explained to me I was somewhat happy for I thought many times after I saw the Legion Rooms that these boys should have a home of their own and at last my wishes had been granted.

"Now," we friends said, "you have been so modest that we have not been able to find out your story."

SCRIBES AND PHARISEES

By WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE

Copyright, 1922, by the Macmillan Co.

OURS is a little town in that part of the country called the West by those who live east of the Alleghanies, and referred to lovingly as "back East" by those who live west of the Rockies. It is a country town where, as the song goes, "you know everybody and they all know you" and the country newspaper office is the social clearing house.

In our little home office we're not all reporters, and we know many intimate things about people that we do not print.

As the merest incident of the daily grind it came to the office that the bank cashier, whose retirement was announced with half a column of regret, was caught $5,000 short, after 30 years of faithful service, and that his wife sold the homestead to make his shortage good.

Though our loathed but esteemed contemporary, the Statesman, speaks of our town as "this village," calls the marshal the chief of police, we are fond of it and sorry for it, and think it a pretty good town. And this newspaper is equipped with printing machines that is printed from a type perfectly set. It is only a country newspaper, and knowing this, we refuse to put on city airs. Of course, we print the American Associated Press report on the first page, under formal heads of the usual pretense of dignity, but that first page is the parlor of the paper, as it is of most of the residences, and in the other pages they and we go around in our shirt sleeves, calling people by their first names; issuing the boys and girls good-naturedly; tickling the pompous members of the village with straws from time to time, and printing out the family secrets of the community without much regard for the feelings of the supercilious.

Nine or ten thousand people in our town go to bed on this kind of mental pabulum, as do country town dwellers all over the United States, and although we do not claim that it is helpful, we do contend that it does not hurt them. Certainly by poking mild fun at the shams—the fool pharisees—we make it more difficult to maintain the glass limit which the Pharisaical world establishes. Popular by printing the news of everything that happens, suppressing nothing "on account of the respectability of the parties concerned," we may prevent some evil-doers from going on with their misdeeds, that is a mere conjecture, and we do not set it down to our credit. What we maintain is that in printing our little country dailies we, the scribes, fool the end of the world to this effect, that we make our share of fun out of life as we go along, and pass as much of it on to our neighbors as we can spare.

Because we live in country towns, where the only car goods we deal are on the baker's wagon, and where the horses in the fire department work on the streets, is no reason why town dwellers should assume that we are natives. We have no dialect words, recording which the class of our professors burr our "r's" a little or drop an occasional final "g." But you will find that all the daily advertising in the backs of the magazines are in our homes, and that the phrase you hear LOUD talking home at midnight, with their coats over their arms, whistling the same popular airs that travelling boys are whistling in New York, Portland, San Francisco or New Orleans that same evening. Our girls are as pretty, reliant, well-dressed young women whom you see at the summer resorts from Bar Harbor to Coronado's Beach to Del Monte. In the fall and winter these girls fill the colleges of the East and the universities of the West.

We take all the beautiful garden magazines, and our creditable varieties are turning out creditable vegetables which we pronounce "vahses," you may be sure—by formal gardens. And though we men for the most part run our own lawnmowers, and personally look after the work of the college boy who takes care of the horse and the cow for his room, still there are a few of us proud and haughty creatures who have automobiles. At the flower parade in our own town last October there were ten automobiles in line, decked with paper flowers and laden with pretty girls in lawns and dimities and, humor though as a matter of fact most of the linens were paper "parcel lined," and the flowers after little country paper printed in them to the effect that the real social event of the year was the flower parade in which the engines set and the decorated floats, and the automobiles of local people participated, and that the quantity who wear genuine linen and a few imitations who wear Indian Head.

...t. I am going to let you in on a ...ret that is not known outside of our own organization. Next year the lease on the store is up and we are not going to let them renew the lease but we are going to clean up the store and make it into a Community Centre where the various functions for the advancement of the town can be held and in this way benefit the entire community.

As you know our town is now a borough, we changed in the early part of this year, and as the Mayor and Council had no convenient place to meet, we let them meet in our rooms. Now as soon as this store is sold there we are going to build a small office there for the Mayor and Council will have their headquarters there and hold all of their meetings there.

Now we are going to tear away that old tin roof which extends over the store, and are going to build a nice verandа along the entire front. Also in the second floor where our club rooms are we are going to have a porch also which will be enclosed to screen in the summer the same as below, and I tell you, friend, it is going to be mighty nice. The appearance of the building will be enhanced and it will be the most beautiful street along Broad street.

When asked my friend, "How do you expect to take care of the upkeep of the building, by running carnivals and working the ice in Summer, which I understand people object to most terribly?" He answered, "Pooh! Pooh, my boy. Now that we have a home of our own we will not need to run carnivals which so many people do approve of, as the necessity for them is passed. You see we have over $300 per year rent, and we had to make some way, so we thought a carnival was a good way to do it. Now that we have a home of our own we are through with such things for there seems to be sentiment against them in Palmyra and we want to do what is right by our own community. All of the officers which formerly put into the carnivals we are going to put into constructive measures for the good of the community."

And so to the Sunday work, I think I can voice the sentiment of the entire Post when I say that this work which we have attempted on that day is a help for our own benefit, but we have tried to make things more pleasant for other people. You see we are not so keen on "American Legion Building." Our income from dues shall be taken care of our other operating expenses, so you can see we are on very strict work, and had such a revival of spirit among our members that we were presented with this building, that being nothing like it will do for Palmyra.

Now, my friend finished talking, tears of gratitude were streaming down his face as he grasped him by the hand and said, "My friend, I am proud of you and of your Post, and I wish you every success."

No wonder he was so happy, to see that the people have kept their promises and done for the boys as they said they would do for them when they went into service. I was glad to do my part, and I see where it is written that "Virtue is its own reward" so nothing will be too good for me.

I believe that the American Legion is the best insurance policy for a man in America, and a safeguard for the nation, in fact this and will cause it to be such for the benefit of America, beyond a doubt. I am grateful for the kind words of previous years, must stand for the veterans of this last war are going to keep faith.

Now on my journeys to the ends of the globe, I can always go to the "Wandering Jew" and sit on the platform of the Palmyra Post in 1923 watching the boys put up the finishing touches on the building, and now the AMERICAN LEGION HOUSE.

Short Words of Wisdom

Some men are always grumbling and muttering about something. Nothing satisfies them. If a man could do as he pleases, to manual effect of everything, he would be discontented. Some men are never satisfied, and you have all men's good praise.—Socrates.

Love it is Yee Lite.

The Kingdom of Heaven is of the children, of those who love and who give pleasure. Mighty men of their hands, the hunters, and the builders, and the judges, have lived long and deep lives, but the men who need to run errands, who are content with lowly character and among our corpse in terests and property concerns, the men who are of us, we should love them.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Something to Think About
By R. A. WALKER

THE RIGHT THING
at the
RIGHT TIME
By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

RAINY DAY MANNERS

"When the dismal rain comes down in dashing lines."

SO MUCH depends on good manners on a rainy day!

The ill-bred and inconsiderate man or woman is tiresome enough at any time, but when there is rain in the air and mud underfoot he or she is positively insufferable.

One has to be especially careful in walking in a crowded street when pedestrians carry open umbrellas, and considerable forbearance and good nature are required when by chance another person's opened umbrella becomes entangled in your veil or in the trimming on your hat. Closed wet umbrellas are likewise difficult to manage, especially in public conveyances. Be on your guard lest they lean or drip against your neighbor. When entering a public place—a library, or restaurant or church, for instance—where there is any way to leave a wet umbrella in the vestibule or the entrance hall do so by all means. In many department stores a boy with a checking rack is placed at the doors for your convenience and, although you are not required to check your wet umbrella, there is usually the desire that you will. Take the few additional minutes that are necessary for this operation and so avoid annoying other people with your wet umbrella.

In many homes there is an umbrella receptacle in the vestibule and when entering you can very conveniently leave your wet umbrella there. Your rubbers can also be slipped off in the vestibule. In other houses there is an entrance hall in which it is more convenient to deposit your wet umbrella and rubbers, but whatever you do do not drag to the interior of the house what you are going to keep fresh.

If you have an umbrella to the exclusion of the globe, I can always go to the "Wandering Jew" and sit on the platform of the Palmyra Post in 1923 watching the boys put the finishing touches on the building, and now the AMERICAN LEGION HOUSE.

Something to Think About
By R. A. WALKER

A SECRET SANCTUARY

IN EVERYBODY'S heart, screened from the gaze of intimate friends, there is a secret sanctuary to which he or she retires when the outside world becomes irritating and overbearing.

You may call your sanctuary the place of dreams, or the refuge of remembrance, but whatever name you may give it, there are times when you like to retire to it and be alone with your thoughts far from the turmoils and haunts of men.

It is in the retreat that the soul finds its comforter, its better self and its nobler faith.

It is here the beautiful flowers of thought are watered and kept in the sunlight, jealousy screened from inquisitive eyes, meddling tongues and fingers.

You may retire to it in the midnight hour when the world is still or when the storms are rattling the casement and the rains are beating against the panes, but wherever you visit it you find the tranquility you crave and the new strength to help you carry your heavy burdens.

Courage, hope, ambition and resolution are nursed back to life in this asylum and given a new meaning.

Fear of poverty, loneliness and even disappointment in the failure of some long-cherished plan, lose in this sacred spot their uncouth forms and poison-ous stings.

Hearts that were breaking under hard strains become normal again and function with their customary vigor, though perhaps with less dependence on themselves.

To review ourselves in this sanctuary is to make ourselves better men and women, charitable and considerate of our fellow-beings.

If we search our souls, scan our foibles, frailties and shortcomings honestly, we emerge from the solitude with less satisfaction and envy.

It is through these dear hallowed with our ragged conscience that we find the truth, get our bearings and then discover whether the path we are plodding is taking us to the right or wrong direction.

The impulse which prompts us to visit our hidden sanctuary is that which is left in those make of us men and women, better qualified in every way to help ourselves and to encourage and help others.

Riverton & Palmyra Water Company Applies to Public Utilities Board for Increase in Rates

THE RIVERTON & PALMYRA WATER COMPANY, hereby applies for sanction to issue bonds, as required, to pay off existing indebtedness, finance extensions for its system to accommodate new sections, and to continue its policy of metering the entire system.

In support of this application, a valuation, whereby attention is made value being a continuation of that made by the Public Utility Commission in January 1917, by adding the capital expenditures since that date, and deducting the usual amount of depreciation on the entire total. This value tion represents actual expenditures, and totals $214,534.84. Against which are liabilities of

Common stock	$175,000.00
Bonds	14,500.00
Accounts payable	6,200.00
	$199,700.00

In order to secure a market for these bonds and to maintain the Company in a proper physical condition to continue to give the quality of service demanded by its patrons, and to continue to furnish fire protection complying with the requirements of the Insurance Underwriters, a revision of rates to provide a reasonable return on the capital invested is necessary.

A Schedule is attached herewith, showing the operating expenses for the past four years, and we believe that careful investigation and comparison will disclose that the Company has been run with rigid economy.

A Schedule of Income is also attached, and a careful estimate of the income anticipated and the Budget of expense for the coming year, based on former expenses, shows that these earnings do not provide a return that would justify further investment.

The valuation submitted at the reasonable rate of 7%

justifies a return of	$15,015.00
The estimate of expense requires	27,375.00
Total Revenue Required	$42,390.00
Anticipated Revenues	34,556.00
Reasonable rate of 7% justifies a return of	$ 7,834.00
An increase of $2 in the primary rate, rate of $6 applying to 1410 consumers, should yield an additional	$2,820
An increase in the fire protection rate, now $10 per year, per hydrant, at $20 per year per hydrant, should yield an additional	5,040
	$7,860

We hereby petition to have these rates adjusted to yield this revenue, and claim that if these rates are granted, we will yet be giving service for lower charges than those made by adjoining companies operating under like conditions.

Something to Think About
By R. A. WALKER

LOOKING BACKWARD

THE old year is drifting out to the dim unseen and there is a little while it will be lost, no more a part of our joys and sorrows, nor a portion of our existence.

Let us take a retrospective view of the days that have gone, consider how we have spent them, whether we have played our part wisely or foolishly, or whether we have moved ahead or lagged behind.

As we stand upon the hill-top, or in the vale, what are the thoughts that crowd in the mind? Do they bring us pleasure or regret; do they cheer the heart or depress it?

We are disposed at the end of every twelfth-month to pause a while and reflect, to make new promises for our betterment, to seek a new star for our future guidance and to flatter ourselves that whatever failings we display in our little journey were due to the laxity of ours, but to a stroke of Fate!

We refuse to rub our velvety skin with coarse sand-paper for the very good reason that it hurts. Nor do we in looking backward like to rub our conscience, for it, too, hurts, and causes us to wince, when we would sit in our easy chair and administer to our moral self a stupefying dose of chloroform that we may for the time being become insensible to the smarts and aches, which otherwise might drive us to repentance.

We lack the courage to stand up and face the music, or to look truth in the face, a prevailing form of cowardice frequently preferred by most of us to bravery.

Brent follows event agreeably or annoyingly when it drinks in the realization that we have run through the vicissitudes, mutations and impediments of the year, bending as we proceeded on our way the laws of the lesser and weaker, in no way nothing of the laws of our own.

Whatever opinion we may have regarding our conduct, we bids it with utmost care handle the skeleton in the family closet.

Then with a sublime devotion to duty, which sometimes lasts two whole days, we take a peep backward, swear solemnly beneath our breath that we'll be good, true and faithful, which we usually are until the next cog slips, and then away we go again, tripping along the primrose path, oblivious to everything but our selfish content.

PALMYRA NOTES

Owing to the delay in the arrival of school furniture, caused by shipping delays, and also a hold-up in the plastering of the basement, the school board has been disappointed in their plan to open the new high school building with the new year. It will be at least two weeks and possibly not until the first of February before the building can be made ready for use. School re-opens after the Christmas holiday on January 2nd.

Charles Dietz, Jr., is home from Bucks College for the holidays.

Mrs. Fred Long and daughter, of Pitman, spent Wednesday with Mrs. George Rhoades.

Mrs. Ella Brill entertained Mr. and Mrs. Middleton and daughter, of Camden, Christmas.

The Fortnightly Reading Circle will meet at the home of Mrs. Walter Yeo next week on Thursday.

William McConnell and family spent Christmas in Camden with Mr. and Mrs. Horace McConnell.

C. M. Dimas and family spent Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at Perth Amboy with Mr. and Mrs. Fredonez.

Mrs. Alexander Corbett and family, of Washington avenue, are visiting at the home of her parents on Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen M. Marsh, of Stroudsburg, were Christmas guests of their daughter, Mrs. Frank Snover.

Rev. T. A. Robinson will preach a New Year sermon at the Sunday morning service of the Epworth M. E. Church, at which night prices will start at 10 o'clock.

Pastor Williams' topic at the Central Baptist Church Sunday morning will be "Victory Out of Defeat." The evening service will begin at 10 o'clock. First will be a song service, consisting of old favorite hymns, followed by a sermon on "Religion Our Only Hope." New Year watch night service will then begin.

Ralph Kinsey, organist at the Holy Trinity Church, Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, will give his twenty-fourth annual series of organ recitals every Saturday afternoon during January and February. The public is cordially invited to attend. Assisting Mr. Kinsey will be Bernard Pollard, pianist; soloist; Anderson Rapp, violinist; Helen H. Laird, contralto, and Mae Ebrey Hotz, soprano.

Palmyra and Riverton firemen made a quick run to the home of Albert Heeter, 20 Rowland street, Thursday afternoon of last week, when a defective flue set fire to the roof and rear walls of the dwelling. The blaze was hard to get at, but when Riverton's pumper was attached to Palmyra's hose line the flames were quickly drowned out. The roof and rear of the dwelling was considerably damaged and the whole house was badly water soaked.

Calvin J. Boal has been named by Congressman Bacharach as one of the second alternates for appointment to Annapolis as the result of examinations held December 1st.

William H. Schmierer, of Burlington Pike, was struck by an automobile early Saturday evening. Mr. Schmierer was carried along several feet and was considerably bruised. The driver, after asking him if he was badly hurt, drove away without leaving name or number.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Binder spent Christmas with their son, William Binder, and his family, at Harrisburg. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Binder will entertain their parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Binder, of Palmyra, at their new home in Merchantville on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Seigle and daughter, Margaret, of Scranton, Pa., were guests of Mrs. Seigle's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Cook, over Christmas. They were accompanied by Carl F. Dingler, also of Scranton, who is an electrical expert. Mr. Dingler raged up a fine radio outfit for Mr. Cook and the whole family now has the wireless "bug."

Albert Miller, of Scranton, was the guest of Miss Mildred Given, on Sunday.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because — FIVE-O'CLOCK

You are so easy to see through! If you are, you have been up against it a long, long time. If you are easy to see through your every honesty and kindness are often taken the wrong way and your frankness is often as "testing" and people think you are queer! You need comfort. Keep on being easy to understand; it means pretty much your mind is clear, that you think straight, that your heart is in the right place. You will make time, too, as it is and to be understood you aren't.

SO

Your Get-away here is: Let them "see through you" and don't worry, and if they laugh be glad you can be amused.

A LINE O' CHEER
By John Kendrick Bangs.

TIME

NO MASTERS with the wise is time spent;
Not ever does he waste an hour
Who knows the use of every minute
And every moment of his power.

He, busy and master, I say,
But then stands by with folded hands
To see his time run away.

He's not the man I want.
At any hour of day or night,
Be it dawn or dusk,
He does not hesitate or delight
To do a service or a task.

He's not the man I want
Who turns aside at sorrow for
The woes or trust with proper care
The cares of those he's sworn to share.

RIGHT TIME
By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

WHEN YOU CORRECT

It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.—Benjamin Disraeli.

OCCASIONALLY, no doubt, perfectly well-bred husbands and wives do quarrel, but they are incompatible, but they do not quarrel in public. Neither does a well-bred woman "call down" her husband before children or correct a servant any more than is necessary. If you have a complaint to make to a shop or shop, do not make it in a conspicuous way.

The wise manager of employees does not "nag" them before outsiders. Sometimes, of course, the inconsiderate manager will seek to lay the blame for something for which his store manager is blame on a subordinate. He may even go so far as to do the thing out of an embarrassing situation, but he is surely laying up trouble for himself in the future.

Some young women really enjoy having little quarrels with the young men who are paying them, and sometimes they are ill-bred enough to indulge in such moods in an ostentatious way in public places. That the young woman who is annoyed, or who pretends to be annoyed, puts her secret to great embarrassment by refusing to speak to him in a public conveyance. Or she may wait until they are in their seats at the theater and then mar her own and her escort's enjoyment of the play by indulging in her quarrelsome mood. She may actually enjoy the embarrassment that he endures. Or she may wait until they are with their friends at a dance and then refuse to dance with him for the sadistic reason of having others see how miserable she can make the poor man question. "There are girls who do this sort of thing, but they are truly not well bred. The really well-bred woman, if she must quarrel with the man who is devoted to her, waits until they are alone.

NEW YEAR GREETING
By WILL M. MAUPIN

I WISH a happy prosp'rous year
To all my good friends, far and near.

From California 'cross to Maine,
From lakes to gulf, and back again;
From north to south I wish the best to you,
I wish for each of you the best.
The New Year has within its store—
All this I wish for you—and more.

I wish a year of joy and peace;
From sorrow and from pain release;
For friends above one cannot care,
And Love's door ever opened wide;
Hope's full fruition day by day,
And strong affection all the while,
And harbor safe when tempests roar—
All this I wish for you—and more.

For you I wish, instead of gold,
That you may gracefully grow old;
That each day's duty gently end
Will see some duty nobly done.
I wish that home ties stronger grow,
That for you years shall swifter blow,
That God's rich blessings on you pour—
All this I wish for you—and more.

The best that's old, the best that's new—
All, all of these, I wish for you.

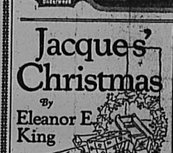
Jacques' Christmas

By Eleanor E. King



© 1922, WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

A BLIZZARD was brewing. Little cutting pieces of snow were being blown in whirls around corners and down the street. Huddled down in his coat stood a newsboy of some eight or nine years. His face was drawn with the cold and he beat his hands against his sides to keep them warm.

Last-minute Christmas shoppers, hurrying along to get in various errands done, gave no heed to the little fellow who put with his papers. He ought to be better when they had to think about.

"Yeh, all the news— Won't cha buy one, lady? I have a couple more," he added, pleadingly into the face passed by.

"Sorry, sonny," said the man, "got one home now and I probably won't ever get a chance to read it today," and he hurried along his way.

The rush of pedestrians subsided a moment. The boy sighed out a young woman as he said, "Well, looks kind. I'll try her."

"Yeh—all the latest news—just out—won't cha buy one, please, lady? I only have a few."

She opened her purse and started to hunt for the money.

"I've just got to sell these papers out early tonight, 'cause it's my last chance to buy that doll. You know, my little sister, they say, isn't very well, and the only thing she says she wants is an orange for Christmas, but I know better." He paused for breath

She Opened Her Purse.

"She wants a doll, but she thinks she can't ask for it 'cause we haven't money for dolls. I have, though," he said promptly. "I've been watching a doll in one of the windows here, by going by tonight and get it."

"What is your name, son?"

"Jacques and my sister's—no petite soeur—Marthe."

"Zshaeh?—What a queer—"

"No; it isn't," he said, anticipating what she was going to say. "My mother is French and thinks names are beautiful—to us," he added after a pause.

"Where do you live, Jacques?"

"Sixty-nine Kensington Square, top floor, back two rooms. I've got that number to remember it by."

"Yes, you won't get lost right soon," she replied as she put her arm around him, and gave him a little hug on the shoulder. "Merry Christmas, Jacques," and she was on her way. She stopped a little way off and looked back. He wrote something down, then hurried on.

Another half hour found Jacques hopping an orange and a little doll to his cost as he trudged along home. When he came in sight his little voice started chanting. "Free doll—free doll. Free Jacques—you're his tonight."

"Jac, Marina. Today I was talking to Santa Claus and he said he was awfully busy and he doubted if he would get all among the children."

"Oh!" said Martha in a disappointed tone.

Jacques' mother was sewing busily upon a garment she was intent upon finishing. Tomorrow was Christmas, and she was going to be let over to mother.

Martha's brother came, and Jacques told her of his meeting with the lady and the narrow. He had found a Christmas present for his sister, and he had he made into a little tree under which he placed his gifts.

His Mother Was Just as Excited as He.

Christmas morning dawned brightly in the little French home. Jacques' surprise was complete, for Martha went into raptures over the tree and her presents. She alternately hugged and kissed her doll, keeping up a constant chatter to it in French. The orange and a few other presents that she had found under the tree she put on the shelf, so that she could admire them while she rocked her doll.

Jacques had had his surprise, too—"Give and it shall be given unto you" for his two packets under the tree had grown to be six or seven.

"Mother," he said, "I think I will have to try my new mittens and see exactly how warm they are." So saying, he slipped into his coat and pushed on the door. What ailed it? Was it frozen shut, stuck, or what was the matter?

With his mother's help the door was opened. To their surprise they found that a huge pile of packages had been the cause of their trouble.

Jacques gave a cry of delight as he pounced upon the bundles. His mother was just as excited as he, as she helped carry in the stuff.

Then followed one of the happiest hours the family had ever known—whole two-dozen oranges and all sorts of wholesome food. Jacques' mother fairly wept with joy.

Santa remembered us after all, mother," said little Jacques, "and he left this note on one of my presents. Look, mother, it says:—

"'I hope you will always be as thoughtful of your sister, Jacques. A Merry Christmas and a Bright and Happy New Year.

"SANTA CLAUS."

KIDDIES SIX

By Will M. Maupin

HELLO, POP!

HIS photograph! Our joy and pride—
The picture of our boy who died!
I seem to hear, 'midst tears that drop
Upon its face, his loving call
Come ringing down the darkened hall
To give me greeting: "Hello, Pop!"

It seems but yesterday he died—
But yesterday we stood beside
His bed and watched his eyelids drop
To sleep and wake in endless day—
But yesterday I heard him say
With dying accents! "Good-by, Pop!"

Sometimes when daylight fades to gloom
And all the world is still in the room
I feel again the smiling face
Of him, from the shadows of his place
Of honor on the joyful stool,
In bright contrast to "the papa's boy!"

When after dinner each, while hands
Have loosed the tost of earthly bands
And caused the weary load to drop
From off the shoulders of the day
To rest, at heavenly quiet, my boy
And his two sisters! "Hello, Pop!"

BURR MONUMENTS

Jimmie! Here's the paper with the account of the accident. Now, you see, you've got to be careful. Don't run out in the street. Remember Christmas is coming.

Yes, Mamma, I'll be careful. I'll look both ways before I cross the street.

Good boy! Now, Jimmie, you run along and play. Mamma has to get dinner ready.

Jimmie, I'm afraid, was not very careful, for he was run over by a motor car and killed.

Mamma's heart was broken. She could not be comforted. Christmas Day came and went, but she could not forget her little boy.

Santa Claus, looking down from the North Pole, saw her grief and decided to help her. He called Jimmie to him and told him to go back to his mother.

Jimmie was very glad to see his mother again, but he was very sad when he saw how unhappy she was.

Santa Claus told Jimmie to go and comfort her. He said that he could make the sparks fly, a train of cars that could go, a doll that could say "mama," and candy enough to go round. For Father and Mother Tanner there was a pocketbook full of gold in it, and a note of good cheer that was better than the gold.

So the wonderful tree spent the rest of the night in trembling joy. It could not sleep for thinking of the friendly love that had provided such a happy morning to come. And when the first of the morning light brought all the Tanners downstairs the tree fairly shook with pleasure, amid the wonder and the glee of that Christmas day.

As for the servants of Santa Claus, they had never had such a merry Christmas before. Their hearts were so warm that they did not mind the frost. They sang over the pleasure of giving pleasure and more. They always knew that Santa Claus had to live up North so that he could cool off after his long journey in helping others. They addressed him in verses that must have made him jotter than ever called him.

The Wonderful Tree

By Christopher G. Hazard

© 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

IT STOOD in the corner of a rather large room. It was festooned with strings of popcorn and cones of crepe paper. Wisps of tissue paper and tinsel ornaments were scattered upon the branches, and small candles were ready to illuminate the occasion. There were many invisible things upon the tree, too. The imaginations of the children had been as busy as their dresses. Family resources may be limited, but there are no bounds in the realms of Santa Claus and hope. In the magical Christmas time the clouds of poverty are all as gilded and beautified as any scenes can furnish. Anything may happen then. Cinderella is as hopeful as her more favored sisters; not as sensible but has an expectant eye. So the Tanner Christmas tree was as beautiful as a picture and as full of presents as a picture could be.

But, however pictured by fancy and made of good wishes, the presents were all invisible. No one could see what was in the heads of the dreamers and the hearts of the anxious but needy providers. For weeks the mill had been closed, and now the family pocketbook was about empty. Father Tanner looked at the tree, could not see a gift on it, and shook his head. Mother Tanner was inclined to make the best of it.

Yes, the tree was one of the family. It had been the tree of last year's Christmas and the tree of the year before that. It was a tree that kept its evergreen habit and that did not seem to grow old. It was like a living tree, made to bring forth its fruit every year. It had been so good to them that they had named it Bounty. And now it stood there in the dark, all dressed up, but with nothing but blossoms, without any fruit. It could see the surprising children coming to their morning disappointment. It could hear their cries of surprise and chagrin. Silly Sam, more ready of amusement than the others, would look in vain for his expected present; Sue would miss the two dress patterns for her big doll, her new hat and high chair for her little doll; Tommy would not get his skates; Dick would not get a sled. It was anything but a merry tree.

But it was a wonderful tree. It had a power of making itself felt all over the neighborhood. It could summon Santa Claus by a kind of wireless message that would go through walls and do the thing. It reached as far as the folks who were having a Christmas eve party two blocks away and made them think of Mr. Folsom's mill boss and Mrs. Folsom's laundry woman. They had been wishing for something nice for their party that day, and now it came into their heads to go over and be Santa for the Tanners. So the tree drew a very silent but very busy company to the Tanner house that night.

As the children had left directions for Santa on the table it was easy to find out what the tree was supposed to do, so, presently, it did it. There was more, too, than orders for the wanted things; the storybook land brought with them enough to satisfy any reasonable tree; there were picture books, pictures, a pound cake, games, a conjurer that could make the sparks fly, a train of cars that could go, a doll that could say "mama," and candy enough to go round. For Father and Mother Tanner there was a pocketbook full of gold in it, and a note of good cheer that was better than the gold.

So the wonderful tree spent the rest of the night in trembling joy. It could not sleep for thinking of the friendly love that had provided such a happy morning to come. And when the first of the morning light brought all the Tanners downstairs the tree fairly shook with pleasure, amid the wonder and the glee of that Christmas day.

The Snow Fairy

By Martha B. Thomas

IT DON'T suppose two noses were ever pressed more forcibly against a window pane than those belonging to Jerry and Sally. If you were to look at them from the outside, in their front parlor, for instance, they would look more like pigs than anything else. This is what a window-glass used to two children who have the whooping cough and are standing as closely as possible against the nearest thing to getting out—a window.

Jerry put his fat paws down into his pockets and looked as cross as a bear. Sally looked very sad to keep the tears from rolling down her cheeks and her two pigtails quivered unhappily.

"We'll miss the party and the games and the goodies . . . and everything," she wailed.

"I don't care about the old party!" declared Jerry scornfully. "What I want is to get out and make a snow man. Look at all this perfectly good snow going to waste! I call it a shame!" And you would have thought by his tone that all blizzards were invented for the express purpose of giving little boys the opportunity of playing in it.

"Mary Randall's going to wear her new pink dress and her slippers!" sniffed Sally, "and I have a red dress and new shoes. This last time I thought was almost too much, and one large tear did manage to tumble over and drop right on her nose. Jerry pretended not to see it. Perhaps he was having trouble with his own eyes, though of course Jerry, big boy that he was, knew that tomorrow's Christmas and everything is spoiled because of whooping cough.

"Mother said we should have to have a party by ourselves and make believe that lots of people came to it," said Sally.

Jerry grunted. He didn't care much for that make-believe stuff—too dead fed. "Let's sit down in front of the open fire," suggested Sally, "and tell stories. I'm tired of looking out of the window. Perhaps something nice will happen; who can tell?"

So the two children settled themselves in front of the fire. They drew up two low stools and they each sat with their elbows on their knees and their chins in their hands. It was very warm and cozy. The logs crackled and sputtered as though they were doing their best to cheer other people up, and the dancing flames had a regular parade up and down the wood. It was into afternoon and growing a little dusky.

"I Call It a Shame!"

Suddenly Sally's pigtails stood out straight behind her in surprise.

"What's that?" she whispered, and her eyes were big as saucers.

"Where?" asked Jerry, a little startled too.

"I saw something white sit in at the door!"

"So did I."

The children looked cautiously around. Nothing was to be seen.

Just an ordinary room, a bright fire and two children in front of it.

"Jerry!" she mused flatly.

There was the faintest rustle by the clock on the mantel. It sounded like somebody talking together.

"There! I heard something again!" said Sally.

Both children stared at the clock, for that was where the sound came from.

It was quite dark by this time, except for the light from the logs, so it was natural that Jerry and Sally did not at first see the little person perched on the edge of the mantel.

"How do you do?" asked a tiny voice. It tinkled like a fairy sleigh-bell.

"Jerry!" exclaimed Sally.

Jerry just winked his eyes very fast. "Why I am up by the clock," tinkled the voice again.

And sure enough, there she was indeed! The children saw her now. A real, absolute bit of a thing about the size of a sweet pea. And she was the whitest creature you could imagine. Snowflake's ruffles with dripped trimming, icicle jewels in her hair, and eyes bright and frosty as stars.

"Merry!" gasped Sally.

Jerry just winked his eyes very fast. Sally wanted to jump up and hug her. But you can't do that with a Snow Fairy; she'd melt all to pieces in your fingers, and then where would you be?

"I've been awake to say you a little call," laughed the fairy, "because I like to talk with children who are ill and can't go out. I just came from a house down the street where a baby is getting a tooth. Such a cunning baby! And it will look and look at the chin, and you should have heard him Away They Went.

gurgle! He forgot all about that tooth that was making so much fuss about coming through. I left him kicking up his heels and crowing like a young rooster."

Sally and Jerry laughed.

"Shall I dance for you?" asked the Snow Fairy politely.

"Oh, yes!" beseeched the children.

Up jumped the white little person, and in the twinkling of an eye she had begun. The children never saw such dancing in their lives!

The Snow Fairy pirouetted on top of the clock; she whirled like a crystal prism. She jumped down and made a bow bow to a china shepherdess, and then the shepherdess threw away her crook and danced with the fairy. Away they went, whirling and bobbing and turning and dipping. They jumped over vases; they peeked out behind pictures, they fairly flew through the air until you could not tell which was the Snow Fairy and which the china shepherdess.

Jerry and Sally clapped their hands and laughed until they could laugh no longer. They forgot all about parties and new slippers and making snowmen.

Then the strangest thing happened. They could not see the Snow Fairy at all. She wasn't there, and if you'll believe me, the china shepherdess was standing stiffly in her old spot as though she'd never had a thought of moving in her life.

"Dear me!" said Sally rubbing her eyes.

"Dear me!" said Jerry, rubbing his. Mother came in soon after that. She stood smiling down upon them.

"Both you children were sound asleep on your stools when I was in here before. Do come and have something good to eat. I have a little party all ready for you."

And Sally and Jerry never said a word about the Snow Fairy. But they were as cheerful as cherubs the rest of the day.

THE SANDMAN STORY

CLEVER JUDGE OWL

MR. COON had lost a bright tin spoon, and it was not the first time that he had lost one. This time, however, he was not able, to get it back from Mr. Crow because he could not catch him using it.

"But I know Jimmy Crow has my spoon. There is no one else who would care enough about bright things to carry it off," said Mr. Coon.

"But you will have to prove it," said Mr. Fox, who was quite wise about such things. "Just because there are a few feathers in front of my house, and the farmer has lost a chicken, does not prove I took it, you know."

"No," faltered Mr. Coon with a smile. "I suppose it doesn't; but how am I to prove Jimmy is the thief, Mr. Fox? You are so clever—can't you think of some way to help me get my spoon back?"

"Suppose I arrest Jimmy on suspicion," said Mr. Fox; "and, to be fair about it, we will have one of Jimmy's tribe for the Judge. He cannot object to that, and everybody knows that Judge Owl is very clever and wise."

It Was No Use to Deny It.

"Very well. Yes arrest him," said Mr. Coon. "I know he has my bright tin spoon, and I hope he has kept it bright. I would not care a rap about it if it is not shiny."

Mr. Fox had to wait until he caught Mr. Crow on the ground, and one day, when he did, he crept up behind him and caught him by one leg. "I arrest you, Mr. Crow, for stealing Mr. Coon's bright tin spoon," he said.

"Prove it!" cawed Jimmy Crow. "How do you know I stole it?"

"We will be Judge Owl's guide that," answered Mr. Fox. "He is very wise, you know."

"He will have to prove I have the spoon, and he can't do that," said Mr. Crow. "He has got to catch me with it, and he can search me if he likes; he won't find it."

Judge Owl looked very solemn and wise as he sat on a low limb of a tree looking down on Mr. Crow and Mr. Coon as they sat on the ground. "We will hear what the prisoner has to say," he said.

Then many other wood folk came trooping to what the judge thought very sly as they turned on him as he began to speak. "I've got his tin spoon," said Jimmy Crow very boldly as Judge Owl began to search under every feather. "Judge, and you won't find it."

Judge Owl blinked his feathers as he spoke. He felt the animals began to wonder if, after all, Mr. Coon was not mistaken, for, of course, the spoon would have fallen if Jimmy had it hidden.

"Well, perhaps you did not take it," said Judge Owl. "I know one thing; the one who did found Mr. Coon's bright tin spoon hasn't any tail feathers; he has lost every last feather."

"They were all there this morning," said Mr. Crow, looking around at his tail before he thought what he was doing.

"You are the thief, just as I thought," said Judge Owl. "Go home and get that spoon or you will lose all your feathers."

It was no use to deny it now, Jimmy Crow knew that when he turned around and looked at himself and made that remark he had acknowledged his guilt, so off he flew, with a flock of Blackjays around him to make sure he did not run away.

"Wasn't Judge Owl clever to catch Jimmy the way he did?" asked Mr. Coon as he sat in the moonlight talking it over with Mr. Fox, and Mr. Fox, who admired a clever trick, allowed that Mr. Owl was a very clever old bird.
